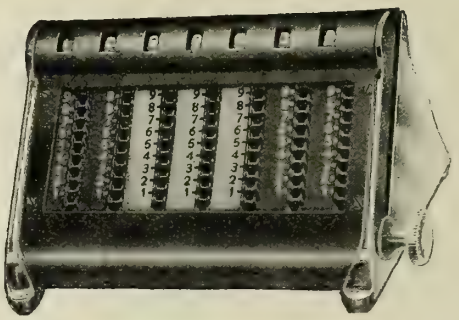
"RAISINS.—Business is at a standstill. Growers are still holding out for their prices, showing no weakening, notwithstanding the packers have not been actively in the field trying to buy. The seeded market is particularly firm with a fairly active demand; loose raisin market a trifle easier. Crop promises to be a good one. The demand promises to more than keep pace with the output.

"EVAPORATED APPLES. — There will be a considerably less quantity dried in the State than last season. On account of the high prices ruling on future Eastern evaporated apples, California .apples .will .undoubtedly bring good figures this season."

New York, Aug. 22.—There is a decided difference of opinion among packers of raisins as to whether the present prices on new crop seeded are warranted by conditions. A majority, in fact all but one or two, hold that they are, and most of them contend that not only does the supply and demand for October and November shipments justify the prices asked on those months, but the whole crop can be marketed at or close to those figures. A few do not go as far as that, resting content in the belief that as consumption equals the total seeding capacity for the early months, everything packed in them can be sold at full asking prices while the balance of the crop must take care of itself. One or two, however, take the view that the extreme quotations on early shipments are not warranted, because of the heavy competition of comparatively low priced foreign raisins in American markets and the practical closing of the export outlet this year for a similar reason.

Among the largest packers J. K. Armsby is considered a bear on the situation. In an interview recently he gave his views on the situation at length, citing recent history of the raisin business in support of his position. He said in part:

"Some years ago, when there was a large raisin crop in California and a large crop in Europe, and raisin association management was at the height of its power, these so-called 'Raisin Dictators' looked at the map of California and decided that all of the raisins in the world were raised within the radius of that map—and named their prices accordingly, forgetting that European countries had been a factor in the raisin business for several thousand years. That price was on the basis of 8c. for fancy seeded. We all know what the finsh was a large amount of raisins on hand January 1 that went for a low price during the months that followed. This year, with a larger crop in sight than when the 8-cent price was made on fancy seeded, with a larger crop in Europe, certain well known raisin operators ran the sweat-box market up to 6c. which meant 9½c for fancy seeded. There was no reason for this price, except that these operators were long.



"There is a crop in sight of all kinds and descriptions of California raisins of 4,000 cars. The seeding capacity of the State of California, if pushed to its utmost, up to January 1 is from 1,000 to 1,200 cars. The American demand is almost entirely seeded. When it comes to loose and other grades, they are used almost exclusively by manufacturers, and they don't care whether they use California raisins, European raisins or currants. The price tells the story. This year the price of foreign raisins and currants is far under the price of California raisins. The trade can draw their own conclusions of what will happen.

RAISINS.

A San Jose packer who returned recently from a trip around Santa Rosa and up thrhough Healdsburg, writes that he found prunes in those sections from 40 to 50 per cent of an average crop. "Prunes are now being harvested," he says, "and from my observation of the fruit on the trees I fear that many of the growers, as well as packers who have bought, will be disappointed in the yield. It looks to me as though the crop would be shorter than they are expecting on account of the fruit being on the south side of the trees and hanging on the tips of the limbs, there being no fruit in the center of the branches, while many of the branches on the north side have absolutely nothing on them. first picking there are very few prunes left on the trees. In fact, I do not believe that it will require more than two pickings in most of the orchards to harvest the crop this season, while in former years growers have usually picked the orchards over four to six times.

"I also canvassed the Napa Valley thoroughly and found conditions about the same as in Santa Rosa and Healdsburg. The quantity of prunes yet remaining in grower's hands is very small. In Santa Rosa and Healdsburg they do not estimate that there are more than 25 cars remaining in grower's hands for the entire district.

You will, therefore, see that from this section there will be very light offerings from this on. The information we get from Yuba City, Chico and Red Bluff is that the entire lot of prunes in that section has been bought up early from growers and at low prices. Packers have entirely sold out their holdings, as they had a good margin on their prunes, and did not hesitate to take advantage of it.

"The San Joaquin districts hase suffered a great deal from the heat and summer dropping. The estimates put forth by both growers and packers in these sections are that fully 25 per cent of the prunes have dropped. In other words, the crop will fall 25 per cent short, of the previous estimate. Coming back to Santa Clara Valley, we believe that fully 80 per cent of the new crop has been bought by packers, and with the exception of a few of the largest packers we do not believe that any one of them is carrying any surplus stock. In fact, we believe that most all of the small packers are sold up to their purchases, and as the growers who now own stock are very indifferent and holding firmly for a 5c. basis. the packers must be content for the present to allow future business to drift as it will. The way we account for the dullness in the market is that packers are so closely sold up on their the almond crop of that vicinity, which is now being gathered, promises to yield better on the whole than was expected.

WALNUTS.

T. L. Gooch, president of the Los Nietos and Ranchito Walnut Grower's Exchange, is quoted as saying: "Present appearances indicate that practically all the diseased walnuts have dropped. If the nuts left develop no disease and stick to the tree through August and September the crop may be fully as good as last year. The price undoubtedly will be higher."

CANNED GOODS.

California Canneries Co., report under date of Aug. 26.:

We have nothing vrey much to offer in connection with our lines excepting that everything in the line is extremely short, and we look for a complete cleanup of everything in the Canned Fruit line. Tomatoes will also rule very high.

In an extended review of market and crop conditions on the coast, the Griffin & Skelly & Co., say: "During the past two weeks we have had what seemed to be quite seasonable weahter, but it was evidently a little too warm, particularly for peaches, as all varieties seem to have ripened at the same time. This results in the growers being unable to pick them just when they should, and in the canners being wholly unable to take care of fruit as rapidly as it comes in. Many of the canners have already put some fruit into cold storage in the hope that it will hold until they can get to it. While this is nothing that is particularly new, it is a condition that is avoided as far as possible because the fruit does not turn out as satisfactorily so far as grades are concerned, as it would could it go right into the cans.

"From what we can understand we conclude that every canner in the State has withdrawn from the market. We did this some little time ago. It may be possible that we shall have something to offer when our pack is complete, but we will not take on any more business until that time, when we will know just what we are going to be able to furnish. The pack is evidently going to be very short of what was expected. Had weather conditions been more favorable and everything ripened in its turn the canners would have been able to put up far more goods.

TOMATOES.

Aberdeen, Md. Aug. 20.—Strasbaugh Silver & Co., report:

The outlook for Future Tomatoes cannot be considered as encouraging as a week ago, as heavy rains have been experienced: also, thunder showers followed by sunshine which encourages blight and reports of dying vines come from some sections, although not to any great extent, and yet there is always a possible danger, at this season of the year, of this disease affecting the plants and causing considerable havoc; and this condition connected with extremely cool nights and conditions not altogether normal for this season of the year compels us to confirm our previous warnings that the Tomato crop of 1907 is not all counted so early: it is always easy to conjecture, but to prophecy rightly is beyond the powers of all. To state conditions as they truly exist, is our aim and whatever surprises the future may have in store, will be given consideration as they come to pass.

CORN.

The sugar corn crop in Indiana is very uneven on account of many fields having been planted three times in order to secure a stand. The yield per acre in the estimation of some authorities cannot possibly be as much as for either 1905 or 1906.

"We are quoting Beans according to quality and variety as follows:

Large Whites	$2.40 to 2.80
Small Whites	2.75 to 3.25
Limas	5.20 to 5.35
Blackeyes	4.75 to 5.00
Pinks	2.65 to 2.90
Bayos	3.10 to 3.30
Large Garbanzos	4.75
Medium Size	4.35
Small Size	4.20
Mexican Reds	2.75 to 3.25
Red Kidneys	3.50 to 3.75
Italian Kidneys	3.25 to 3.75
Cranberry Beans	3.75 to 4.00
Fancy German Lentils	8.50

"Referring to the Bean market, will say on account of the large acerage that was flooded on the Islands this year, we do not expect more than one third of a crop of, we might say, all varieties, with the exception of Limas, Blackeyes and Small Whites. We might say we look for lower prices on Limas and Blackeyes and a steady market on Small Whites, but we look for a firm market on all other varieties"

Adolf Koshland reports under date of Aug. 26.:

"Much more activity is to be noted in the market.

"Inquiries are beginning to come in greater number from different sections of the country for all kinds of California beans.

"At this time of the year this movement frequently assumes large proportions and forces prices to advance particularly for such varieties as are only in short supply, and as are likely to become exhausted before the new crop comes to market.

"I note a particularly good demand for Large White, or Lady Washington beans, and a very steady movement for Small White and Pink beans.

"Higher prices should be looked for on Lady Washington, Pink, and Bayo beans.

"Prices for Small White beans will probably hold steady.

"Lima beans continue at about the same figure, and while the new crop of Lima beans will probably come to market for a somewhat lower figure, no one should look for very low prices.

"I believe it is advisable for retailers and all who handle beans, to keep their stocks well up to the limit, because most of the varieties raised in California this year will probably yield a short crop.

Stockton.—The bean crops throughout this county are reported to be in a most flourishing condition. The acreage as compared with that of last season is much smaller, but the yield generally is expected to be large. In a few sections a pest bug has made its appearance and is causing some damage. Samples of blackeye beans have been received from French Camp of choice quality and indicative of good returns from that section. One farm of 50 acres in that locality will yield an early crop, which it is estimated will average about 20 sacks to the acre.

HERRING, SARDINES, Etc.

New York, Aug. 23.—Strohmeyer & Arpe Co., report:

Our Mr. Porges, who has charge of our department of food products, has just returned from an extended trip to Europe, and we shall now take up again our regular reports to you.

HERRINGS.—The first shipments of New Holland Herrings are now coming in, quality is quite satisfactory, but demand still rather limited, owing to the hot weather.

SCOTCH HERRINGS.—Although catch is unusually large, prices continue very high as demand is exceptionally large. Quality very fine this season.

NORWAY HERRINGS.—The first offers have now come to hand from Norway. It is too early to import the same, as goods will arrive here spoiled in this hot weather.

SARDINES.—Catch in France is a total failure, absolutely nothing to be had.

Catch in Portugal.—There is none and Portuguese Sardines are as scarce as gold.

SPRATS.—Fishing is long over. Stocks in Europe are very small and stocks here are so small that the first good demand will surely absorb them. Prices are therefore sure to go higher.

In Norway fishing has been rather poor and owing to the high prices for olive oil, tin and all other raw materials, Smoked Sardines are likely to go higher this season.

OLIVE OIL.—Is scarce and high in primary markets and the prices at which Olive Oil is being sold here are really below import cost.

SALMON.

New York, Aug. 22.—Salmon continues to hold first place in the interest of the trade. With a large shortage on the Columbia River and the certainty of an extremely small output on Puget Sound, the possibilities presented by reports as to the Alaska outlook assume increasingly important proportions. The question of what the opening price on red Alaska fish will be is the subject of much discussion, and the trade seems to be prepared for a figure considerably above the average. J. K. Armsby, president of the J. K. Armsby Co., who are the sales agents of the Alaska Packer's Association in the United States, discussed this point and the salmon situation generally in an interview yesterday. He said:

"Conditions from the supply and demand standpoint warrant $1.25 f. o. b. coast for red Alaska salmon 1907 pack. At the time the $1.30 price was named, some years ago, conditions warranted this figure from the standpoint of supply and demand of red fish, but at that time there was something over 1,000,000 cases of surplus of pink, chums, medium red, king, dogs and cats and a few other things, owing to the fact that red fish was in the 20c. per can retail class and the trade switched to other grades. They ate the 1,000,000 cases of surplus salmon, but they did not eat the red until some time later, when the price was reduced, The 85c price on red that followed introduced red Alaska salmon into many markets where heretofore it had not sold. There has been a gradual increase in the consumption of salmon from that day to this until it has reached an abnormally high figure something over 1.000,000 cases greater than the present 1907 pack.

"This year there is no surplus of outside grades, either from 1906 pack or the 1907 pack. On the contrary, the 1906 pack is cleaned up to a can and the 1907 pack of intermediate grades is considerably over-sold and short deliveries, generally speaking will rule all along the line. Certain packers, not realizing that present conditions might not take place, sold red, 1907, pack, at $1.05. Most of these packers have put up less than one-half their future sales; consequently will make short deliveries. The buyers who have sold futures based on the $1.05 price will have to deliver in full and pay a considerable advance, so they are worse off from a profit standpoint than if they had not purchased at $1.05.

"It looks as though the Columbia River was going the way of the Sacramento and that the Puget Sound was following suit. It is a well known fact that salmon leave as civilization approaches. This year southeastern Alaska and the Behring Sea and Central Alaska all are woefully short of packer's expectations, and from present indications 15-cent salmon will be a beautiful memory, something to talk about as having happened once but will not happen again. The bulk of the larger packers are waiting until the final returns are in before naming prices. We think that many of the jobbers who do not take advantage of the present spot offerings for red, namely, $1.22½ for New York, will have cause to regret it. We think that $1.22½ will look cheap to the boys before many moons have passed, and it is needless to state that the 1907 pack of red salmon will all go into consumption at extraordinarily high prices.

"The Columbia River will make short deliveries—very short. Sockeye packers will make almost no delivery, so that the consumption of salmon for the season of 1907 will centre back against the red Alaska supply, which, it is needless to state, is very limited.

"I have just received a letter from our San Francisco office, which gives some interesting information touching on costs of packing, which always enters largely into the considerations upon which selling prices are based. You know that it costs the Alaska packers just as much to make a small pack as a large one, for there are always certain fixed charges and expenses, which remain the same, no matter what the size of the pack may be. The letter I refer to says: 'If a nominal pack had been made this season the cost of canning salmon compared with last year would be increased 50c. per case. The tremendous shortage, however, increases the cost in every way. For instance, in the Behring Sea, where one packer out fitted for 48,000 cases and packed 16,000, he guaranteed his Chinamen for the 48,000 cases 60c per case, and these Chinese contracts have to be paid, regardless of whether the quantity guarantted was packed or not. If the full 48,000 cases had been packed the cost of the Chinese labor in connection with the packing would have been 60c per case, but as only one-third of that quantity was packed, the cost of the Chinese labor per case was multiplied by three, or $1.80. Every other item in connection with the cost, with the exception of the cans, labels and cases, was increased in the same ratio. The white labor is paid by the month, the cost of feeding them and their living is the same, the cost of the ship charters the same, and all the fixed expenses are the same, regardless of quantity packed: so you can readily see that if the cost was $3.75 per case, providing a full pack was made, it would cost nearly three times that amount where a third of a pack was made, and nearly twice that amount where half a pack was made.'

"As to sales of future red Alaska salmon subject to approval of price when made we have been receiving orders for such liberal quantities from all parts of the United States," said Mr. Armsby, "that to-day almost our entire allotment for the season has been booked."

HAY.

Somers & Co. report under date of Aug. 27:

"Arrivals of hay for the week just ended have been exceedingly heavy, the total showing 5.130 tons in comparison with 4,680 for last week. In spite of the general cry that cars are not plentiful we find that rail arrivals have been rather heavy, although water shipments, too, have been arriving quite freely. The cry for cars is evidence of the fact that large quantities of hay are accumulating at railroad points where there are no storage facilities, and as the season is growing late many producers are somewhat apprehensive as to the possibility of their marketing their holdings before same are destroyed by the Fall rains. The warehouse districts have been quietly storing up their local crops and little has been heard from them. Hollister and Livermore, which are our two great hay centers, have figured very lightly in this market thus far, although the bulk of the hay in both of these districts has changed hands.

The market here has been maintained very well considering the free arrivals, for although concessions have been made on some days to effect sales, yet the general average of prices is about as it has been for a month past. Just at the moment, owing to Monday's accumulation a decided weakness is felt, although a day or two of lighter shipments will soon regulate matters again.

"The outlook is featureless in every way, for everything from now on will depend upon the weather. As long as conditions are favorably hay will be rushed here as fast as transportation can be secured for it. After the first heavy rain a marked advance in prices can be expected, for all shipments must then come from the warehouses and will carry storage and insurance charges.

We give the present market range as follows:

Choice Wheat Hay....	$18.00	to	$20.00
Good Wheat Hay	16.00	to	17 50

A CONFIDENTIAL TALK WITH THE GROCER.

A little more than a year ago we began operations in San Francisco, and in response to the request of the California State Retail Grocers' Association, fixed the retail prices at which our family flour should be sold by the retailer (allowing him a reasonable profit for handling) some people were skeptical about the success of our plan and said it WOULD NOT WORK. Time has shown their error. IT HAS WORKED ADMIRABLY. So well, in fact, that others have adopted it, of which we are glad for two reasons. A meeting of the board of directors of the Academy of Sciences will be called in about two weeks for the purpose of deciding on the construction of the proposed new building of the Academy on Market St. between the Emoprium and Pacific buildings. Money continues in limited supply, although the banks show no disposition to increase their volume of loans for the present. The failure of a small institution in Oregon affects local conditions by emphasizing the determination of moneyed men to curtail loans and place their available resources on as impregnable a basis as possible. Foreign money is slowly being attracted this way and in larger amounts, but the loans effected are mostly on business sites upon terms that are very stringent. If money was easier and loans could be made on dwellings and residence property, sales would be greatly stimulated, but on the whole the general improvement in real estate is unquestionable.

Early in July, the L. D. McLean Company, importers and grocers, opened an elegant store on Sutter street, near Polk. Though at present mostly retail, the company expects to do business in a wholesale way in several departments. In connection with the store is a ladies' tea-room, where customers are served with tea or coffee of the various varieties carried in stock. The best grades of all the regular varieties are carried. In the coffee department an assortment of the choicest brands is carried. The manager of the tea and coffee departments, N. R. Arter, formerly of Goldberg, Bowen & Co., and now second vice-president of the L. D. McLean Company, says that it will not be their policy to put forward their individual brands to the exclusion of others, as his experience has shown that trade comes more easily to those who carry a large assortment of lines.

CASH VS CREDIT.

Bitter Experiences of Minnesota Merchant Vividly Portrayed by Himself

When you ask me to write something about the cash system for the fall edition of the Trade Journal, you have touched the tenderest cord in my heart, and if I can do anything to relieve the broken nights' rest and the anguished mind of my fellow merchant, command me that I may obey.

For thirty long years I fed "dead beats" and tramps at the expense and comfort of my family, saying nothing of my distressed mind, whose only thought and ambition was to leave an honored name.

Bankrupt as a Result of Credit Business.

The panic of '93 found me with a debt of over ten thousand dollars, with a stock of $5,000, and notes and accounts galore, which my creditors took no stock in. I had some real estate, encumbered. My very homestead was mortgaged. Creditors wanted to receipt for me at 40 cents on the dollar. I informed them that I would pay 100 cents on the dollar with 8 per cent interest or die in the attempt. I asked them for three, six, nine and twelve months' time, they appointing one of themselves as trustee in the person of a very worthy gentleman, L. W. French, of St. Paul.

Installed the Cash System.

I started then and there to sell for cash and collect what I could. An old friend of mine, hearing of my distress, told me that he had $2,000 in the bank, and that I could have the loan of it on my private note. I told him that the offer came too late to do me any good, but that if he paid me the book account, which he had owed two years, it woud help me.

He got afraid of the banks and withdrew his money, and he afterwards told me that he never felt it slipping through his fingers, saying: "I owed $300 to one, and $200 to another, and so on."

Now this honest granger had the money of those unfortune merchants in bank, while they spent many restless nights, thinking how to meet their notes.

Paid All Debts With Interest.

Well, we paid all debts with interest, and, figuratively speaking, we did not know we owed it. We then saw the beauty of the cash system, and have continued it ever since.

The cash system, as compared with credit, is like unto the difference which the preacher places between heaven and hell; but, if the merchant who has sold on credit a life time ever goes to hell, he will believe it heaven, in comparison to what he has suffered on earth under the credit system.

While we sold on credit, we seldom or ever discounted a bill, but borrowed in one direction to pay in another, giving the most of our time to devising means to pay our past due notes. Now we discount every dollar, and have nothing to disturb our mind. All our time is given to our business. We enclose you an invoice, showing that we get 10 per cent discount if paid on receipt of goods, and we bought those goods 10 per cent cheaper than if we were in the habit of buying on long credit.

Small Cash Discounts Pay 18 Per Cent.

The smallest discount a merchant gets is on sugar, which is 1 per cent ten days. In other words, 1 per cent for the use of money for twenty days. Well, as there are eighteen times twenty days in a year, that will make 18 per cent per annum, and it is not an uncommon thing to get 2, 4, 5 and 6 per cent. Now, where is the business that pays those big interests? And is it any wonder that commercial agencies say that only 3 per cent succeed?

Now, is it not better for the retailers to do as the jobbers do—borrow the money if they are short—doing business beyond their captial? And no man ought to be able to borrow money cheaper than a man who sells entirely for cash, as there are no chances whatsoever taken in trusting him. There are some chances taken in trusting a bank or a jobber, as both take chances—the jobber in trusting the merchant and the banker in trusting the farmer. And, by the way, the latter is the best merchant on earth. If he has anything to sell, he wants the cash for it or its equivalent in trade, and if he wants to buy anything he wants it chalked down on the ledger of eternity.—M. P. MORAN in St. Paul Trade Journal.

COUNTRY STORE ACCOUNTING.

By C. I. BERG.

Of Berg & Reishus, Rushford, Minn.

The keeping of books in a country store is usually done by the proprietor himself, or else by the cashier. If by the former, it is done by a system all his own. His one idea is to shorten his work and still be accurate as to results.

On the other hand, if the work is done by the cashier, it is usually done according to the rules and regulations of the nearest business college. Both are for the same purpose, to determine the exact nature of the merchants progress from day to day or from month to month. In our own particular case, we do our own bookkeeping. Our business is not large enough to employ a bookkeeper and cashier, and consequently we have to do it ourselves.

Duplicate Sales Books.

In the first place, we have duplicate sales or counter books, and let me add that a merchant that does not use duplicate sales books is certainly piling up a heap of trouble for himself. In every sale made the salesman gives the original slip to the customer and deposits the duplicate in our cash register.

We should not try to keep store with out a cash register. In one instance, we had an argument with a customer to whom we had sent a statement for a sack of flour, and when he disputed it we had the satisfaction of showing him the duplicate of his bill, signed by the clerk who sold him the flour; also showed, by the printed detail strip, that no cash sale was made on the day he bought the flour for the amount of his bill. He paid his account without another word.

Sales Filed Away.

Regarding the sales slips, we date all slips, especially charge, received on account and paid out slips, together with the printed detail strip; file them away in a box; these in turn are dated and kept in a small packing case in our store room and have proven indispensable in settling disputes in accounts. We keep a daily record of sales, both charge and cash sales, in a book for that purpose so arranged that each day's sales can be daily compared, without any necessity of looking over half a dozen other books, to determine how the daily sales compare.

Loose Leaf Ledgers.

Before we went on a cash basis, we used to do a good deal of credit business, and at first we kept our accounts in the old style double entry ledger. This ledger was soon filled up and in looking about for something better, we investigated numerous system, cards, clip and loose leaf, and finally decided on a duplicating loose leaf ledger. This system gave us excellent satisfaction and we were well pleased with it in every respect.

The items, as purchased from time to time, were entered on the right hand side of the ledger, and using a carbon paper, it furnished us with a duplicate.

Statement for Customers.

At the end of the month, or when a customer wanted a statement of his account or when the page was filled we would add up both debit and credit columns, transfer the figures to the left side of the ledger; tear out the original page to hand to the customer, file the duplicate in our transfer case, insert a new leaf and we were ready to begin again. No chance of a dispute; no need of making an itemized statement; everything posted to the minute.

That's about all there is to our bookkeeping. We kept a small loose leaf ledger for small individual accounts, as there are always little accounts of short time standing that one don't care to post in any ledger.

For Wholesale Accounts.

For our wholesale accounts, we keep a wholesale register that fills the bill as near as any we could find. This register also acts as our journal, a part of the book being a daily record of merchandise received.

At the end of the month we merely get the total of goods received and transfer this sum to the debit side of the merchandise account. The sales book mentioned before acts in the same way, the sum of the credit and cash sales of each week or month being transferred to the credit side of merchandise account.

As Few Figures as Possible.

In short, we condensed all we could and made as few figures as possible; it saves our time and brings the same result as if we kept a day book, a journal, cash book, wholesale ledger and journal.

That's how we kept books when we sold for credit. Naturally, doing away with credit accounts has lessened our work considerably, but we maintain the same system as regards our wholesale accounts.

I have not yet seen or heard of a system by which a person can tell, day for day, whether or not be is making any money. We keep hoping we are, and look for inventory time to tell us just what we have accomplished.

This is the sum and substance of our store accounting or bookkeeping. We don't pretend to think that is is ideal, but is saves time, we always have our business at our finger ends, it saves a good many disputes and that is all a more elaborate system could do.

Sacramento.—Plans for the formation of a creamery company, which will control the dairy output of Northern California, have been made, and with Chico as the headquarters the new organization will control the product of several thousand cows. Creameries in Marysville, Chico and Siskiyou county points have been secured and cattle are being shipped to these in trainload lots from various parts of the State. About 1000 head of dairy stock from Stanislaus County passed through this city within the last few days en route to the farms of the new corporation.

Stockton.—From now on it is expected that the local potato market will be much more active than it has been in the recent part. The early crop of Eastern potatoes is now about exhausted and much more of a demand is being made on local growers for new supplies. At the present prices, which range from $1.40 to $1.60 potatoes are moving much more freely and the market generally has a most promising outlook.

GHIRARDELLI ON PROFITS.

Some Reasons Why Protected Prices Benefit the Retail Trade.

(Written Expressly for the Advocate by D. Ghirardelli.)

The manufacturer who has spent thousands of dollars in popularizing his goods realizes more than anyone else the necessity of having the trade secure a fair margin of profit for handling the same. It rests with the grocer to double the value of advertising to the consumer or to practically render it useless.

When the grocer gets a good profit on some article of recognized merit, such as Ghirardelli's chocolates and cocoas, he will keep it in a prominent place. Thus the house wife will be reminded of our attractive advertisement when she sees it and will ask for a package. The same grocer, when the house wife asks for a package of chocolate will hand over the Ghirardelli article, if it pays him fairly, and his hearty recommendation of it will remind the customer of what she has seen in the advertisements and will make her doubly willing to take the goods so recommended to her, and also preposses her in its favor.

Grocers Can Kill Advertising.

On the other hand, if the grocer does not get a fair margin for handling our goods, he will keep them out of sight so that customers will not be reminded of them and when they ask for Ghirardelli's goods, he would very likely advise the housewife to take instead some other article which he would recommend as just as good without regard to what its real quality would be because he would feel that he would be foolish to assist in the sale of an article which he was not properly paid for selling.

It was because we realized these facts that we were glad to fix and agree to maintain a fair retail price on our product when we realized that the grocers desired us to do this.

We would not consider it wise for a manufacturer to try to maintain a retail selling price on his goods in the face of any serious opposition on the part of the grocery trade. We felt that by so doing we would antagonize certain important factors in the distribution of our product, notably, department stores and advertising cut rate stores. If there was no corresponding enthusiasm on the part of the rest of the trade to offset the loss thus incurred, the manufacturer would find that he had gained no special advantage and at the same time he would be losing much business by antagonizing concerns that otherwise would handle his goods in large quantities.

Grocers Appreciate Assured Profits.

As a matter of fact, the question of maintaining a retail selling price on goods has in the past been seriously opposed by a certain class of retail dealers. Our experience in the maintenance of prices has shown that this class has been almost eliminated. Grocers now realize that it is for their advantage that a retail selling price is maintained and that the manufacturer who maintains these prices does so at a very considerable expense of of time, money and thought which is expended almost entirely for the welfare os his customers. The manufacturer's advantage I have outlined above.

To the advantage of having the dealer a satisfied distributor of his goods, is added the advantage of the additional prosperity which makes the dealer more likely to be in a position to pay his bills when Collection Day comes around.

Fixed Prices Welcomed.

When the matter of maintaining prices on goods was first broached to me I did not deem that it was practical, because I felt that any such action on my part would arouse opposition among some of the men whom it was intended to most advantage. The prompt and decided action of the State Grocers Association in bringing to my attention letters from numerous cities of California in which the retail grocers voiced their desire to have the price of our goods protected, together with the affective arguments of their Secretary Mr. Frank B. Connolly and his assistant Mr. Powers, converted me to the belief that the trade was right in desiring protection in this regard. I have therefore fixed a retail selling price on our chocolates and have found that my action was not only approved by the trade, but came as a distinct relief in many quarters since numerous merchants who have been selling at cut prices were glad to adjust their price as soon as they learned that none of their competitors could sell for less.

Cutters Co-operate Gladly.

I am pleased to inform you that it has very seldom been necessary for me to enforce our rule in regard to prices since they were established. In every instance where I have approched the offenders, I have secured courteous attention and a promise that the offense should not be repeated.

I wish to assure the grocers of California that I appreciate the hearty co-operation which they have given to the distribution of the Ghirardelli product in the past and that they can be sure that anything that will be necessary to insure a fair margin of profit on our goods will be done. Very truly yours,

D. GHIRARDELLI.

Portland Cereal Millers Write Secretary Connolly Words of Cheer.

When sending "copy" for their full page advertisement appearing in this issue, the Albers Bros. Milling Co. Portland said to Secretary Frank B. Connolly:

"We wish to commend you on the efforts you are making towards bringing all the Retailers in your State into the Association. In our long experience we have found that wherever the Retailers are well organized in an Association, such as yours, that price cutting is practically done away with, and the Retailers are enabled to make a great deal better profit. The old adage, "In unity there is strength" is applicable to the Grocers' Association; in their unity there is also greater profits.

MONTANA GROCERY SITUATION.

Prominent Grocer of Butte Details Conditions Surrounding Business in That Section.

By S. L. TRIPP.
Secretary and Treasurer, Tripp & Dragstedt Co., Butte, Mont.

Our style of handling the business is perhaps peculiar to this part of the country.

On or just before the first of the month families generally purchase all the staple groceries which they will require for the entire month, perishable goods being the only ones bought from day to day. This is a custom which is prevalent in mining camps, and no matter how metropolitan the camp becomes in time, the old custom obtains. It has its good points as well as its drawbacks. The rush of business for a week is nice to look at, but if trade is to lag for the remainder of the month the result is no better in the long run than an even business, of the minimum average sales.

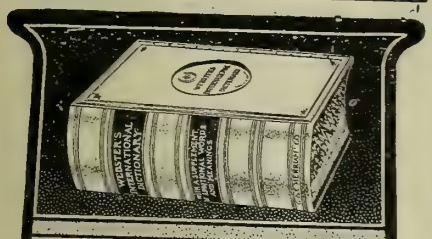
Solicitors Cover Routes.

Over half of our business is secured by solicitors who travel regular routes, calling on an average of three times a week on customers who live at distances varying from four blocks to three miles from the store, which is almost in the center of the district. The remainder of the trade is either tributary or passing patronage which is attracted by displays of a particular item of which they are in need, such as a brand of flour.

Cash sales will average thirty per cent of the total in Summer and twenty-five per cent in Winter, owing to fresh fruit and vegetables display. This leaves the tributary or local credit trade only twenty-five per cent of the total. Goods ordered on the routes in the morning are delivered the same day and those ordered in the afternoon are delivered on the following morning, thus giving the order department almost continous work, as there are orders to work on as soon as the store is opened in the morning.

Fifty Employing Grocers.

Butte, with almost a hundred thousand population, has about fifty employing grocers. Two stores do forty per cent of the business, eight more have another forty per cent and the remaining stores exist mostly through class or social influence—not from any competitive ability. There are few grocers in Butte making more than interest on their investment—one hand will cover the large ones that are The reasons for this are easily located competition, excessive expense and many poor credits. The first and last faults could be remedied by co-operations, but the Butte merchant has never had a drouth or the cataloug grasshopper to eat up his business, so these conditions will have to prevail for the time being. Margins are smaller than in your cities and were it not for the bulk of the business done. existence would be out of the question.



Market Fluctuations.

The market fluctuations of staples are not followed very closely by the retailer here. As an example, full pounds of seeded raisins, fancy, have retailed for 12½ cents right along, with special sales by some of the cutters at 11 cents. The recent advance in flour was not covered for over a month, just because a few stores had heavy stocks on hand and wanted to make capital out of the price. The larger stores buy heavily of futures, and as there has been nothing but an advancing market in the last year or two the practice of not following up advances promptly has affected only the hand-to-mouth buyer, whose average lot is no better here than elsewhere.

One word about help. The city, as readers probably know, is unionized from top to bottom, and no clerk can work unless he is a member in good standing of the Union. The raise of the minimum weekly wage for men clerks from $18.50 to $21.00, which is to be demanded soon and will without doubt be accepted by the employers, will result in the weeding out of all men who cannot earn their salaries and something for their employers. The standard of efficiency has been high, but it will go higher, as under the present conditions it takes a good man behind any counter to show $20.00 in profits at the end of the week.

In this short article we have tried to touch on a few of the peculiarities of the trade in Butte. If one were proficient and cared to go into the minute details, he could find material for a book.

Monterey.—The Sacramento River Packers' Association has closed down its packing house on the steamship wharf for the season as the salmon run is about over and the crew has returned to Black Diamond to take charge of the salmon run at that place, which will soon be on. The packing house has not done as much business here as in former seasons as the salmon run has not been so good this year. The Monterey Packing Co.'s establishment at New Monterey is still doing business.

IMPORTANCE OF STORE SIGNS.

Some Pointers About This Frequently Neglected Feature of Advertising.

By J. H. Mitchell, St. Paul.

Store signs are advertising. Let us get that point firmly in our minds at the start. Advertising can be good, bad and indifferent. The same is true of store signs.

Advertising is not expense. It is investment made with the purpose of bringing more returns. That is the way investment in store signs is being considered by progressive merchants right now. Everywhere there is a great awakening among merchants in every branch of trade to the fact that the store sign and the store front can, if presenting the right appearance, be made to pull business to the store.—

Merchants versed in present day methods are using every known legitimate means to attract buyers to their stores from a distance. Newspaper advertising, circulars, and other printed matter are sent to the uttermost sections of the trade territory of every live town to attract people to the store.

Market days are used to good advantage in getting people to leave the farms for a day and come in and look over the merchant's stock.

To Atract Visitors.

But when they arrive in town and are walking its streets what is the merchant doing to attract them to his particular store? He spends money to get them to the town, and that money is well invested. But is he doing anything with his store exterior which will attract into his store those many people who are likely to go by it into the store of a competitor unless the store front issues the right kind of an invitation.

People are visiting every town every year who do not know where any particular store is located. This includes new arrivals come to remain permanently and a procession of transient visitors. Store signs properly made and placed should attract attention from a distance in any direction.

There are trade making possibilities in the store sign enough to pay the best kind of returns on the investment. In no other part of the business can money be invested to as good advantage proportionately.

The store exterior is one of the best advertising mediums at the command of the merchant, and this medium has been used only in very small part when the store windows have been dressed to good advantage. Many people see them, but more will see the store signs year in and year out than see the windows. What kind of an impression do the store signs make on the public?

The Old Idea.

The old idea of the store sign is the same old idea that ruled regarding all kinds of store advertising until present day methods burst forth upon the merchant.

Under old methods the merchant carried his name in newspaper space simply to support the paper. As to what kind of an impression his newspaper advertisement made upon the people who saw it he never gave a thought.

But one day the merchant awoke. He realized that his newspaper ad and other printer's ink advertising used by him could be put to better use.

And for the same reason when progressive merchants right now consider the store sign question they consider it solely from the standpoint of making an impression upon the public that will be pleasing and that will make trade. They want signs that will make the people remember their stores. Signs that will do that are a good investment. They bring profitable returns.

The old way in buying a store sign was to buy the same kind of a sign that every other concern in town used. Uniformity and monotony ruled, not individuality so necessary to all affective work in and around the store.

Cost Is Reasonable.

Another thing, many merchants have thought about the advertising possibilities in good store signs but not being in close touch with institutions with good sign making facilities they have labored under the idea that the cost would be prohibitive. Gradually many of these are learning that the cost is reasonable and they also have the experience of other merchants to reinforce their ideas about the trade pulling value of the good sign.

Take the electric sign, for instance. There are many towns throughout the Northwest which use electricity for lighting purposes. Merchants from those towns will visit the Twin Cities and see the advertising value of the electric sign demonstrated to their utmost satisfaction. They remember best those houses which use the electric sign.

And as merchants investigate the matter thoroughly the use of electric signs in the smaller towns and cities grows rapidly. The results are very satisfying. Of course the increasing use of electricity for lighting has a great deal to do with this rapid advance of the electric sign but the fact that merchants are giving much thought to this matter is also an important element.

The First Electric Sign.

Almost anyone can imagine just what the people of a community say when the first electric sign is installed in a town. It is a new thing and it never loses its newness. Every night it flashes its story to people who talk about it wherever they go. By and by if another store gets an electric sign of different pattern, it also tells a story of individuality and enterprise. And the people in that section of the country remember and talk about the town whose stores have electric signs.

But the signs which talk in the day time are just as important. Whether they be on the front, the side, the rear, or on all sides of the store they ought to be attractive. They ought to stick out at the passerby and in their own way say, "Come here. You can see by my own appearance that this is a store of enterprise and good values."

Signs that do that make money for the merchant every day. In equipping his store with trade pulling signs the merchant needs expert advice just as he needs it in arranging his other advertising.

Usually the merchant was content with a sign painted on old style lines and judged more on cheapness in cost than on its attractiveness and trade making possibilities. The local painter or the traveling painter who lettered the sign did the best he knew how, but as his business was not sign making his ideas were few and each merchant found that he had about the same kind of a sign as his neighbor. It takes an artist and advertising expert combined to make signs adapted to the needs of each store.

CRACKER COMBINE PLANS.

Will Comprise a Hundred Plants And Employ 8,000.

New York, Aug 8.—The big cracker bakery combine, which will be known as the General Biscuit Co., and which will comprise not less than a hundred of the leading independent cracker bakeries of the country, has been definitely formed in this city and its temporary officers chosen. The formation, however, is as yet only temporary, and those most deeply concerned decline to give out any very definite information till the combination of plants has been more generally perfected.

The president is said to be a well known Western financier not at present interested in bakeries, but possessing large financial backing and unquestioned ability. The chairman of the executive committee is a New York banker, commanding large resources and having a reputation for executive ability and organization. The remainder of the board comprises practical bakers and financiers in about equal ratio. The corporation papers have already been drawn up and will be filed in a few days. The capital stock to be authorized will be $30,000,000, but for the present it will be issued only in sufficient amounts to absorb the plants desired.

The management at present in control proposes to take in only such plants as it deems best suited to its purposes and obtainable at what it deems reasonable capitalization. About 25 have already signed the papers to sell to the new concern, and a committee of appraisers and auditors is at present examining the contemplated properties, with a view to arriving at a basis of taking over. Other properties will be absorbed as fast as the new company and the present owners reach mutual agreements. It is not the intention of the new management to do away with the management or local business affairs of the several companies, but to leave things largely as they are at present and confine operations to the securing of economies, which are now lost by competitive operations along parallel lines. It is understood that bread baking, as well as crackers, will form a large part of the new company's business.

The new company, it appears, is the direct outgrowth of the Biscuit and Crocker Manufacturers' Company, which is the buying corporation owned by stockholders representing practically all the independent bakeries of the country. This company is the direct outgrowth of an association formed by H. B. Grubbs, of St. Louis, about five years ago for mutual buying of bakers' supplies. It succeeded so well that the association was incorporated into a stock company about two years ago, and Mr. Grubbs came to New York as its manager. Mr. Grubbs was asked about the new combination yesterday.

"Yes," he replied, "I know something about it, but I am not at liberty to discuss it or to give out any facts. The new company is the development of our association and not at all the work of any professional promoter. It started itself because our members found there were such advantages in association. You could no more have stopped it than you could stop the wind blowing. The idea evolved naturally and finally took form. I expect that by the time our committee has completed its work we will represent 100 bakeries, whose annual output is not far from $25,000,000 and who employ 8,000 hands. At present the formation is moving slowly and on strictly business lines. There will be no water in this corporation, but every dollar will represent real value, capable of carrying itself as a profitable investment. One thing I will say, however, to correct a misapprehension, and that is that the new company does not interfere with our purchasing company, which will continue as ever buying for the same plants whether they be owned by their several old proprietors or by the new corporation."

Marysville.—Experiments are being conducted by the Diamond Match Co. at Barber for the production of paper from wood fibre produced in the Stirling City experimental plant. Experts in the business have the experiments in charge, and much interest is felt in the outcome of these, as they may forecast the installation of a new industry in this city. The experiments are not being conducted to secure the production of a crude paper, but of a bond and the finer quality of papers. The results obtained so far are satisfactory to those in charge, but will be referred to Eastern experts, who will report to the directors of the company. With the directors and the report of the experts will rest the decision as to whether a plant for the manufacture of paper will be established here.

Remember that no matter what line you are in you owe a great deal to the trade paper, and treat it accordingly. If readers but knew of the expense, work time, and effort that it costs to produce the smallest trade paper in existence, they would marvel. If they realized what trade papers have done for them there would not be a single man in any line who did not subscribe for every one printed that catered to the interests of the lines in which he is engaged. It is a fact not generally appreciated that a trade journal benefits many members of the industry to which it is devoted who never read it, and many concerns obtain business from items printed in its news columns who never advertise in it. Both classes could derive much larger benefits if they would only read it and advertise in it.—"General Merchant's Review."

Clerk's Corner.

ACROSS THE COUNTER.

By The Clerk.

You know, the longer I live the more assured I am that the man who puts his whole essence into his work behind the counter is getting awfully close to the dead certainty of either being his own boss or the boss's partner! I've seen it come about so often.

One of the best lessons I ever learned in behind-the-counter salesmanship was taught me unconsciously by a cigar merchant about a year and a half ago in his store.

I had often wondered how men like him made such big commercial successes in the smoke and other commercial lines. I'm inches taller than he, and my mirror tells me I'm every bit as handsome. Yet I am behind the counter working for the boss, and he is boss of a dozen or more of his own counter. So it is not size and looks that measure the weight of one's earnings.

Well, that day about eighteen months ago I was talking shop music with him when a fellow came in and, walking up to one of his assistants, showed him a new meerschaum pipe, and said something I did not hear. The cigar clerk started off rummaging through a lot of drawers on one side of the counter: then more drawers on the other side of the counter. But the thing he wanted did not turn up. The Boss then left me and asked the clerk what he wanted.

"You'll find them in one of those drawers," said the proprietor, whom I will call Bob, pointing in another direction. The clerk hunted again a few seconds, when Bob took a hand in the game. After pulling out some thirty more drawers and reaching to the back of numerous shelves, he pulled out a little cardboard box. It had taken about a quarter of an hour to find it, and the customer has begun to protest it was not worth so much trouble. And what do you think was wanted? A chalk button for the meerschaum pipe! A long old task for a nickel's worth of chalk. But the energetic Bob had only just started. Instead of handing the box of buttons over to his assistant, Bob asked for the customer's pipe, looked it over carefully, whipped out his pocket knife, cut down the edges of the chalk, and dropped it into the pipe bowl. The owner thanked him, apolgized for the trouble, and held out his hand for his meerschaum. But Bob was not just satisfied with that button till he worked it out of the bowl again. Then he cut away some more around the edge of it and replaced it cautiously in the pipe, and tapped it gently with the handle of his knife. And then he handed it back to his customer, who by this time was profoundly grateful.

Now this a simple act to make so much ado about. But what cigar clerk would hunt his store for a chalk button and about a cent profit? I wouldn't at least, not till then.

Here was a man worth many dollars a day spending nearly half an hour to spend a cent. Why? Because he made a practice of doing whatever came before him, and doing it—not half doing, it, or doing it fairlywell—but thoroughly doing it. It reminded me of Walt Whitman's eulogy of Grover Cleveland just before his last election: "I don't believe in him because he has any great shakes in himself, but because he has done his best; not your best or my best, but his best?" I tell you example is better than precept. When I got back to my counter after this insight into the clockworks of success-making, I never thought any request or desire of a customer too insignificant or unprofitable to attend to, and attend to energetically. It was a practical sermon to me that is registered indelibly in my brain under the caption of "Bob and the button."

Susanville.—Several months ago the local papers here announced the discovery of a natural deposit of soap, or, rather, of soap making material at Mud Flat, 15 or 20 miles from Susanville. The deposit is of a chalky appearance, but is very smooth, almost impalpable to the touch, and slightly oily. Last season a company of Whom W. A. McNaughton, a mining expert of Reno, Nev., is at the head, acquired possession of the land is now preparing to manufacture various articles for which there is great demand, such as polishes, toilet powders and last, but not least, soap. The deposit at Mud Flat is an extensive one. The soap-making material is covered by sedimantary soil to a depth of several feet in places, and, extending over several hundred acres, is also several feet deep.

Kent, Wash.—The Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co. is contemplating the erection of an immense can-making plant costing from $75,000 to $100,000, to be one of the biggest plants on the entire Coast; location not yet decided on; building will be about 205x150 feet, and will be of reinforced concrete. All cans used by the company will be manufactured in it. Company now has factories in Kent, Mt. Vernon and Chehalis, Wash., and in Hillsboro and Forest Grove, Ore. Many towns will offer inducements for the location of this factory, but Kent will stand a good chance to secure it if she works.

BUILDING WINDOW DISPLAYS.

Accessories Employed by Careful Merchants Who Study This Class of Advertising.

(Copywright by S. W. Roth, the Retailer's Journal.)

(We begin this week a series of articles on Window Dressing. The following interesting matter we take from "Art and Science of Window Dressing," by special arrangement with the author.)

Any man who can handle a saw and a hammer well can easily master the technique of window trimming. Of course the neater he does his work the better will be the effect produced.

Some of the accessories it is well to have made by an experienced carpenter. These may be used often. Some of them will come into use for almost any display.

Arches, columns and the like are part of a merchant's stock in trade when he takes to window trimming.

Boxes of various shapes and sizes are useful. These he can find in his own store.

Cheesecloth and other materials for draperies can be had at a reasonable price at almost any dry goods store. As the window dressers of to-day are using cheesecloth more liberally than they formerly did, it is well to bear the fact in mind. Experience has shown it advisable to use this material. Besides, it is cheap and can be had in almost any color.

Among the number of fixtures very useful in carrying out certain ideas some very simple are herewith shown.

Figure 1 is made from two wooden circles of equal size with slats nailed to the edges. These columns make good supports for arches, shelves and displays. It usually happens that it is necessary to use two of these columns—one on each side of the window.

Figure 2 shows a lattice frame which is useful in many ways. It is light and may readily be covered with cheesecloth and put into use in almost any part of the window. For grocers whose windows are open in the back this may be used for a background. Where the grocer has an open window he should have one of these lattice frames made to fit it, in order that it may be closed when he comes to making a display. It is light and may readily be put in and taken out.

Figure 3. It very often happens that it is necessary to have steps. These are useful in many ways, and as they may often be brought into requisition and are inexpensive it is wise for the grocer to add this fixture to his list. By making two frames as shown in figure 3, a board may be laid upon each of these steps. When covered with a suitable colored cheesecloth the fixture has a substantial look and serves well in showing almost any kind of goods.

Figure 4. This pyramid is made of two planks tacked together, each plank being in the shape of a triangle. This can be made of any size desirable, either as to height or breadth at the base. When well made these pyramids are substantial and will stand alone on any even surface. A number of these may be used in a window to show dried fruit or other small goods, which may be tacked on.

For the top of the background, below which is usually the curtain effect of cheesecloth the lattice or grill work effects prove very attractive. They are neat and simple in construction, which is a great point in their favor.

AAfter completing the cheese cloth back ground, fasten a 1x2 strip across the back of the window, about 28 inches above the top of the cheese cloth. Next fasten a piece, 28 inches long, at each end, so as to form a complete frame, always placing the flat side of the strip out. Than cover the frame with 5 inch strips of cloth, so the raw edges will not show, and you are ready to begin with the grill work. (See figures 5 and 6.) Whichever size of grill you select be sure to have the meshes of even dimensions. The best proportion is 2½ inches square. White tape ½ inch wide, termed "25" line, is used to make the lattice or grill, beginning at either the left or right hand upper corner, (if figure 6 is used). Continue with the tape marked "As" until the frame is complete with vertical lines; then begin with the tape marked "Bs" and continue across. When finished the result will be as per Figure 5.

If Figure 6 is used, begin with the horizontal lines and when completed finish with the perpendicular.

To cover the tacks, plait a piece of cheese cloth about 3 inches wide and, after tacking it all around the frame, complete by tacking over the center of the cloth one line of tape, which will give a very neat finish. Signs may be fastened to the top of the frame after finishing or pined in the center of the grill.

The tape mentioned can be had in rolls of 10 yards or 1,000 yards. The former, of course, is the more expensive, retailing at 10 cents each, while the 1,000 yard spools wholesale at $1.65. White is the most attractive, although tape may be had in numerous colors.

Figure 7 represents a very useful stand, simple of construction. The size depends upon the size of the window. Neatly covered with cheese cloth of a suitable color it is a desirable fixture for the center of the window. All kinds of small goods may be shown on this stand.

ADVERTISING OR BULLDOZING.

Failure of Some Manufacturers to Remember the Retailer When Advertising Their Product Results Disastrously.

Advertisers—that is, advertisers who do any serious thinking along the lines of the psychological effects of advertising—will do well to consider some of the utterances of the Los Angeles "Commercial Bulletin," regarding the recent collapse of the "Force" and "H. O." concern. It may not all be accepted without debate, but it is worth considering for the thought it contains. Among the statements are these:

> The retail grocers of the United States, nearly 200,000 strong, contributed more than any other element to the $2,760,000 failure. The Force and H-O Companies reckoned without the retailer. They regarded him as a necessary though objectionable element in distribution; an element to be used but not respected. And they have failed.
> The consumer demanded Force and the retailer was forced to stock it. He bought at 4.25 to $4.50 a three-dozen case and sold it at two-for-a-quarter, making a margin of profit which would bankrupt him if it represented the margin on all of his grocery sales. For a time he was defenseless. The sales managers for Force depended on just one thing for their success—advertising to the consumer. They concluded that an advertising-made demand for Force represented all that was necessary.
> The lesson to be drawn from this by other manufacturers is that the retailer must be reckoned with. He is the biggest single element in the trade.
> He can dictate the manufacture and sale of things about as powerfully as any other class. He can buy what and where he pleases, and if he does not like one line he can turn it aside and take up some other more to his liking.

The Man Behind the Counter Sells the Goods.

Whether it be just to attribute all the troubles of the "H. O." people to the antagonism of the trade or not in this particular instance is immaterial for the purpose of this argument. But there is back of it a thought which every advertiser ought to consider—must consider eventually—if he is to get results from his advertising. That thought is that "the man behind the counter sells the goods," and it is as true of the jobber, perhaps more so, thanof the retailer. In modern advertising the manufacturers appear to have completely forgotten this fact and have gone mad on this one fad of "advertising to the consumer."

Demand Is Often Merely Curiosity.

That there is merit in advertising to the consumer, there can be no reasonable doubt. It is equally true that on a new commodity there is an educational effect from advertising to the consumer which is valuable in introducing the new goods. But, alas, the resulting demand is generally one of mere curiosity, which fades away about the time the grocer was stocked up. If there is any effect at all from advertising of that sort, it is as effective for the next newcomer as for the first. And in breakfast foods, which nowadays come trooping down the defile in daily phalanx, the invasion becomes to the average grocer an intolerable nuisance and graveyard for his capital. He is heartily disgusted with advertising-fed artificial demand.

Placing a Premium on Substitution.

Then there is the manufacturer who feels so confident of his ability to force the grocer to take his goods that he boasts of the fact, takes all the profit and doesn't care a rap for the grocer. He is using the fickle public as a bludgeon with which to bulldoze the trade into submission. He relies on the claim that his goods are "the only genuine," when, as a matter of fact, it is quite likely the self-same goods are being sold by some grocer under another label. His tyrannical attitude merely places a premium on substitution by the g rocer at the first opportunity. And he has only himself to blame. He has really been a foe to the grocer and a deceiver of the public. And you can't fool all the public all the time.

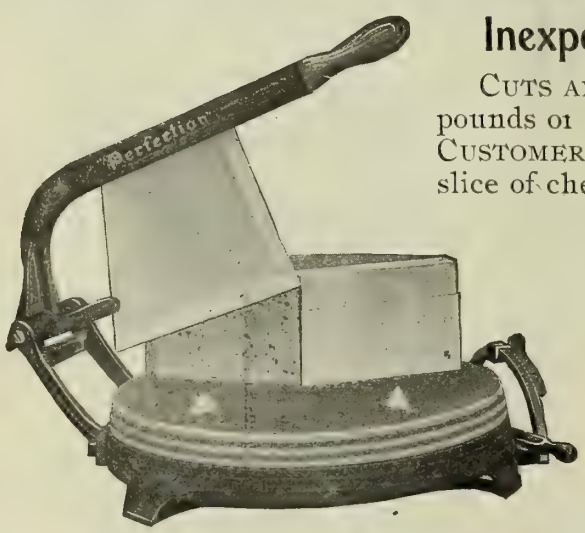
Manufacturers Must Consider Distributors.

As against this, contrast for a moment a local advertising campaign which will become effective because it is natural and sound. If a manufacturer expects his products to take a permanent stand on the market he must reckon with two elements of trade—the wholesaler and the retailer—as well as the consuming public. The manufacturer who is a wise man will make his peace and friendship with both alike, and will share with each reasonable profit in payment for his share in marketing the manufacturer's wares. The wisest students of the art of merchandizing today have agreed that the true tide of success lies along the logical channel of the jobber and the retailer. Here and there an eddy which cuts out one or both may reach its goal, but the great, deep, irresistible tide runs smoothly in the recognized channels, and a cargo on such a stream will reach its goal more safely and surely than it will when threatened by rocks of antagonism.

The manufacturer who can win the co-operation of the jobber need have no concern about the fate of his goods. The jobber, with his corps of salesmen, his economical and co-operative facilities for handling many lines, his knowledge of local conditions, his recognized influence with the retailers, the obligation, perhaps, which the retailer owes him for past favors, his knowledge of financial circumstances—all these are the possession of the manufacturer who will win to his cause the jobber. It is far more value than any conceivable demand from the consumer that may last a few hours, or days, and then fade away with the advent of a cleverer scheme.



A Common Sense Method.

Advertising to the consumer, or even to the retailer, is well enough in its way, and may possibly be worth what it costs if applied with intelligence. But the average manufacturer rushes pellmell into a wild furore of billboard and barndoor advertising which amuses rather than convinces the public. He stands in front of the grocer's shop and yells in a tone of mingled egotism and defiance, without once thinking of going in and talking it over with the grocer seriously. How much more effectively might he spend some of his appropriation if he would appeal directly to the trade, the jobber and retailer alike, select reputable, trustworthy newspapers which ACTUALLY reach the trade, print in them plain trade arguments, which will appeal to the grocer as a business man; show him where his interests and the manufacturer's may alike be subserved, talk dollars and cents to him. If there is real merit in the goods and the proposition the intelligent grocer will listen. And, once won, an outlet of that kind will last a lifetime; many lifetimes. It was advertising of this stamp, backed by real merit in the goods, which placed some of the staples of the grocery trade in positions many years ago, from which no end of clap-trap clamor of recent times has been able to shake them. Any grocer can recall a score of them in a minute.

Advertising Direct to Consumer Much Overdone.

The great mistake made by the average large advertiser is that he spends his resources clamoring at the front door of consumption, totally forgetting that there is a back door which is quite likely to lead directly into the confidential office of the trade. Carrying one's eggs in one basket is a bad practice. There is more than one way to create a demand, and the perpetual campaign of advertising to the consumer has been very much overdone. Remember that "the man behind the counter sells the goods," and always will.—"Journal of Commerce."

Astoria, Oregon, Adopts Novel Method of Exploiting Its Opportunities.

Advertising a city through the medium of the classified columns of the leading daily, weekly and monthly publications of the United States, Canada and Europe is the original publicity plan undertaken by the Astoria (Oregon) Chamber of Commerce. The intention of this campaign is to appeal directly to the very man or woman who is sought as a new resident of the city at the mouth of the Columbia river.

Through such classifications as "Male Help Wanted," "Business Chances," "Farm Lands" and Investments," the Chamber of Commerce expects to reach idle capital, tourists and people who are on the keen lookout for opportunities to invest in the rapidly developing industries of the Pacific Coast country, or make their homes there.

Indicative of the scope of the campaign, these are a few of the publications that are now being used for a series of classified advertisements:

Chicago Tribune	Chicago News
Chicago Record-Herald	New York Herald
New York World	Boston Herald
Philadelphia Enquirer	St. Louis Globe Democrat
Minneapolis Tribune	St. Paul Dispatch
Pittsburg Dispatch	Cleveland Plaindealer
Kansas City Star	New Orelans Picayune
Atlanta Constitution	Colliers' Weekly
Outlook	Cosmopolitan
Everybody's	Sunset
Retail Grocers' Advocate	Pacific Monthly

Many Canadian papers are also on the list, together with the leading daily papers of Berlin, Paris, London, Manchester, Birmingham, Glasgow and Dundee.

Experiments on a small scale have been so productive of results that the Astoria Chamber of Commerce has Commerce has authorized a classified advertising campaign of almost world-wide proportions.

PRICE MAINTENANCE LEGAL.

Review of Decisions of Many Courts on This Matter.

PROMINENT AUTHORITIES QUOTED.

Strict "Anti-Trust" Laws Do Not Forbid Protection of Selling Price.

(By Frank B. Connolly, Director National Retail Grocers' Association.)

At the National Convention held at Cincinnati in 1905, I became convinced that the the National Grocers' Association should have a "Paramount Issue."

I can conceive of no policy that would interest and benefit all the retail grocers of this country, big and little, single store and buying exchange man, except a policy that would tend to insure a better profit in handling leading staples; that would protect the price cutter against the department store and the conservative man from the price cutter, through the activity of the manufacturer, who is the only one who has the LEGAL right to maintain prices by force.

Some manufacturers were already doing this. Many wanted to know what the retail grocers would think of it.

All the resolutions passed at Cincinnati, in my estimation, were of minor importance when compared with this plan.

Trade Press Approve.

I sent an article on this question to the "Trade Press Bulletin." In commenting on this the "American Grocer" of April 15, 1905, said: "The manufacturer has the right to refuse to sell to those who cut his price and to demand of the wholesale trade that they refuse to sell firms that cut this price.

"The manufacturer alone has that right.

"This has been the position of the 'American Grocer' for years on the ground that the interest of a manufacturer in proprietary goods does not cease until the identity of goods protected by patent or trade-mark was destroyed."

"The Inland Grocer" of April 15, 1905, says of my article:

"He makes a telling point in his suggestions that while jobbers and retailers cannot safely agree upon selling prices, the manufacturer of any article will be upheld by the courts in insisting upon a given price."

Combinations Are Punishable.

The Grocers' Association of Topeka, Kan., were sued for damages by a department store because their secretary wrote to a jobber in Kansas City demanding that this jobber refuse to sell goods to the department store. The grocers of Ennis and Waxahachi, Tex., according to my friend Julian Capers' speech, at the Dallas Convention, combined to raise prices and they were forced to disband and have since been unable to revive their association.

The plumbers' association of Toronto, Canada, and also of Toledo, O., have made the mistake of combining with the wholesalers to raise prices.

Individual Action Allowable.

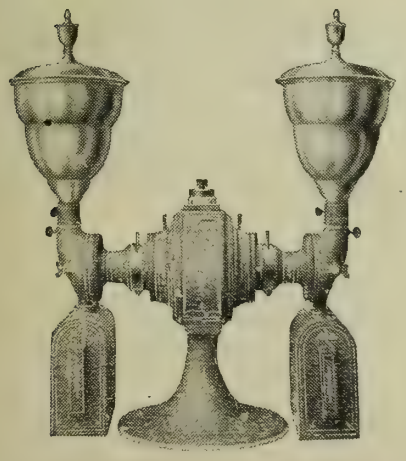
All of these instances were in restraint of trade and in violation of the anti-trust laws.

We agree that a combination of two or more to raise prices is in violation of the law. But when ONE man (the manufacturer) says: "My goods must be sold at the following retail prices:" he is entitled to the protection of the law.

The following conditions in support of this I herewith give:

Federal Court Decision.

In re Green, 52 Fed. 104, it is held that a contract on the part of a retailer not to sell below a specified sum is a contract not in restraint of trade and one that would be enforced, and that an action in damages will lie for its breach. The opinion says, at page 118:



"The arrangement treated as a contract was founded upon a valid consideration, and only secured to the vendors a reasonable protection in their business."

New York Decision.

In the celebrated case of Park & Sons Co. vs. National Wholesale Druggists Association, 175 N. Y. 1; 96 Am. St. Rep. 578; 66, N. Y. Sup. 615, Honorable Alton B. Parker, Chief Justice, said:

"The manufacturer may name the price which the consumer shall pay for his article, which means that he can both make the price and enforce it by contract.

"The Sherman anti-trust law includes within its terms any combination or contract which in any way may have a direct and immediate tendency to restrain trade, restrict competition or form a monopoly, no matter how reasonable such contracts, combinations or restriction may be.

"It is to be noted that this relates only to contracts whose tendency is directly and immediately to restrain trade. It does not relate to contracts which are otherwise legal and only restrain trade incidentally.

"Not all contracts that restrain trade are affected by the Sherman anti-trust law. It refers only to those which restrict trade between states or foreign nations. Of this class only those that directly and immediately affect such restriction are forbidden.

"Numerous decisions unite in agreeing that an individual person or corporation can raise or lower his price at his pleasure. He may charge one customer more than another. He can give his goods to one man for nothing and charge another the full market price. He can even restrain trade or commerce with regard to his own product, acting as an individual.

"The Sherman anti-trust law makes it illegal for two or more to combine to do such a thing. It provides as follows:

" 'Every contract or combination, in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal.'

Must Be Direct Restraint.

"The United States Supreme Court states in the case of Addyston Pipe and Steel Company vs. U. S. 175 29, that Congress has power to prohibit contracts 'which directly and substantially and not merely indirectly, remotely, incidentally or collaterally regulate to a greater or less degree commerce among the states.' "

In the same opinion it is stated:

"Where the contract affects interestate commerce only incidentally and not directly the fact that it is not designed to affect such commerce is simply an additional reason for holding the contracts valid and not affected by the act of Congress.

One Not a Conspiracy.

"A single individual or corporation cannot sell any article without first fixing its price. When it fixes its price of the article it does not enter into a conspiracy of any kind, for one cannot enter into a conspiracy with one's self.

"Numerous discussions in regard to these facts have been recorded by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in New York, also the Court of Appeals.

"In the case of Walsh vs. Dwight et al., 58 N. Y. Sup. 91, it was held that it was legal for a manufacturer to have an agreement with his customers to give them a rebate if they should refuse to sell his article or other similar articles at less than a certain price. They held that such a contract was perfectly allowable under the provisions of the New York anti-trust law, which makes illegal every contract or combination in the form of trust or otherwise whereby competition or the supply may be restrained or prevented for the purpose of advancing price.'

"Cow Brand" Soda Case.

"This case is of special interest, since it turned upon the right of the manufacturer to restrain the price of Dwight's 'Cow Brand' saleratus and soda. Walsh, the plaintiff, had been supplying a similar article to the trade at a considerably lower price than that charged by the Dwight concern. The Dwight Company then made contracts with a large number of jobbers and dealers whereby they agreed to pay a rebate quarterly of one-half a cent per pound on all purchases of their 'Cow Brand' saleratus and soda in consideration of these various parties agreeing not to sell it at less than certain prices fixed by them.

"The Walsh people complained that the prices fixed by the Dwight concern were exorbitant and fictitious. They also stated that the contracts so prevented competition that their business was utterly destroyed and that they were prevented from competing.

Could Buy Other Goods.

"Nothing in the contract prevented the jobbers and retail dealers from purchasing and selling the goods of others than the defendants. The defendants simply offered the parties purchasing their goods to make a reduction in the price of the goods sold, in consideration of the purchaser agreeing not to sell the goods at a less price than that made by them, and not to sell the goods to other manufacturers at a less price than that which they agreed to sell the defendant's goods. It is difficult to see upon what ground it can be claimed such contract is illegal.

"That the defendants have the right to establish agencies for the sale of their goods and to employ others to sell them at such prices as they may designate cannot be disputed. Nor can it be disputed that the manufacturer of merchandise has the right to sell to others on condition that the vendees in selling at retail should charge a specified price for the goods sold.

Price Agreement Is Legal.

"If a dealer in goods of this kind, for his own advantage, agrees to confine his business to a certain line of goods, and agrees with the manufacturer to charge a particular price for the articles which he sells in his agreement is not illegal, since there is nothing in the agreement to prevent others from negotiating with the manufacturers of other articles and selling their products to any one who is willing to buy.

"There is no law to prevent an individual from selling any property that he has at any price which he can get for it.. Nor is there any reason why an individual should not agree that he will not sell property, which he owns at the tiem of making the agreement or which he thereafter acquires, at less than a fixed price.

"The act makes illegal a contract or combination whereby competition in the state of New York on the supply or price of any article or commodity of common use may be restrained or prevented for the purpose of advancing the price. This act did not have the effect of preventing a manufacturer from fixing a price at which his articles should be sold, or from making an agreement with those parties who acted as jobbers or retail dealers of his manufactured articles, that they would deal exclusively in his merchandise and would not sell similar merchandise of other brands at less price than that for which his product was sold.

Manufacturers Cannot Combine.

"The act was evidently intended to prevent manufacturers or dealers in any commodity or articles of common use from combining together to advance the price of such article or commodity, by which combination the supply or price of the same would be restricted or regulated. But a contract by a single manufacturer as to the price at which his goods when manufactured should be sold by those selected by him for the purpose of sale or distribution would not be a contract by which competition in the supply or price of the commodity would be restrained or prevented.

"All of the manufacturers of similar articles could combine with these defendants in the sale of their goods, or the making of a contract such as was made by the defendants. The contract in question simply gave to such of their customers as choose to make the agreement with them an advantage as to the price for which those who refused to come to such an understanding had no share.

Some English Decisions.

"That such an agreement is not illegal has been cited by a long line of authorities. The principal one upon which these decisions are based is stated by Lord Coleridge in the case of Steamship Company vs. McGregor, 21 Q. B. Div. 544.

"The defendants have a right to endeavor, by lawful means, to keep their trade in their own hands, and by the Kentucky's Severe Law.

"An interesting case bearing upon the subject under consideration came up in Kentucky when a certain wholesale grocer sought to punish the Wholesale Grocers' Association of that state, charging them with a conspiracy against him and the state.

"The Kentucky anti-trust law provides as follows:

" 'If any corporation or any partnership, company, firm, or individual, or other association of persons, shall agree, etc., in a pool, trust, combination, confederation or understanding with any other corporation, etc., for the purpose of regulating or controlling or fixing the price of any merchandise, articles or property of any kind, or shall enter into any pool, etc., having for object the fixing or in any way limiting the amount of any article or property, commodity or merchandise to be produced or manufactured, mined, bought or sold, shall be deemed guilty of the crime of conspiracy and punished therefore as provided in the subsequent sections of this act.'

"The court of Appeals of Kentucky, in the case of Commonwealth vs. Grimstead et al., 63 W. Rep. 427, upheld the constitutionality and validity of this anti-trust law. It also upheld the right of the manufacturer to form agreements with dealers to maintain selling prices of their products.

Need Not Sell Cutters.

In this decision the court stated:

" 'It appears that certain brands of various kinds of groceries of established reputation are protected by the manufacturers or the owner of the brands by a refusal to sell these goods to anyone who will not agree to refrain from selling them upon a minimum price fixed, from time to time, by the manufacturer or owner of the product.

" 'There does not appear from the testimony in this case, to be any obligation on the part of any member of the association to the other members to fix, control, or regulate the price of any goods. Their agreement is to maintain the prices on which in the language of the trade are called 'contract goods' or goods upon which the manufacturer puts a fixed selling price.

" 'The manufacturer alone regulates and controls the minimum price at which the jobber may sell all these goods, and this has been done by requiring the customer to agree not to resell the goods at a price less than that fixed.

" 'All that is necessary to decide here is that such an agreement with the manufacturer is not within the purview of the statute.

" 'It is not an error, therefore, for the Circuit Court to direct the jury to find the defendants not guilty and the judgment is affirmed.'

"In Whitwell vs. Tobacco Co., the defendant was a manufacturer of tobacco and the plaintiff a jobber therein. The defendant's method of doing business was to fix the prices of its goods so high to those who did not agree to refrain from dealing in the commodities of its competitors that their purchase was unprofitable, while it reduced the prices to those who did so agree so that the purchase of the goods was profitable to them. The plaintiff applied for a purchaser, but refused to so agree, and, upon his refusing, the defendant refused to sell him. He then brought action to recover damages for the refusal. It was held that he could not, that such an agreement on the part of a jobber was legal, and that the defendant had a right to refuse to sell to him unless he would enter into it. Judge Sanborn said:

Manufacturer's Right Upheld.

In Whitwell vs. Tobacco Co., 125 Fed. 454, on page 460, it is said: "The manufacturer of goods may dictate the price at which the same may be sold and an agreement entered into for the purpose of promoting the legitimate business of selling a commodity for which a market has been established, is not void as being in restrain of trade or otherwise illegal. 166 U. S. 290, 171 U. S. 505, 120 Fed. 721."

"That each party has a right to fix the price at which he will dispose of a commodity, and the terms and conditions upon which they are to be sold, and any such restricting is not illegal or in restraint of trade, but is a binding and enforceable contract. In re Greene, 52 Fed. 104, 115; 79 Fed. 625, 644; Walsh v. Dwight, 58 N. Y. Supp. 91, 93; 78 Ill. 589; 63 S. W. 427; 165 U. S. 578."

"The right of each competitor to fix the price of the commodities which he offers for sale and to dictate the terms upon which he will dispose of them, is indispensable to the very existance of competition. Strike down or stipulate away that right, and the competition is not only restricted, but destroyed."

Miscellaneous Decisions.

In the case of Lader v. Jayne, the right of the manufacturer to protect his price was conceded in the decision, also in the Banzai Silk decision.

Wherever a decision against fixed prices is rendered it is because a combination in restraint of trade has been proved, never where the manufacturer alone does it.

That Indiana Decision.

The National Retrail Druggists Association have just compromised a suit in Indiana in the Federal Court regarding the TRIPARTITE agreement between the manufacturer, jobber and retailer to fix prices.

We want the manufacturer ALONE to insist on the selling price—to instruct both jobber and retailer the price they must ask for his staples. This will stop price-cutting on well known staples.

The anti-trust laws would certainly be very unfair to the manufacturer if they prohibited him from protecting his trade and himself from a few vicious cutters who delight in selling some well known article for cost, thereby causing the legitimate dealer to refuse to carry it in stock.

a cutter who does this injury to a well known brand or trade mark .

Many of the large manufacturers to-day are only selling to jobbers who they know will not break faith with them when they insist on their goods being sold at a uniform price to the retail trade.

The legitimate jobbers welcome a plan of this kind. Retail grocers who KNOW what the policy means also favor it.

It is not a plan where the manufacturer dictates how the dealer shall run his business, as it only applies to goods sold in the package or can and does not apply to bulk goods, which must lose their identity when emptied in the bin. Therefore each dealer can still have numerous specials if necessary to sell at cost or less than cost.

We feel that the National Grocers' Association should urge each affiliating association to teach its members to "Push the goods of the manufacturer who insures you a profit on his goods. Cut out as far as possible all goods demoralized by cutters."

Wisdom of Price-Protection.

The "Schilling's Best" Policy Explained and Its Logical Desirability Made Clear.

[Written Expressly for the Convention Number of the Advocate by A. Schilling & Co.]

Price-maintenance is profit-insurance. It prevents the sacrifice of a brand's popularity on the chopping block, and protects the rights of the many from the exploitation and unjust aggression of the few.

When one dealer in a community cuts the price of a well-known article, the popular inference might be that the other dealers are charging too much, are high priced, and they in turn feel that they are forced to cut to hold their trade.

Service, not price, is the proper basis for competition. Price maintenance makes for good service.

Good Service Versus Cutting.

Anybody can cut, but good service requires skill and business ability. Good service means safer and better business all round.

Good service is the true goal of all business. The more clearly that fact is seen, the more importance will be attached to the elimination of whatever works against it, and nothing tends more to demoralize it than cutting.

The manufacturer who does not protect his prices simply eliminates the middleman, the grocer, from his consideration. He welcomes cutting, for the lower the price at which his goods go over the counter the better value they are to the consumer.

Unfair Treatment of Retailers.

Such a manufacturer will even go so far sometimes as to advertise that grocers make too much profit. At the same time, the retail price will often not pay for the paper in which the grocer wraps the package. Then the grocer's only chance to make anything is to buy in big quantities in the hope that his competitor will not buy so heavily or, if he does, that he will not throw away the additional profit.

Such a policy benefits but two of the parties to every transaction—the consumer, through low prices; and the manufacturer through large sales. The dealers, the third party, are not given any consideration; they lose money since they are forced to render immense service for nothing.

Schilling's Three-Sided Partnership.

However profitable this policy may be for the manufacturer—and we know that it is profitable to some—we cannot make it square with our ideas of fair business.

We look upon the grocer, the consumer and ourselves as forming a three-sided partnership. We hold that what is the concern of one is the concern of all. In short, we take the ground that the dealer is entitled to a fair profit for the work of distribution, and that when a manufacturer wilfully so conducts his business as to compel the trade to sell his goods without profit, he is a robber.

Under these circumstances what can the dealers do?

Can they agree on a price and maintain it?

No: the law steps in and says that such an agreement is in restraint of trade.

Manufacturer Can Give Relief.

What can be done?

Exactly what we have done: establish a retail price and ENFORCE it.

Common sense teaches and the courts have held that a manufacturer has this right. We take the next step and hold that it is our DUTY to establish a price and protect it. Work and time and money are required to carry it out, but it can be done.

Since we inaugurated the policy of price-maintenance, blazed the trail and demonstrated its practicability, other manufacturers, Eastern and Western, have become convinced of its fairness and have adopted it.

GERMEA FOR BREAKFAST

Value to the Manufacturer.

All along, we have endeavored to secure the acceptance of the principle and to provide for its enforcement in a spirit of helpfulness, for the value of price-maintenance to the manufacturer is the value to him of having the dealers his cordial friends.

The law is made for lawbreakers, not for the law-abiding. But price-agreements are not made for a few cutters, but for the two hundred thousand victims of those few.

Faithfulness to the many requires that the few be restrained.

We shall in the future, as in the past, use all amicable means to protect our prices. We are, however, so thoroughly assured of the justice of our position and we are so thoroughly satisfied that the course we are pursuing is for the best interests of the grocery trade, that we shall not hesitate to take extreme measures when friendly counsels do not prevail.

What the Laws Require.

The California Cartwright law is strictly anti-trust. It prohibits two or more manufacturers from combining and in any way determining, or agreeing upon, or regulating selling prices in restraint of trade. For a number of retailers to agree or combine and agree upon certain selling prices, is in restraint of trade and is prohibited.

A sale of goods by an individual manufacturer to a merchant with the understanding that he offers the goods in accordance with his policy at a specified retail price, is not restraining trade—is not interfered with by the Cartwright Law. This is our understanding of the statute and it is the advice of our attorney, and we are governing ourselves accordingly—selling, as we have sold, in accordance with and subject to the conditions stated in our notification, by registered letter, to the trade, which notification has legal force and is binding on all dealers in Schilling's Best, wholesale or retail.

Retail Dealers Should Co-operate.

The grocer's attitude towards price-maintenance should, in our judgment, be that of active co-operation and support. He should give decided preference to those goods that are protected.

The pure food law has emphasized the importance of package goods, and they are growing in popular favor, justly. The package is the right way for the consumer; and for the grocer when the profit is protected. But when the profit isn't protected and when prices are not maintained, as is the case with many popular brands today, the situation is dangerous.

How long would the grocer remain in business if his sales were confined to the brands that are popular and unprotected?

It looks as though price-maintenance is coming to be grocery-maintenance. A. SCHILLING & COMPANY.

CONTROLLING SELLING PRICES.

Review of Advantages Accruing to the Manufacturer as well as to the Retailer.

[By H. Hauch of Alameda.]

The question of having manufacturers' control the retail selling prices of their various commodities has lately been forced to the front for the consideration of the trade by the vigorous manner in which it has been championed on the Pacific Coast, under the able leadership of Mr. J. R. Newberry of Los Angeles. Mr. Newberry was the first of the retail grocers to buckle on his armour in advocacy of this policy, and he has given freely of his abundant energy and valuable time to further this cause. It is to the credit of the grocery trade of the Pacific Coast that it has fathered and promptly accepted this movement, so full of promise for better conditions in the immediate future for the hard working men who are members of the grocery fraternity throughout the land.

Manufacturers Accepting This Policy.

The fact that the principle is already being largely accepted by the manufacturers of food products consigned to the Coast shows that its importance is being recognized in manufacturing circles and that the day for its general adoption is at hand.

Let us for a few moments look into the merits of the question under consideration from the point of view of the retail grocery trade and attempt to form a definite conclusion as to what the movement means for our trade in general. Then, if we agree that it is beneficial to our interests, let us both as individuals and as members of the Grocers' Associations, get behind it in all its bearings and make it the success to which the writer firmly believes that it is entitled.

Principal Benefits of the System.

There are several chief benefits derivable from the manufacturers' control of the retail price at which his products shall be distributed among the consumers.

First. It is the stability it will give to our trade if generally adhered to. We all know that stability is one of the main requisites for success in any line of human effort. With a fixed margin of profit on the multiplicity of proprietary articles handled by the grocery trade, it would be rendered comparatively easy to compute the earning capacity of any retail business, a thing impossible under conditions of unrestricted competition. This, in turn, would mean that it would be an easy matter to determine the basis of expense on which any business would have to be carried on in order to return a reasonable compensation to the owner of such business—a factor which today is largely a matter of conjecture and, in a great many cases, explains the unsatisfactory balance sheets so common to our experience.

Second. The feature of the grocer handling the main staples of his trade at an actual loss, when expenses are taken into consideration, would be a thing of the past. Only too long has the grocer been compelled, through unintelligent and vicious competition, to distribute the products of the mill, such as flour and feed, packing house products like bacon, hams, etc., in many cases coal oil and a number of other articles at prices not only yielding no margin, but, during the course of a year's business, heavily cutting into the profits derived from the balance of his stock.

An Example of Successful Effort.

We, of California, at least of the Bay Cities, and our friends from Los Angeles are today enjoying reasonable margins on our flour business on account of having secured the principle of fixed retail prices on this article as well as on other mill products.

But we are not satisfied with the results already achieved. Intelligent selfishness leads us to demand that this principle, already successfully operating in numerous lines of goods, be extended until it covers at least the entire field of our regular staples. Each article handled by us will then carry its own legitimate share of the cost of distribution without infringing on the profits derved from our more profitable lines of goods.

Manufactureres Would Profit Largely.

Let us also briefly consider the question from the point of view of the manufacturer and see if in reality our interest in a successful issue of this movement are not absolutely mutual.

If we are not in a position to demonstrate to the manufacturer that it will pay him to protect the selling price of his commodity, we have but scant hope of success. It so happens, that by benefiting us through this course of action, he is benefiting himself still more.

We are all aware of the fact that one of the heaviest items of the selling expense of the manufacturer is advertising his product. This is true even in the case of goods with which the consuming public is perfectly familiar.

Why is this enormous expense incurred?

There is a double motive in constantly incurring this item of expense.

First.—The necessity of keeping the article before the public.

Scondly.—To offset by iths advertising the effort of the tradesmen to substitute a more profitable article in the same lines for the one carrying a lesser profit, resulting from the cutting tactics of a few retail distributors.

Would Make "Substituting" Unprofitable.

With a fixed margin of profit, satisfactory to the retailer, there would be no inducement for this attempt on his part to substitute and the trade once gained by a meritorious article would, to that extent, be safe. This would make possible vast reductions in the advertising expenses of such firms.

In a short article like this it is only possible to outline the arguments in favor of the policy advocated. I feel assured that, as the grocers familiarize themstlves more thoroughwith the question, the cannot but see that it embodies the most vital principle of all Association effort, and that they will give such enthusiastic support to the movement as will assure for it a rapid acceptance by all manufacturers of proprietary articles, thus laying firm and deep the foundation on which to build a solid and compact business structure, insuring the success of intelligent effort in our line of trade.

Finest Pickles Made.

Story of the Wonderful Development of a Once Neglected Pacific Coast Industry.

Pickle making on the Pacific Coast has been revolutionized since F. L. Matthes came to San Francisco.

Although Mr. Matthes had been in the pickle-making business for 22 years, he came here intending to go into the warehouse business. But the directors of the Pacific Pickle & Vinegar Works, all of whom have other large interests, learned of his experience in the pickle business and induced him to enter their corporation and accept the general management.

Mr. Matthes had learned that permanent success in the pickle business depended primarily on quality. With this must be employed square dealing. Then first, last and all the time must come salesmanship, the knowledge of how to get the trade interested in the goods and to make them feel safe in recommending the goods to their trade.

California made pickles had never rated high until Mr. Matthes took control of the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works, merely because the question of the maker was "How cheap?" and not "How good?"

On a "Quality" Basis.

This was a serious mistake. Pickles are a luxury. People do not eat pickles because they must, but because they want to. If they are tender and tasty, people eat more and come back again. They willingly pay a little more and the consumption increases rapidly when they once get the habit.

Mr. Matthes found he had to run counter to all the traditions of the trade. He knew pickles, however. He knew the needs of the trade. He knew what men could sell and he knows how to make dealers willing to buy. With the knowledge that he knew these things, he dared to institute new methods that made all the old timers stare. They are still staring, but now it is with amazement at the results accomplished instead of in surprise, because they thought the "new man" was making a fool of himself.

The development of the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works dates from 1901.

Process the Fresh Cucumbers.

At that time, the works were transferred from San Francisco to Haywards. Two important results were accomplished by this. Larger and better factory facilities were secured and a great saving effected in the matter of hauling. Even more important, the plant was in the very midst of the raw material and the pickles were processed almost as soon as the cucumbers were picked, thus insuring a crispness and flavor impossible from a cucumber that had grown stale and tough from having wilted for 48 hours or so.

One of the first problems faced by Mr. Matthes was the difficulty of getting the right kind of cucumbers. He knew what he wanted and he knew that the farmers of Alameda county did not grow them.

He started a revolution against haphazard cucumbers grown in haphazard style from haphazard seeds. Science replaced fool luck.

Seeds Secured by Scientific Selection.

Seeds were secured from all the cucumber growing districts of the country. The different kinds were tried out in various kinds of soil. The soil that produced the best results was analyzed and the seeds carefully classed.

The Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works supplied each farmer with the seeds that their scientific experiments had shown would produce the best results on that man's soil. They induced the farmers to adopt their methods and follow their careful system of planting, cultivating and picking by guaranteeing them results nearly twice as great as they had ever hoped for in the former days.

As a consequence, the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works now has 1,317 acres of cucumbers under contract, whereas, 5 years ago, they could use only the product of 125 acres.

This has been rendered possible only by the building of an immense plant and the creation of an enormous demand. This is best expressed by the fact that where only 3 salesmen were required in 1901, it requires 29 to call on the firm's customers in 1907.

A Policy of Strict Honesty.

"We work on a policy of treating people fairly," said F. L. Matthes in explaining results. "We give the public the best pickles and condiments that can be made. We insure absolute uniformity of quality by using scientific formulas in making our pickles instead of guess work recipes. The public appreciate this and buy more.

"We give the dealer just what he pays for, both in quality and measure, and, knowing our own honesty, are willing to trust in his. They appreciate it and handle more of our goods.

In speaking of their proposition to give the dealer the free goods he is entitled to under a deal with the understanding that he need not take the goods ordered unless the free goods have proven absolutely satisfactory, he said:

Found the Trade Was Honest.

"Our first experience with this method was in 1904, when we announced through the Advocate that we would give a barrel of our vinegar free to each man who should order a certain number of barrels to be taken within a year. We further agreed that he could "money back" our vinegar to his customers and that if, for any reason, he was not satisfied with our goods, he need not buy those he had contracted for nor pay for the free barrel already delivered. We were ovewrhelmed with orders in consequence of this advertisement. We dealt honestly with the trade, and to their credit be it said, we did not encounter a single man who tried to "do" us.

"Our new 'Free Deal' on 'California Home Brand' tomato catsup is bringing the same results. We give one case free with an order for five and deliver the free case first with the agreement that the dealer need not take the five cases ordered if he finds the free goods unsatisfactory. I will be willing to stake my business reputation on the fact that we will not be made, in a single instance, to regret our confidence."

Mr. Matthes was asked as to how he dared claim that the "California Home Brand" pickles were of superior quality to any of Eastern production.

Pacific Coast Vegetables the Best.

"It's in the raw product," he said. "Our climate and soil are the best. The soil is a rich sediment that does not need artificial fortification. We do not have the extremes of heat and cold of the Eastern summer. The fogs take the place of the drenching showers, the moisture is near the surface of the ground, and all our vegetables have an even development that makes them thinner skinned, with smaller seeds and finer meat than those that are grown under the scorching heat of the Eastern summer with the constantly recurrent drenchings of summer rains."

A further insight into the methods of the Pacific Vinegar & Pickle Works was shown after the great disaster of April, 1906. They had an enormous stock of goods in their plant at Haywards. The damage there was almost nothing. They were able to deliver goods to the merchants of San Francisco as soon as traffic was possible.

Extend Credit When Banks Closed.

And they did it, long before the banks opened, and they put no harsh limitations on credit.

The man who was good before the fire got what he wanted and was given all the time he needed.

It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the "California Home Brand" of pickles, catsups and condiments is not lacking "boosters" who are glad to sing the praises of the quality they know is there.

The resultant increase of business in the past few years has necessitated successive increases in the plant. The latest change came when the company increased its capital from $75,000 to $250,000 and the extra stock was promptly oversubscribed by the present stockholders. How these men rank will be understood in the commercial world from the fact that the directors are:

Simon Newman, president; John L. Koster, vice-president. Directors: W. B. Wellman, N. Ohlandt and Jas. H. Garrett. F. L. Matthes, general manager.

The company has recently purchased a tract of 10¾ acres adjoining its present plant. On this they are putting up two buildings of reinforced concrete, one 200x200 feet and the other 200x60 feet. The larger building will be employed to house one hundred 5,000-gallon pickle tanks

The output in 1906 aggregated 385 cars. The business for 1907 will a little more than double this.

They talk about "some pun'kins" down East. It will assuredly be admitted that this is "some pickles."

TAUGHT HIM A LESSON.

There is one man in town whose faith in mail order concerns has been blighted through an experience he had recently with a local hardware dealer. The prospective purchaser went into the hardware store and stated that he wanted to buy an ax. The dealer brought one out for his inspection, and, upon being informed that the price was $1.15, replied: "Why, I can get the same kind of an ax for 90 cents from a mail order house."

"All right," said the merchant, "I'll give it to you for the same price provided you will do the same with me as you would do with them."

The customer agreed and handed the merchant a dollar bill. The merchant handed him back 10 cents in change, and immediately asked the customer for 25 cents, which he would have been required to pay as express charges.

"Now how much has your ax cost you?" asked the dealer.

"One dollar and fifteen cents," replied the customer.

"Right!" said the dealer. "Now please give me 5 cents more for money order fee and postage." The customer meekly obeyed "Now how much has your ax cost you?" inquired the dealer blandly. The customer replied: "One dollar andtwenty cents."

"Not so cheap after all, is it?" said the dealer, tossing the ax back on the shelf, and he told the customer to call again for it in ten days, as that would be as soon as he could get it if he ordered it from the mail house.—Chelsea (Iowa) Independent.

Gentlemen:—

The "Advocate" makes good and is a credit to the efforts of her people. Keep busy.

STAFFORD BROS.

Every merchant can Weigh.
Every merchant can count.
Every merchant can measure.
Every merchant can gauge ?

The absolute necessity of having his own measuring instruments on which he can rely for protection is unquestioned. Oil and vinegar are frequently overgauged and unless a merchant has a set of gauging instruments he cannot tell whether he is paying for oil or vinegar that is charged to him at, say 52 gallons, when as a matter of fact the barrel will only hold 48 gallons. This is a trick frequently practiced as these concerns know that few dealers have measuring instruments.

The long stick is used to determine the actual capacity of the barrel while the small one shows the amount that is lacking in the barrel. Protect yourself as many readers of this paper have, by buying a set of the Advocate gauging instruments, which are sold at a nominal figure. It is advisable to have two sets, one for vinegar, molasses and syrup and another for oil if it is bought in barrels as one set should not be used to gauge both oil and vinegar or molasses.

We will deliver the gauge rods to you at your store at these prices, cash in advance:

1	GAUGE	and 1	WANTAGE	ROD	$1.45

WILL FINE GROCERS WHO MAKE BAD DEBTS.

St. Paul Association to Impose Penalty on Merchants Who Extend Credit to Those Whose Accounts are More Than 30 Days Overdue.

By far the most drastic measure which has been taken to make retail grocers more careful with credits is the action taken by the St. Paul, Minn., association, which proposes to impose a fine on all of its members who extend credit to a customer where there is an account which is unpaid after the thirty days which the association says as a reasonable time for payment.

The resolution, which was passed by the association a few days ago, is as follows:

Whereas, the retail grocers are required to settle each Thursday with the commission houses and pay their bills for purchases in full, and are required to settle and pay bills made with the wholesale houses each thirty days.
Resolved, That the Secretary is hereby instructed to inspect the books of retailers and in all cases found where credit is given customers exceeding the period of thirty days, impose a fine of $5.00 therefore.

This action was brought about because members of the association have become so careless in collecting their accounts and so forgetful of what the association recommended that a more severe penalty should be handed those who are unmindful of the fact that collections must be made from consumers if it is expected that the bills of the jobber are to be paid.

Those who have followed the movement to look more carefully after credits and not to sell to those who do not possess the reputation of paying their bills will watch the outcome of the St. Paul proposition with interest.—INTER-State Grocer.

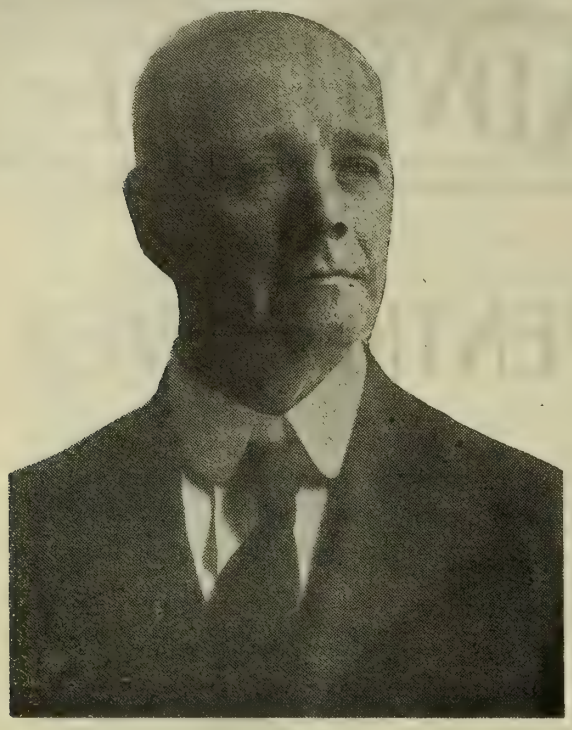
There were altogether 72 delegates.



Twenty-one cities were represented at the Eighth Annual Convention of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association at Sacramento. They were as follows:

Many of the delegates brought their wives. The pretty faces and costumes of the fair visitors added to the attractiveness of the hall. The ladies all took great interest in the various exercises and papers.

The first day was devoted to organizing and the submission of reports by the officers, which made clear to the delegates the scope of the Association's efforts and the faithfulness with which the directors and officers applied themselves to the work for which they had been elected.

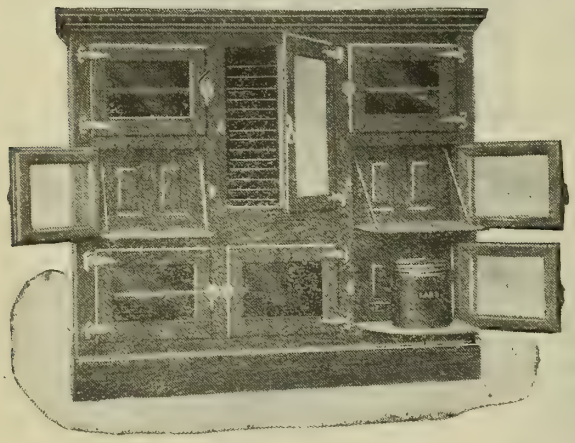
A. A. JOST,

To whom all credit is due for wonderful ability shown as presiding officer of the Convention. Mr. Jost was elected as a Director for the ensuing year.

The First Day.

President Jost called the convention to order at 2:30 o'clock with a brief speech outlining the causes that lead to the formation of the California Retail Grocers and Merchants Association in 1900. He told of the steps leading to the choice of Sacramento as a convention city and the work that had been done by the Sacramento Grocers to make good the promises made at the State Convention at Oakland in 1906. Mr. Jost then introduced Mayor Beard of Sacramento.

Mayor Beard thanked the grocers for the honor extended to the city of Sacramento by the acceptance of their invitation. Among other things, he said:



"Sacramento, like many other cities, has a California Pioneer Association, consisting of men who made California. The grocers are found among these sturdy, high minded men. The retail grocers in Sacramento are a prosperous class. This prosperity is due largely to industry, integrity, cleverness, devotion to duty and their organization. Their co-operation with other grocers throughout the State, though the central organization has also helped hem.

"We hope your stay in our city will be pleasant and that at some future time we will have the pleasure of entertaining you again and, perhaps, number you among our own citizens."

Mr. Beard's remarks were warmly applauded. Mr Jost then called upon Past President L. Warnke of Alameda to reply.

Mr. Warnke said:—"It is with a great deal of pride that I arise to voice the sentiments of the grocers of California in expressing their appreciation of the warm words of welcome of Mayor Beard. I represent not only my own community, but every man in the grocery business in California. For them, I say: "We thank you." As noon arrived and we entered the Sacramento valley, I knew the welcome awaiting us would be warm as the climate of the Sacramento valley is different from the chillier air of the cities about the Bay.

LUDWIG WARNKE,

Re-elected Director California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association for Ensuing year.

"Organization is a necessity for intelligent men. The grocers must be intelligent to succeed. The unfit fall by the wayside. The intelligent realize that they must unite to secure better conditions. The grocers have done much for the people. The Pure Food Law is a splendid work to improve the condition of the country. That is due largely to the efforts of the grocers.

"Many other things are the result of the efforts of the grocers to help their customers.

"Of course, we had also to look out for ourselves—for if we did not, no one else would do it. This is true of every organization. In the Grocers Association, the results speak for themselves."

Mr. Warnke briefly outlined some of the purposes and work of the State Association. He then again thanked the people of Sacramento, through their mayor, Mr. Beard, for the kind words and the palpable evidences of their welcome.

President Jost then delivered his annual report as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—There are times in men's lives when they can look backward and point with a measure of justifiable pride at the accomplishments which they have achieved within a certain period. One year ago, upon accepting the Presidency of the CALIFORNIA RETAIL GROCERS AND MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION, the highest position of honor and trust that you have to confer, I assumed the office with a determination that I would devote my best efforts to advance the interests of the ASSOCIATION, of which I was justly proud from the fact that in 1900, in the city of San Francisco, I was one of its Charter Members

ORGANIZATION WORK.

I have not been as successful as I had anticipated along the line of organization work. To accomplish this particular object it requires persistent and determined effort, necessitating a considerable amount of time which I found I could not spare from my business; but, notwithstanding this fact, as I have been ably and materially assisted by your Board of Directors and the Officers of our Association, so that we have some pleasing results to offer you.

ATTENDANCE.

Certainly the attendance of so large a number of intelligent and enthusiastic merchants, representing as they do all sections of this grand State of ours attest to the worth and interest manifested in an Association which has done so much for the elevation and advancement of the Retail Grocer.

DIFFERENT PLACES OF MEETING.

Immediately following the organization of the new Board, at the suggestion of your President the Board of Directors have met in turn in the different cities, and it has not only been a diversion but has in many cases been very pleasant as well as profitable, for it has helped enthuse and strengthen the different Local Associations.

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

With the indorsement of our Local Associations, your Secretary, Mr. F. B. Connolly, and myself had the good fortune to attend the National Convention of the Retail Grocers at Dallas, Texas, in January of this year. We took the Southern Route and after addressing the members of the Los Angeles Association, who entertained us at a banquet, we were joined by Mr. J. F. Paulding of the Los Angeles Association, and so we three had the honor of representing California, and the Convention had been in session but a short time before the California Delegation was in evidence, and certainly the very persistent and hard work of both Mr. Connolly and Mr. Paulding is worthy of commendation. On our way East we had outlined a program and Resolution, and when the resolution: "The manufacturer should study his legal rights in the matter of naming and maintaining the minimum retail selling price of his goods" was introduced, it immediately became the important measure of the convention. I, as one of the Committee on Resolutions succeeded in having it reported favorably but after the second day's fight which was indeed a battle royal—we were defeated by a small margin, developing the fact that many of our Eastern brothers were not yet ready and it was a matter of education. Subsequent to the Convention, upon our visit to St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Topeka, Denver and other cities, we found that it had awakened a deep interest and they were asking for information, which our Mr. Connolly was ever ready to impart, as he always had a good supply on tap, and we had the satisfaction of knowing that our Association was foremost in accomplishing many needed reforms, and we not only secured some valuable information but were also able to outline some thoughts which I think will be of great value to some of the older and larger Associations. As guests of the different Associations in the various cities we visited, we were certainly entertained in a hospitable manner.

MEMBERSHIP.

I am glad to say that we have materially increased our membership, and particularly is this the case with the individual members who have joined the Association because of the benefits which are to be derived from the Association and its work.

FINANCES.

The question of Finance has always been one of the centres of attraction and in many cases has not shown any particular gain. It has been the policy of your Board of Directors to give you an economical administration and with care we have accomplished much good and at the same time have a healthy balance in the Treasury, as will be shown you by the books of the Secretary and Treasurer.

GROCERS' ADVOCATE.

At our last Convention in Oakland, in the discussing of finances it was suggested that if our Association could purchase a trade paper it would be a good investment and would greatly assist us in securing a much-needed and substantial revenue. As a result a Committee of five was appointed and with that end in view secured a one year's option on the "Retail Grocer's Advocate" for the sum of $10,000,000, to be paid for in yearly payments of $1,000,00, such sums to be derived from the earnings of the paper. This Committee was to remain in power for one year and was to manage and dicate the policy of the paper, but on account of sickness on the part of two of its members and the inability of another, owing to pressing business engagements, this Committee was disolved and a new Committee was organized, and later on Mr. J. W. King of San Francisco was chosen Chairman of the new Committee. Later on he will make you a complete and comprehensive report of the work accomplished.

I do not wish to criticise the acts of the purchasing Committee but I have not been able, after an earnest and careful study, to find wherein this publication was worth to us—or any Association—anything like the sum to be paid for the same. The Directors and myself have spent much time in trying to make the "Advocate" a success, and by a persistent and up-hill effort, ably assisted by the manager and editor, Earl D. Eddy, have within the past few months made considerable headway, and indications now point to a solution of the problem.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

The Asosciation has sent out a set of collection blanks urging its members to use the same, and the results obtained in many instances have been very flattering and a great deal of moneys collected which otherwise would have been charged to Profit and Loss. By a determined and united effort we have urged some of the manufacturers to make and maintain a price on their goods which will insure a profit to all who handle the same, and to eliminate the price cutter and unscrupulous advertiser. We have succeeded in placing our needs before our Legislative Body and they in their wisdom have enacted laws which will be very beneficial to every merchant, either within or without the fold. The Cartwright Anti-Trust Law has created some adverse criticism, but I think we will find it a blessing in disguise and much good will come to the honest and fair-minded merchant. The legal phase of the law has been passed upon the conclusions are that every individual manufacturer has the right to name the retail selling price of his goods and which are protected by his Trade Mark. Now it is up to the State Association to co-operate with the manufacturer who makes it incumbent upon the distributor of his goods that every person who handles his wares is by right entitled to and must make a profit thereon.

BETTER FEELING.

There is a better feeling existing between the manufacturer, jobber and retailer, as there is no fair-minded merchant but who recognizes that it is the retailer, particularly the GROCER who comes in closer touch with the consumer than any other person, and he in many cases dictates the brands of goods which enter into daily consumption. This being the case is it not business policy for the jobber to protect the rights of the retailer and to see that he is protected not alone in price but also quality represented by actual worth as to purity, weight, measure and count. The manufacturer, if he expects to gain favor with the consuming public as well as the jobber and retailer, must be up and doing. His goods must be uniform and up to the very highest standard of excellence, and after he has accomplished this fact he should name a retail price which will insure their use by the consumer and at the same time protect the distributor by a fair margin of profit, be he wholesaler or retailer.

EDUCATION.

This is an age of education and advancement. Our citizenship, our social standing, our commercial rating, our position in retail grocerdom is just what we make it. Let us study the needs of our trade, urging the buying and consuming of the very best goods obtainable. Let us be honest with our customers, our clerks and ourselves. Do not deceive yourself by thinking you can handle your business at a less percentage of cost than your neighbor and can therefore sell just a little cheaper than he can, for if you do it will only be a matter of time before your creditors will inform you that the Sheriff can handle your business better than yourself.

Count, weigh and measure the goods you recieve.

Do not overlook the additional expense of doing business.

Do not forget that it costs money to rear a family.

Remember that you are in a measure a servant of the dear public, but at the same time the public believes that the servant is worthy of his hire.

Merrell-Soule Co.'s

None Such Condensed Mince Meat

IT PAYS A FINE PROFIT

The consumer is willing to pay 15c per package (2 big pies) as they get "full value received" in quality and quantity.

Merrell-Soule Co., the manufacturers, were 24 years ahead of the U. S. Pure Food Law. Their plant was inspected by United States officials, and confirmed and passed as 100 per cent Perfect.

Can you beat it?

The Merrell-Soule None Such Condensed Mince Meat is from every point of view the best in the world. The consumers say so, and their competitors admit that None Such has 90 percent of the Condensed Mince Meat business, and it has obtained it, not because the goods were offered cheap, but because the quality was the best and the price reasonable."

Castle Bros., Brokers, San Francisco, Cal.

Gain the confidence of your trade by giving them the best of attention; always fulfilling your promises. Give them the best goods both as to quality and price, honest weights and measure, and if you extend them an accommodation in the matter of credit, insist upon the customer performing his share of the contract.

VACATION.

Do not forget that you as well as your customer are entitled to the much-needed vacation and can sit beneath the shady pines enjoying the murmuring and whispering of the breezes, of the moaning and groaning of the winds, as it reminds you of the mournful tale of some belated debtor who has failed to meet his obligations; or from some safe and vantage point behold the restless waters of the deep blue sea and can look in wonder and amazement as you behold the angry breakers following each other until they dash with merciless fury upon the rock-bound coast, columns of spray leaping Heavenward, and you can imagine the fanciful picture it presents as the foam of a raging billow, receding only to meet an incoming surge that may perhaps leap higher than before, and beyond and as far as the eye can reach dancing whitecaps all reminding one of the grandeur and handiwork of Nature and Nature's God.

Do not forget that the benefits and success of this ASSOCIATION are dependent upon each one of you and if this CONVENTION proves of benefit to you, put forward your best efforts for the success of this ASSOCIATION. Come to the Convention next year. Help organize a Local in your own town, if not already organized. Help your neighbor in your own town or adjoining one. Do something for once—be IT If you have a Local, attend. Go prepared to boost, to give some advice, to ask some question. Possibly some bashful member wants information but is afraid to ask for the same; and in conclusion permit me to thank the Officers and Directors for their attendance at the meetings, for their congenial fellowship and hearty co-operation, and I bespeak for my successor in office that same kind consideration.

At the conclusion of his report Mr. Jost then appointed the following committees:

Credentials: O'Connor, Stockton; Mottaz, Los Angeles; Jones, Sacramento.

Rules and Order of Business: J. F. Paulding, Los Angeles; L. Warnke, Alameda; Aubry, Stockton.

Auditing: Meacham, E. J., Tomales; Powers, Los Angeles; Trask, San Francisco.

President Jost then explained the purposes of the "Question Box" and advised members to put in pertinent questions. He urged the members to make use of the Question Box.

Secretary Frank B. Connolly then read his annual report as follows:

REPORT OF SECRETARY FRANK B. CONNOLLY.

This report, as Secretary of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association, I present to the Eighth Annual Convention with a feeling of great pride. We have accomplished more during the last year than our State Association has ever been able to accomplish in the past and our success is due greatly to the efforts put forth by the officers and directors that were elected at the Oakland Convention last year. The enthusiasm created at that convention was an incentive for every member of the Board of Directors to do all in his power for the benefit of our State Association and our success is the result. We were treated with the greatest hospitality by the Alameda County Association, for I feel that every delegate in attendance there was duly grateful.

The plans for our board to work upon, the laws selected to be asked for in our interest from the State Legislature and the acquiring of the "Grocers' Advocate" as our own property were the chief features of that contion. The committee very wisely selected—prominent members from all the different locals in the Sttae—and the result has been very gratifying. We decided to meet in the different cities that are represented on the Board except where distance made it impossible to do so.

October.

Our first meeting was held in Oakland, where the Board was organized, with an attendance of seven out of ten directors. At that meeting we sent a letter of thanks to all those who assisted us in making the Oakland Convention a success. A Legislative Committee and a Committee on the Maintainance of the Retail Selling Price were appointed and work during the year has been very successful.

November.

The next meeting was held in Stockton in November, with an attendance of eight out of ten directors. At this meeting plans were prepared urging the manufacturers to pro-

Gentlemen: Replying to your request for a statement concerning the satisfaction given by your "Hobart" electric coffee mill, same has been very satisfactory, having given us practically no trouble at any time since its installation.

We have subjected the mill to very severe tests, on one occasion grindign three thousand pounds of coffee in a continuous run of eight hours, during which time the mill was not shut down once. This evidenced both capacity and endurance, the requisite qualities of a good mill.

Respectfully,

HOBART MEANS "The Good of the Old The Best of the New" tect us in our profits and the secretaries of the different locals were asked to join the State Board in making these requests. The ground work for the handling of the Advocate was prepared and Treasurer Pearson and myself as secretary gave a bond of $1,000 for the faithful performance of our duties. At the suggestion of Mr. John W. King, the president and secretary, who by virtue of their offices were delegates to the National Convention, were urged to attend the National Convention at Dallas, Texas, and the State Board voted $50.00 towards the expenses of the President and Secretary with the recommendation to their local associations to make up the balance.

December.

The December meeting of the State Board was held in San Francisco, with an attendance of eight out of the ten directors. At this meeting the legislative campaign was prepared and in seeking a Field Secretary to attend the session of the Legislature in our interests we urged Mr. Powers to give up the management of the "Advocate" so that he would be able to devote his time for our benefit at Sacramento in securing the laws we asked for. The Board at this meeting took over the management of the "Advocate" from the "Advocate" Committee and Mr. Earl D. Eddy was selected as editor and manager of the "Advocate." Mr. Powers was selected to act as our Field Secretary at a salary to be paid out of the profits of the "Advocate." This enabled us to have the services of a first class Field Secretary at the Legislature.

January.

The January meeting of the State Board took place in Sacramento, with an attendance of six directors. At this meeting Field Secretary Powers presented us with samples of collection letters that we immediately adopted and got them out for distribution to our members. They have been one of our most valuable assets during the year. We have had many complimentary things said of the success they have achieved.

February.

The February meeting of the Board was held in Sacramento, also with an attendance of five. The majority of the legislative expenses were voted upon at this meeting and the resignation of Mr. Hauch as chairman of the "Advocate" Committee was received. At this meeting the directors insisted upon a change in the appearance of the "Advocate," and it was accordingly done. A letter of thanks to all the Legislators who helped secure our laws was also ordered sent.

April.

The April meeting of the Board took place in Oakland, with an attendance of six directors. President Jost at this meeting presented the opinion of the attorney for the Sacramento Association on the Cartwright Law. Mr. John W. King at this meetign was appointed chairman of the "Advocate" Committee.

June.

The June meeting of the Board took place in Stockton, with an attendance of seven. The plans for the management of the "Advocate" were perfected and a nw set of books to be opened by an expert was also ordered. The Secretary was instructed to hire a public stenographer to do whatever work was necessary in the handling of this correspondence.

July.

The July meeting of the directors took place in San Francisco, with an attendance of seven. At this meeting the program for this convention was partially arranged and on receipt of a letter from President Jones of San Jose, our secretaries were ordered to attend their next meeting in San Jose.

August.

The August meeting of the Board took place in Oakland, with an attendance of eight. The proposition of Mr. Wear, representing the Hobart Manufacturing Co., was accepted, donating a pedestal coffee mill to be raffled at the convention. Secretary Connolly explained that he had made arrangements for National Secretary John A. Green to attend the convention and also visit Colorado, Oregon and Washington. Our pro rata of Secretary Green's expenses was allowed at this meeting by acclamation. Chairman John W. King of the "Advocate" Committee gave a complete report on the financial part of the paper, showing a very satisfactory balance. A committee was appointed to handle the raffle of the coffee mill. The collection letters were ordered printed to supply the demand for them. During the months of January and February the work of most interest to our association was done at the Legislature by Mr. Powers. We asked for four bills in the interest of the Retail Grocers and we got all four of them.

Laws Won.

The first, extending the Statute of Limitations from two to four years is of great importance to every merchant in the State of California and especially those of San Francisco who have many accounts from before the disaster. It gives the merchant four years to collect his bills and secure judgment, instead of two as in the past.

The second law, allowing the formation of Mutual Fire Insurance Companies, needs only the evidence of the excessive rates of insurance all over the State to-day to show us the great value of Mutual Companies.

The third, making the drawing of a check with intent to defraud, a state prison offense. A law that will save the merchants of our State many hundreds of dollars they have lost in this manner.

The fourth, an insertion in the Pure Food Law of a clause, providing that the retail merchant need only show a guarantee of purity to escape punishment, thus making the manufacturer responsible.

Our expenses for this legislative campaign were exceedingly light. Mr. Powers' salary coming from the "Advocate" and the active work done by the members of the Sacramento local association saved the necessity of sending many committees to the Legislature. After our success at the Legislature Governor Gillett saw fit to approve and sign every one of the four bills.

Our success at Sacramento was not only due to the efforts and aggressive action of Field Secretary Powers, but also the prompt action of the grocers and merchants in the different committees and local associations throughout the State.

Ghirardelli's Success.

We then took up the matter of getting a profit on chocolate, an article that was being cut by department stores. The Ghirardelli Co. of San Francisco, who manufacture the largest amount of chocolate sold in California, saw the necessity of protecting the grocers who distribute his products, and has successfully stopped the sale of them at cut-rate prices, thereby assuring us of a legitimate profit.

National Convention.

During the month of January, President Jost, Secretary Paulding and myself attended the Convention of the National Retail Grocers' Association of the United States at Dallas, Texas.

We visited the Los Angeles Association on our way there and found it doing its usual good work in protecting its members against the encroachments of price-cutters and trading stamp sharks. To offset the trading stamp companies, who were most actively engaged in Los Angeles at the time, the local association there had formed a stamp company of its own, which was one of the safest means of successfully combating this evil.

The National Convention was a very successful one and the efforts of the California delegates to get the National Association to pass resolutions for protected prices by the manufacturers, while not entirely successful, was the means of bringing this plan before the entire country in such a way that more manufacturers see the necessity of this plan every day. Our resolutions occupied about half of the time of the convention and the debates for and against the resolutions were quite heated, each side making a very earnest fight. However, after the vote was taken, the opponents of the plan knew that California was there. I feel sure that our resolutions will pass with hardly any opposition at the Boston Convention next May. I would suggest at this time that as large a delegation from California to the next National Convention as possible should be sent for this purpose.

President Jost and myself visited the Associations in New Orleans, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee, Topeka and Denver as we proceeded on our journey. The associations as we saw them appeared to be stronger and better in this order. Colorado associations are working very successfully along the same line as California, Oregon and Washington are doing in the matter of profits. We found that the California State Association has a great deal to be proud of While the density of population in the Eastern States makes the membership a great deal larger, the way that our large local associations work to accomplish the plans outlined by the State Board shows the value of our State Association to its members.

Los Angeles Association.

The Los Angeles Association, the largest in membership today, has been a power for good. A great deal of praise must be given to Mr. J. F. Paulding, the man who does the planning and who has been exceedingly successful during the past year

San Francisco Progress.

The Associated Retail Grocers of San Francisco has done exceedingly well for the second year of its existence. It has been remarkable successful in securing profits, not only for its own members but for other sides around San Francisco Bay. The reason of their success has been the interest taken in the Association by the grocers doing a large business. It was their enormous buying power, concentrated one one object, that has made them able to accomplish it. Mr. Geo. B. Doyle, their president, who was also vice-president of the State Association, has devoted a great deal of his time and thought towards bringing this local to the efficiency that it now maintains. Mr. Jas. Irvine and Mr. John W. King, vice-presidents, have also devoted a great deal of their time and thought to secure this success. The Alameda County Associations have just reorganized under very bright prospects.

Sacramento.

The Sacramento Association has always been one of our mainstays and it is handled and guided by the ideas of the very best men in the business. Mr. A. A. Jost, our State President, has been the President of the Sacramento Association for several years, retiring this year in favor of Mr. E. Kilgore, another one of our enthusiastic workers.

Stockton.

The Stockton Association has been very successful during the past year and the two Stockton members on our State Board, Mr Aubrey and Mr. Pearson, are considered very valuable advisers. Mr. W. E. O'Connor, the secretary of the Stockton Association, plans the work that makes this organization one of our most successful locals.

Fresno, San Jose and Nevada Counties, and al lour small locals are being successfully handled.

Membership.

We have more individual members this year than we have had during any of the three years that I have been your secretary, which shows that our success has been appreciated by the individual grocers scattered throughout the State.

Legislative Funds.

During the Legislature these locals all contributed to our legislative fund in the following order:

Associated Retail Grocers of S. F.	$202 25
Alameda County Association	141 15
Los Angeles Association	100 00
Sacramento Association	75 00
Stockton Association	42 00
Nevada County Association	20 00
Redwood City Association	15 00
Fresno Association	10 00
San Bernardino Association	10 00
Bloomfield Association	2 50
Petaluma Association (Mr Hamilton)	5 00

Petaluma Organizes

In the early part of April the merchants of Petaluma sent word they would like us to help them organize. Mr. Powers and myself visited Petaluma and organized the Petaluma Merchants' Association, with 30 members. They have not as yet affiliated with our State Association, but intend doing so very soon. With Petaluma, Sebastopol and Glen Ellen affiliating locals, we will have Sonoma County fairly well organized.

Cartwright Law.

At the last Legislature, the Cartwright Law, a very strict anti-trust law, was put on the statute books. Many have thought this would cause associations to disband and a period of demoralizing and ruinous price-cutting ensue, but such has not been the case, because we are compelled by the individual manufacturer to maintain his retail selling price on his products, the trade-mark and interest in which he still controls until it is consumed. As an individual he does not violate the law.

Financial Statement.

I herewith present a financial statement which will show sources from which our funds were derived during the past year and the purposes for which they were employed. Your Auditing Committee will find that they are correct by comparing them with the statement and vouchers of Treasurer Pearson, to whose fidelity and help the Association is very largely indebted:

Receipts.

Bal. from former Treasurer	$ 26.78
Per capita tax and dues	718.00
Donation to Legislative Fund	620.40

		$1,366.18

Disbursemnts.

R. R. fares to meetings and Legislative expenses of officers and directors	$393.15
Printing, postage, typwriting, Field Sec'y. Salary	328.86

Emergency Fund for Legislative purposes	25.00

Conclusion.

In concluding my Annual Report I feel that circumstances are very favorable for the carrying on of the work that has been done, and as I have spent a great deal of my time as your secretary during the past three years, I now feel that it is proper that some one else take up my work. I have used every endeavor for the benefit of the State Association and have felt that all my time was well spent in bringing the membership and efficiency of the Association up to its present standard. I have had the greatest support from the different officers that I have had the pleasure of serving with, and while it will be unnecessary for me to mention any particular one who has assisted me greatly in this work, yet I feel it would not be right and proper for me to conclude without bringing to your attention the great work that has been done for the good of this State by our Field Secretary, Mr. A. H. Powers. It was his efforts at Sacramento during the last year that enabled us to be as successful as we were. Our President, Mr. Jost, has attended every meeting of the Board during the past year, and his thought and advise has been of great value to us. Vice-President Doyle has unselfishly given a gerat deal of his time towards the successful carrying on of our work as well as Vice-President Aubrey, Treasurer Pearson and the other members of the Board. To these I wish to extend my heartfelt thanks for the assistance given me during the year. In asking to be relieved of the duties of Secretary, I do so because circumstances compel me to. At the Dallas Convention of the National Association. I was elected a Director of the Executive Board for three years. I accepted this honor, knowing the necessity of having the Western States thoroughly organized; feeling that I could do a great deal toward that end, a great deal of my time is taken up in that work now. I am compelled to ask you at this convention to select another worker in the uplifting of the trade to be your Secretary. I have devoted a great deal of my time to this work, without compensation, because I felt that every merchant owes to association effort when he accepts an office of this kind to give it his ardent and enthusiastic support. I will, however, always do all in my power to advance the interests of the State Association.

Frank B. Connolly, Sec'y.

ELKS' HOSPITALITY.

Just after Mr. Connolly had completed his report, Mr. Hale of the Sacramento Association was recognized by President Jost. On behalf of the Elks Mr. Hale offered the freedom of their building to the delegates. This courtesy was greatly appreciated by the visitors.

Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer C. B. Pearson then submitted his report same being as below:

Mr. Pearson referred the convention to Secretary Connolly's Financial Statement, his report being embodied therein.

Report of Field Secretary.

To the Cal. R. G. & M. Ass'n in Convention assembled:

Gentlemen:—As business men, you all realize the necessity of keeping within the limits of your capital and credit.

We have no apologies to offer.

We point to the record of the year to show that we hame "made good" as far as our means permitted.

Our Success.

We, with the help of the Advocate, secured such active co-operation on the part of the grocers and other merchants of California, that we were able to secure the passage of four measures—some entirely on our influence and some with the co-operation of other interests.

2d—We established the fact at Sacramento that the merchants were organized and were a force that had to be considered.

3rd—We were able, with the aid of the Advocate, to engender and maintain an enthusiasm that can be turned into results as soon as we are prepared to undertake the steps necessary to secure the ends the Directors may deem wise.

4th—We have made of the Advocate a machine that can be counted on to pay $100 per month, at least, into the State Treasury during the next year if the Directors give it the same support that they have accorded it during the past three months.

5th—We have learned what the weak associations met to secure continuous success. This is a step towards success that we owe to several apparent failures.

Incidentally, I wish to state here, that a failure is really a success if the failure teaches the right way to do things. Our success with the legislature is a result of previous failures. Our success in assuring profits on certain staples is also the result of previous failures.

What Is Necessary.

The prime essential for success in an organization of business men is a business system that shows on its face that the returns will in all probability be commensurate with the expenditure.

The Field secretary and his co-operating secretaries should be able and CAN deliver to members the following:

1st—A set of collection letters.

2d—A card of prices that the manufact urer will maintain and that the member MUST promise to observe himself and to notify promptly the State Secretary of any cutting.

3d—A Delinquent List.

4th—The ability to act as a unite in bringing pressure to bear on the manufacturer to maintain prices.

5th—The ability to act as a unit in bringing pressure to bear on wholesalers or manufacturers guilty of abusing the trade to secure a correction of the abuse.

6th—Influence with the legislature.

7th—Influence at home.

Depends on Two Things.

A large part of the possibility of the above program depends on two things.

First—The Grocers' Advocate must provide (a) enthusiasm (b) a big stick; and (c) income.

Second—A safe and effective Collection Agency must provide (a) Collecting; (b) a Delinquent List; (c) income.

Third—The individual members must also provide an adequate share of the expense something they will be glad to do when they can see a full return for their investment.

A Collector System.

A Collection System, new to this coast. but with a record of 15 years success in Eastern States offers us one part of our requirements. Messrs Aubry of Stockton and Hanch of Alameda, warmly recommend it for results.

Your Field Secretary, investigated its methods. He went without special interest and with rather a prejudice against the Agency as a result of numerous unfavorable experience with other agencies. He found it something entirely different from any system he had known before and with a record for proven efficiency that convinced him of its worth. To this is added the fact that the agency does not promise to give something for nothing but insists that it wants to be well paid for what it does.

This agency is prepared to make the following offer:

1st—To print a delinquent list.

2d—To pay the Association 10c. for each bill, good, bad, or indifferent submitted to it for collection by the Association secretaries.

3d—To advance the costs where member desires suit brought.

4th—To give a bond guaranteeing the prompt payment of all moneys collected.

5th—To assist the secretaries in securing credit ratings.

6th—To charge only when collections are made.

It demands in return that members shall pay the same rates that all its other clients do.

These rates are as follows:

Each client must pay 50 per cent on the first $50 collected. On all subsequent collections the rate is 10 per cent.

The agency explains that the first bills received are always those that have been turned over to every collector on the map and insists that they make more money on the newer bills at 10 per cent than they do on the first bills at 50 per cent.

My advice is that the directors be instructed to investigate the agency in question with the idea of employing it should its proposition seem desirable.

With a central collecting agency capable of collecting in every remote corner of the State we could then go about organizing the State into districts, each district having a large city as the center of activity and with either that city or the State Secretary as the directing influence.

One distirct could include San Francisco and the cities on the west side of the bay, including San Jose and Los Gatos.

Another could include Alameda County and the east side cities to San Jose.

A third could include San Rafael and its neighbors.

A fourth, Martinez, and its neighbors.

A fifth, Santa Rosa and its neighbors.

A sixth, Sacramento and vicinity.

Stockton and vicinity; Fresno and vicinity; Santa Cruz and vicinity; Eureka and vicinity Chico and vicinity; Nevada City and vicinity. All these can be districted to advantage.

These matters must, of course, be subject to the judgment of the directors.

They are possible now. They would not have been possible twelve months ago.

Under the circumstances, I beg to submit the opinion that the past year has been the most profitable in the light of what we have learned as well as what we have done —in the history of the organization.

Aaron H. Powers,
Field Secretary.

The report of Mr. King, chairman of the Advocate Committee, was deferred until Wednesday morning, owing to that gentleman being unable to be present until that time.

FRESNO REPORTS.

At this juncture Mr. Connolly asked permission to read the following letters, same being of great interest to the convention:

Fresno, Cal., Sept. 6, 1907.
California Retail Grocers' & Merchants' Assn.,
Sacramento, Calif.
Gentlemen:

We are very sorry to say that it will be impossible for us to send a delegate this year to the State Convention; however, in behalf of Fresno, I wish to extend to the 1907 Convention the best wishes for the success of this Convention.

There is one matter we would like to have brought up and that is the policy that the Standard Oil Company is pursuing in this vicinity and I understand throughout the State, and that is that a person can go to our local oil works and buy one can of Gasoline or any other product from them which they carry as cheap as the store-keeper himself can get the same for. They are at present canvassing our territory very thoroughly selling their numerous products, and our merchants are turning them down with a gentle hint why. Some action in regard to this such as a general movement throughout the State I think would bring the desired result and mean a great deal to the retail grocers.

Again wishing you the best of success in your present work, and believe us we heartily co-operate with you in all lines consistent for the welfare of the grocers, we beg to remain, Respectfully,

Fresno Grocers' Ass'n.,
L. R. Eclestor, Sec.

OREGON'S ENCOURAGEMENT.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 4, 1907.

California Retail Grocers Association,
Sacramento, Cal.
Gentlemen:

The grocers of Oregon greet you and hope that deliberations of this convention will bring you unbounded results. We look to your organization as the parent of the "fixed priced idea," and you have shown greater activity than anyone towards accomplishing what we believe to be the only solution of price-cutting evil. The California idea has become firmly rooted in the minds of the merchants of the Beaver State and the results already have gone far beyond our expectations. We hope that when the next national convention is held that we can send a delegation to Boston that will stand shoulder to shoulder with our California brethren in carrying on this fight. We congratulate you upon the present good you have accomplished through the passage of good laws and we trust that your future may be even greater than the past year's work has shown These are the greetings we send you from Oregon. Respectfully,

Chas. B. Merrick,
Secretary Oregon Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association.

DENVER SENDS GREETINGS.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 4, 1907.
California Retail Grocers Association,
In Meeting Assembled.
Gentlemen; Greetings:—

We have just celebrated the Tenth Anniversary of the incorporation of this Association. We had a lunch at Albany Hotel, at which a representative body of merchants were present. The many things accomplished in Denver for the benefit of the general business were noticed. The outlook of the future as to this city considered.

The benefits to the general trade and to Denver in particular, of the Maintainance of the Retail Price by the Manufacturer of First Class Goods were brought out.

National Secretary John A. Green was with us and outlined for those present some of the matters which were before the National Association in his usual able and convincing manner, especially calling attention to the Parcel Post agitation.

We had present our mayor, representatives of various jobbing houses and manufactorys, and the press.

We desire to offer California hearty encouragement in the Association work, believing that it is right, just and very necessary for the benefits of the entire trade, and that a strong, loyal Association benefits the grocers in any city, and that anything that benefits a business in general must be of benefit to the individual.

Altogether a very enjoyable and instructive evening was passed.

Very respectfully,
The Denver Retail Grocers' Ass'n.,
S. W. Babcock, Sec.

SECRETARY GREEN INTRODUCED.

Mr. John A. Green, Secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers, was then introduced to the convention. Mr. Green made a few remarks of great weight but reserved himself for his speech scheduled for Wednesday A. M. (which appears elsewhere in this issue.)

On motion at 4:15 p. m. the convention was declared adjourned until 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Visit State Fair.

In the evening the delegates and their ladies were entertained at the State Fair. The exhibition was complete in every particular and the grocers were much interested in the displays.

Egg-O-See Pierce was on hand at his booth and presented each of the delegates with a handsome aluminum-bound memorandum book.

SECOND DAY.

WEDNESDAY SEPTEMBER 11.

The Convention came to order at 10.30 A. M.

The various committees who were to make reports at this time were called on in the following order:

Committee on Credentials:. O'Connor, Chairman. After some discussion the various recommendations of the Committee were accepted and the various delegations given proper standing in the convention.

Committee on Rules and Order of Business.—Paulding: Chairman, submitted its report which was read and accepted.

Committee on Auditing, Meacham, Chairman, submitted its report setting forth that the books of Treasurer Pearson and Secretary Connolly were in perfect order accepted as read.

"ADVOCATE REPORT."

The chairman of the "Advocate" Committee then asked leave to present the following report, which was read and adapted:

Report of the Grocers Advocate Committee.
J. W. King, Chairman.

In the beginning, I wish to say that I took hold of the management of the Advocate on June 1st. Prior to that time, only desultory attention had been given to the paper and, although we had not invested a five cent piece and failed to assist the management of the paper as had been agreed upon at our last Convention, yet our interests were safe-guarded in every particular and we not only had a medium of publicity that enabled us to secure results at Sacramento worth thousands of dollars to every merchant in the State of California but we were able to secure the services of a capable Field Secretary who knew that the Advocate was earning money (although those earnings were at the time shown only by ledger accounts.)

At the convention at Oakland, numerous members told in fervid terms what they would do to help make the paper a source of income for our Association. Our experience of the last few months have shown that they could have done these things and more too if they had only made a slight attempt to redeem their promises. Only seven men, as far as I can learn tried to do anything. These men were A. A. Jost of Sacramento, H. Hauch and L. Warnke of Alameda, H. Duncan of Oakland and Geo. B. Doyle, F. B. Connolly and myself of San Francisco. Only Mr. Hauch secured any considerable amount of advertising for the paper by unassisted individual effort. The rest of us helped by putting in a word at the request of the management where it was known that a word would do us the most good. The fact that these slight efforts should have accomplished so much makes it easy for us to realize how much we could have done had we each of us given some systematic aid and particularly, if some help had been extended by the forces of Southern California.

On assuming charge of the management of the paper on June 1st, my first step was to put an expert on the books in order to have an accurate scientific review of the condition of the paper's affairs prepared for the Association. We found that while some of the accounts had been carelessly kept, that this was due to an attempt on the part of the management to do too much wih too little help and that every right of the Association had been honestly observed.

Few of our members realize what is involved in the running of a publication involving $10,000 a year. If it were a strictly cash business, it would be smooth sailing. But the business had, of necessity, to be done on a credit basis. There were many Eastern advertisers of unquestioned credit who had to be carried for from thirty to ninety days and nearly, if not quite, a thousand merchants whose subscription money was carried as an asset until bills could be presented to the merchants in question. Our Association had made no arrangement to finance this business of ours and, as a consequence, it was done by Mr Powers from whom we had secured the paper.

When I took control of the management of the paper, there had been earned enough to enable us to finance the paper without further assistance by Mr. Powers although our books show about $1,400 due for subscriptions on September 1st and somewhat more due for advertising, with $275.70 in our bank account and $166.94 invested in sundry property. Altogether, we have over $3,000 of assets that can be and WILL be turned into cash much of it in the course of the next 60 days, while our liabilities, outside of the money advanced to finance our paper by Mr. Powers (this amounts to $718.07 at the present time) is only $816.35.

While it is necessary for the Advocate to retain enough money in its treasury to meet its current bills as they come due, yet it gives me great pleasure to be able to turn over to our treasurer a check for $300 and to assure him that this is only an earnest of what is to come now that the paper has earned enough money to finance itself, if the members will only do their part in helping reap the harvest of profits that is at hand if we will do our share.

I wish to speak here of the work of the men who are chiefly responsible for the results I am able to report. I refer to Mr Aaron H. Powers and Mr. Earl D. Eddy and their assistant Mr. Paul Carew. Mr Powers as our Field Secretary, made use of the Advocate as a weekly circular for our Association and we all know how much the cheering and logical editorials of the paper affected US, as individuals in keeping up our faith in our organization and in the possibility of ultimate success for efforts, a confidence that is absolutely necessary if men are to be induced to continue ENTHUSIASTCALLY in any work [illegible] for the Association engendered by the Advocate is, in my opinion of much greater value to us than the money the paper has earned, although that return will, I am satisfied, make it possible for us to get results in the future that were impossible in the past merely because we [illegible] essential to work the splendid machine that had been created after seven years of continuous effort on the part of those men who realized how much could be [illegible] bringing a measure of the [illegible] chants who needed it, not so much for their own guidance as [illegible] great class of men who do not know the rudiments of successful merchandising along lines that scientific observation has shown marks the difference between success and bankruptcy.

With Mr. Powers watching the Association's end of the paper, we would still have failed of success had we not had the services of Mr. Eddy. This young gentlemen had worked among the jobbers as a broker for some years and was well and favorably known by them. He brought to our service a mind trained in business methods as well as an enthusiasm that has made him devote a larger measure of time and effort to our work than we could ever have paid for. The Points to Watch department, the market reports, the price lists and several campaigns for better methods, such as honest weights and measures, etc, we owe to Mr. Eddy. We also owe to him much of our advertising which he has secured, assisted by the influence of our organization and as a result of a consistent and persistent follow-up system.

Mr. Carew has been the "Detail" man. To him has fallen the work of gleaning the Eastern Trade papers to learn things that would be of value to the grocers of the Pacific Coast. The numerous other things necessary to get together what would be of the most interest to the Advocate's readers have also been entrusted to him as well as much of the responsibility for the publication of the paper.

In conclusion, I wish to call to your attention that it would have cost us a great deal of money, instead of none at all, if we had tried to get out a publication on the lines of the Advocate. While we might have succeeded in getting out a paper that would have earned us more money in the beginning, we could not have produced a publication that we would have been sure was read by every man who got it EVERY week. This one fact marks the Advocate's worth. It should also be borne in mind that the creation of another sheet by us for purposes of revenue only would have destroyed the Advocate through the efforts of whose management the State Association was brought into existance and by whose untiring efforts and unstinted expenditure of money and brains at critical periods, our organization was able to tide over trying periods and achieve results that would have otherwise been beyond our reach. These facts, as a matter of course, involved an implied obligation which I am very pleased to know we will in a measure be able to satisfy with much profit to our organization.

Our agreement with Mr. Powers, as manager of the Advocate Publishing Co., involved the payment on our part to the Advocate of 12½ per cent of the net earnings of the paper during the first year of our holding of it. At the end of that period, we were to have the right to purchase the paper for $10,000 paying the money out of the earnings of the paper and paying 6 per cent interest on the money due, the sum of $1,000 to be payable at the end of each year.

Mr. Powers has prepared a proposition that will be greatly in the interest of our organization and I would suggest that the new Board of Directors be given full power to act in the matter of the Advocate when the time for a new contract arrives on October 1st.

Respectfully submitted.
JOHN W. KING.

Letter From Newberry.

Mr. Connolly asked permission to read a letter just received from J. R. Newberry of Los Angeles, (at present in the East.) Mr. Newberry said:

"I am very sorry that I could not make my report to the Convention in person. The past two months have been spent by myself in the Eastern markets and individually I have attended both the Wholesaler's Convention, one held in Chicago and the other in Baltimore. I attended both of these Conventions strictly as an inspector to listen and to learn and I found many things that are of vital interest to us as a State and to our local organizations; both Conventions reiterated their former position, making the qualifications for membership in their organization as men or firms who sold to wholesalers and retailers only.

Now, I wish to say that the rank and file and probably 75 per cent of the wholesalers that were represented in numbers in Chicago and Baltimore also are firm adherents to the spirit, as well as to the literal meaning of their qualifications. The question comes now for us as retailers—not as we had supposed to have a definition of a wholesaler, but the fact of it is for us to examine ourselves and find out what is a retailer. As I said before, I believe a majority of the men who are in the wholesale trade today in numbers give the definition of a retailer as a man who sells goods over the counter to the consuming trade. There is another and a minority that claim the right to sell section houses, logging camps, boarding houses, restaurants, hotels and deem them as retailers.

Now, I feel that the Convention at Sacramento should take a decided stand upon this matter and if the retailers of this country and the retailers of the Pacific Coast will want a stand that they should take, let them appoint a committee and make the matter very plain and let there be a decision reached on this to know just what the true meaning of a retailer grocer is. I believe that a majority of the jobbing distributers of this country want to work in absolute harmony with the retail trade and are willing to discuss this matter and settle the lines between the two factors. This, in my mind, is the only difference between the two factors—the wholesaler and the retailer that keeps up any friction whatever. There is a unanimity practically of opinions that the two factors should work absolutely in harmony and I believe they can and will, but this one friction point is between them. Let every effort be made to solve this problem. With any united effort on the part of the retailer the jobber will gradually acquiesce. I know from a positive fact that the manufacturers of this country are willing to work with both of the factors in the distributing trade, but are very anxious that this point should be settled. When this question is settled, then the question of fixed prices can be easily handled.

The great education idea is moving a great deal faster in the Eastern country than you have any idea. The eyes of the entire American nation are looking towards California and are wonderfully sanguine of the success of the fixed price proposition. No manufacturer of any prominence here but what considers it not an inovation, but in the line of progressive American commercialism and that it is bound to win and we have a proud distinction of being the solvers of this great problem with such men as A. Schilling & Co., Bishop & Co., and C. P. Grogan who made a gallant fight in the olive oil proposition. Manufacturers are willing to now endorse this problem very freely. They were first afraid of the Cartwright law. This is now becoming a much talked of law and old Ohio is not only furnishing Presidents, but is is furnishing a solution to the commercialism which is bound to sweep the country. Be of good cheer, the dawn is breaking for the independence of the retail grocery business and with that comes its responsiblity, for we then must make a success of the "open door". An old saying and a true one: "In order to drive the rats out you must let the sunlight in" and the more you explain this proposition the more enthusiastic are manufactureres to support us. It is and will be a great success. Yours,

J. R. NEWBURY by J. F. P.

PROFITS AND SPECIAL SALES.

Mr. W. E. O'Connor, Secretary of the Stockton Association was then introduced to the convention. Mr. O'Connor spoke at length on "Profits and Special Sales" his remarks being as below:

In assigning to me the subject "Profit and Special Sales" the State Board of Directors did not consult me or give me a chance to say whether or no I would be willing to handle this subject. When first I learned that a subject of this character had been assigned to me, I protested to the local members of the State Board against taking hold of it, fully realizing that there are a large number of members who are much better qualified than I am to do the subject justice. At the following meeting of the Board my protest seems to have received little or no consideration, for on the return of the Stockton representatives on that august body, I was informed that the Board did not see fit to re-assign the subject. This left but one course open to me, and that was to bow my head in gentle submission to the wishes or dictates of my superiors.

I did not, in writing these notes receive from this body of gentlemen of whom I have spoken, any information as to what they desired to bring out at this meeting, or on which side of this question they desired me to take issue, and since they did not see fit to give me the necessary information, I did not consult them relative to what they expected of me.

I have taken up the matter briefly and endeavored to bring to the surface what appears to me the most logical conclusions, and with your kind permission I will offer a few pages for your consideration and criticism, attaching thereto the necessary apologies for my shortcomings.

Harmonious Aanalysis Imposisble.

The subject "Profit and Special Sales" seems to me to be one that does not permit of a harmonious analysis. Profit means not only the difference between the net cost and the net selling price of an article, but it also means a wide enough margin between the above extremes to enable the merchant or speculator to meet all contingent expenses connected with the handling of same, and have added thereto a sufficient sum which shall be designated as a profit. The foundation on which nearly every great manufacturing institutions in this country was built, is that every article manufactured must show a reasonable margin or profit. The man who engages in either merchandising or manufacturing must know to a minimum, just what the production of each and every article he makes or handles has cost him, otherwise unless fortune has smiled on him he will soon find his way to financial embarrassment and oblivion, as many of our mushroom growths of commercial institutions have recently found.

The men who have success are the men who have gone into business on a profit making basis, fully conversant with the various details connected there-with, alive and keen to take advantage of all channels open to successful operation, and equally keen to strengthen all points of a perceptable weakness.

Department Stores Cited.

In handling the "Special Sales" end of this subject, we may justly expect opposition from its exponents, and they will point with pride to the great merchant kings of America's great metropolises who have achieved unbounded success along the lines of great "Special Sales" advertisements. They will deduce from this millionaire list of successes, such names as Marshall Field, John Wanamaker, Wm. T. Stewart and many others. These men were a success beyond a question of doubt their genius was a marvel and they possessed of the most fertile brains of their time, but gentlemen of this convention they were not exclusive grocers and did not make these successes by giving "Special Sales" as grocers only. If they gave a special sale on groceries they had a multiplicity of other lines on which they derived long profits when compared with the general profits, made by grocers.

Charged to Advertising.

The losses sustained under a system of this character is generally charged to advertising.

How many men have you seen who have made a success by giving special sales on groceries where he is an exclusive grocer?

It is true you can point too a few, but if these few are a big success you will find on investigation that they are making an extremely long profit on many articles they handle other than those covered by the "Special Sales Ad" in order to recoup some of their losses. The advocacy of special sales means the destroying of the profits or selling prices on every article touched by this system. A merchant in a city or town can run special sales and make a partial success of it, provided the other merchant sit idly by and not meet the competition he offers, but if Jones runs a special sale ad, all the Smiths and Brows in business can do likewise, and when they have finished their cut-throat policy and reduced everything to almost cost, they may get together and shake hands and say to themselves "We have been engaged in a nice piece of foolishness."

Associations Opposed to Sales.

The policy upon which this Association with its numerous affiliating organizations was builded will not permit of "Special Sales". It is not the purpose of this organization to make exorbitant profits on any article, but it has been established as a sound principle among the majority of the Affiliating Associations "That every article according to its sale must carry its share of profit giving returns."

The man in the grocery business who adheres to the special sales policy is an enemy to all organized efforts on the part of the grocers to better their conditions and bring their chosen vocation up to the standard of commercial equality to which it justly belongs.

Failures Everywhere.

From one end of the State of California to the other, in almost every City and Town, can be found the skeletons of the once prosperous special sales artist in the grocery business, they prospered during the green spring of their youths, but as the sun of time reached the mid-summer of their careers, and turned into the shadows, of the fall, they began to wane and to wither, soon they will be no more, financial embaressment will have wiped them from our midst, and in their stead will have come a wiser, better, and a more intelligent lot of men, who are steadfast in their belief in the principals of righteousness and unselfishness. You show me one dozen advocates of "Special Sales" and I will show you eleven stores filled with cheap trashy goods that are partly used for this very purposes.

Harmony Destroyed.

Harmony, good will and unity cannot exist among grocers where these are those in a community who take advantage of their fellow competitors by slaughtering the price of an article thorugh the medium of "Special Sales."

Those who make use of this "Special Sales" plan of building up their business are not in harmony with that "live and let live" policy that has become so general among the best class of business men of this day. Their was a time not many years ago when a merchant, as an individual, was justified in the adoption of most any competitive measure, for in his field of industry he found a regular dog in a manger proposition to go up against: he found that the grocery man was one of the biggest slaves of a self-cultivated system of iniquity that it was possible for him to be, he kept his place of business open every night of the week until 9 or 10 o'clock, he want only desecrated the Sabbath day, that day that God had set aside for rest and worship, he recognized as holidays neither the birthday of Christ, the birth day of the New Year, the birth of this Republic, the birthday of our Golden State or the day of General Thanksgiving: these are some of the iniquities that in a great measure are the results of Brown offering special sales to-day, Smith offering special sales to-morrow, and Jones offering special sales the next day, thereby creating a feeling of rivalry and hatred, and a desire to go the other fellow one better on any proposition he may make. Looking over the field and comparing the conditions that were, with those that are, we must confess, whether we are an advocate of 'Special Sales" or not, that the present harmonious, intelligent and interchangeamle system of information now in operation under the present plan of organization and affiliation cannot long endure, if one, two or three merchants in a community are permitted to bait the trade by a special weekly sale of staples at cut rate prices.

Taking all the bad traits of business of which we may complain, there is none that can equal the "Special Sales" system, it has done more to rob the dealers of their just profits than anything that they have yet encountered, it has done more to create enemies where friendship and harmony should exist, it has done more to demoralize the fixed or established selling price of articles than anything else. So notorious has this "Special Sales" proposition become in times past, that many of the manufacturers of unperishable goods have established a price at which their wares must be sold. This latter policy is to-day striking terror to the "Special Sales" artist and taking from him many of the bludgeons with which he has clubbed his weaker competitors.

ADDRESS OF JOHN A. GREEN.

The hour of 11:30 having arrived Mr. Jost, in a few well chosen words introduced Mr. John A. Green, Secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers. Mr. Green made an address which we hope every reader of the "Advocate" will carefully read and absorb. In a very forceful manner Mr. Green portrayed to the convention many points which will unquestionally have a most salutary effect upon those who were fortunate enough to hear it. Mr. Green said:

I bring to you the greetings of the Entire Eastern States as well as the officers of the National Association.

When invited by your officers and Mr. Connolly to make a visit to your City, I realy could not see where I could afford the time to make the visit, but I assure you it gives me the greatest pleasure to be with you and tell you briefly of the work as it is progressing in the several states it has been my privilege to attend.

Vermont's Progress.

Soon after the National Convention I made a trip through the entire East, beginning at Vermont, where they organized a new State Association under the most favorable circumstances.

There were present at that meeting over 100 delegates; a delegation from Canada (to see how the American managed their conventions) and myself being the visitors

It was surprising with what anxiety and interest the merchants of the State gathered together and discussed the different problems that seemed to interest each, and I think that for a new beginning, Vermont is doing herself wonderfully proud.

Massachusetts Results.

It was my privilege next to attend the Massachusetts Convention, this being the third. Having attended the two preceding ones, could well mark the growth of the Association.

I was very pleased to see that the calibre of the merchants had improved as well as the numbers.

There were at the Massachusetts Convention representatives of the very best retail houses in the State, as well as the Vice President of the Wholesale Grocers Association, who delivered a remarkable address asking for the co-operation of the retailer with the wholesaler, and that a committee be oppointed to meet with the wholesalers and talk over the several things that were of mutual interest.

This, you realize, is quite an advance of the position which we held a few years ago.

New Hampshire and Maine.

The meetings in New Hampshire and Maine were fully as interesting and as full of encouragment.

Kentucky.

My next visit was into Kentucky. They have no State Association in Kentucky, but I am sure before the National Convention that we shall have a State Association in that State.

North Carolina.

The North Carolina convention which convened at Greensboro was, I think, the largest attended of any convention it has been my privilege to attend during the last year. The hall was full at the three sessions the first day, and two sessions the succeeding days of the convention lasting three days.

Much good has been done indeed by the merchants of North Carolina to improve their condition along the lines of Railroad rates, Credit rating, and indeed everything that tends to elevate and improve the retail business in the State.

New York.

The New York State convention was a splendid success. Some of the most remarkable addresses were made at that convention that it has been my privilege to listen to, the most remarkable being that of Mr. L. J. Callanan, giving his experience as sixty years a grocer, a most remarkable record of a most remarkable man

The convention at Pennsylvania held on the 20th to the 23rd of August was very largely attended, there being 200 associations represented by 250 delegates. What proved to be the best part of the convention was the experience of the delegates and the qustion box. These two numbers brought forth much discussion, and the debate at all times was lively on all questions brought before the convention. The officers with one exception were all relected. Mr. Albert Kaiser of Philadelphia being again elected President, serving every year since the organization was effected. The addresses were well thought out, and will result in much information for the benefit of the trade at large.

I addressed the convention on the second day of the session.

Legislative Accomplishments.

It is with much satisfaction that we look on the accomplishments of the past year. The efforts put forth by some of the Missouri Legislator to repeal their Garnishment Law met with defeat through the influence of the merchants of the State of Missouri. The same influence were at work in the Ohio Legislature and met with the same fate.

The passing of the Wife's Liability Bill by the New York Legislators only to be vetoed by Governor Hughes was another accomplishment that the Merchant's Association might well be proud of. Pennsylvania got their Bill to the Governor, who vetoed it Nebraska, Iowa and California all were successful in getting their Garnishment Bills through the Legislature, and the passing of the National Pure Food Bill with the Guarantee Clause was all that we could have wished for.

Lack of Appreciation.

How little you know of the sacrifice of time and efforts put forth in your be-half Could the merchants of any State realize the benefit derived and the efforts and sacrifice of those who have their matters, in charge, I am sure there would be a much different feeling, and a more enthusastic support of the officers than at the present time.

Watch Your Legislators.

Be sure that the men who seek your franchise for a term in the Legislature are men after your own way of thinking, who have the welfare of the merchants at heart

Necessity of Organization.

Now Gentlemen I assure you it affords me the greatest pleasure to be permitted to appear here to-day and talk to you on the necessity of organization.

As I look into your faces and know with what expectancy you have anticipated this meeting, the question comes to me as to how best can I present to you the good things that will come out of organization, and to make you see them as I know them myself from my years of practical experience. That there is a great change taking place in the business world of to-day we all realize. That new methods are being thought out, new conditions springing into existence, large corporations being organized for self-protection, and great trusts being formed to control every situation in the world.

The retail interests have been slow to awaken to conditions as they exist.

Co-operation the Keynote.

We have made great gains during the year. Have increased in membership, importance, and influence. Our National Association has the confidence of the jobbers and manufacturers, but as the years roll on, we are confronted by new conditions and problems which must be met and solved. Many of them of such magnitude as the individual cannot cope with, and can be brought to a successfull issue through associated effort only.

Here lies the strength and benefit of the association, but the measure of our strength and the success of it depends entirely on the loyalty of our members.

Co-operation, gentlemen, is the key-note to-day in business of every kind. Men in all branches form themselves into bodies for the purposes of mutual protection, and where this is done, the purpose is laudable and successfull.

We should not relax in our efforts to confine the distribution of goods of all kinds to the retail trade, and not have it diverted into other channels to be made leaders of.

The perfection of the idea that we ar in businss for a living and not to kill off our competitors, fills us with a spirit of friendship and good will towards our competitors We should join hands and help one another, instead of destroying.

Organization Imperative.

Those of us who have studied, and are familiar with the situation as it exists, believe that the future welfare of the retailers of the United States demands that they be thoroughly organized. That the retailers should work in conjunction with the jobbers and manufacturers. That there should be a feeling of friendliness and co-operation between ourselves and these two larger interests.

Without our organization we are pworeless. No matter what the influence of the individual may be, that influence is shown of its strength when not co-operating with each other. But through our organization and our united efforts we expect to be able to accomplish almost anything undertaken for the benefit of the retailer.

Every man wants, to, and does exert influence, but the concerted action of a well organized body of men, will, if wisely directed, make for the best order of influence and attain the maximum power.

Organization, in the sphere of business, has been the dominant idea for a decade. By and through it wonderful accomplishments have been made. Many of the so-called trusts have reached the zenith of their strength and prosperity within this period, and while it is a debatable question as to whether or not some of them are against the public welfare, yet they nevertheless offer an indisputable evidence of the effect of concentrated effort and purpose.

Benefits many.

The benefits to be derived from organization are many. If there was no other thing accomplished than the getting together, the exchanging of ideas, discussing the several topics that are of vital interest to you as merchants, it would pay you ten fold.

Proven Results.

While our organization is still in its infancy, the results are so far reaching and stand out so prominent that it might be well for a few moments to draw a comparison. Take for instance:

A few years ago the Grocer was an unknown quantity in the business world. He was considered no better than the average laborer, working sixteen or seventeen hours a day, and I am afraid some are still at the old way of doing business, having not one moment for self culture or the pleasure of his family.

To-day we find the grocer in the front ranks of the business men of the country, as much sought after, as much respected, his opinions accepted, and above all these, his influence for all that is good is being felt in every part of this fair land.

What brought all this about? Organization. And to those men who in every community have sacrificed time, money and personal influence for the good of their fellow merchants we owe much.

Came to Encourage.

I came here to encourage you in your good work.

This coming together is what you need. The interest you show in your work speaks well for the future organization in your City and State. The strength of your organization lies in Association. The coming together, elbow touching elbow, heart to heart talk. This will lead to friendship. Business competition will really become business association as it were. This organization, this association, this friendship will lead each of you to sacrifice for one another's interests, believing that the good of one is the benefit of all. (Applause)

Power of Doing Good.

The retail merchant's power for doing good and moulding public opinion is unlimtedi He has it in his power to exert a wonderful influence in his community. Every house is open to him.

A great many people will take his opinion for granted because of his integrity of character and business principles.

Take a man who has these characteristics embodied in his make-up, and you will find emenating from his personality, a quiet, goodly influence, that will permeate the entire neighborhood.

It is men of this kind who are raising the standard of morality and the higher the standard of morality, the safer it is for you and me to do business. The more we extend our organization, the more influence we wield.

Radicalism Opposed.

We must not be too radical, but rather conservative, meeting business propositions with cool, deliberate judgment, so that we can at all times command the respect of both the manufacturer and jobber. But let me tell you, we can never wield the influence, or command the respect as long as we hold out our right hand for money and undertake to adjust with the other.

Unbounded Possibilities.

Your organization, Gentlemen, has unbounded possibilities in the next few years. All cannot be done at once, but once we can show to the manufacturers and jobbbers that our principles are right and broad and just, backed by an organization that is a unit, then only will we be able to enforce our demands.

Such organizations as these show the strides of civilization in modern business. It is only a short time since, when the policy of the business man in any line was "Every man for himself." Not so to-day.

Helping the Other Fellow.

Through our organization we are helping the man who is not as agressive as we are. You help one another, and in helping one another, you help the whole body an dthe general citizenship.

A great army without effecient generalship would not be successfull; but the association that can stamp itself indelibly on eht community in which it lives, will be impressive and nowerful, and to make these conditions, I repeat we must act in unity.

Centralization of Capital Menace.

What I said to you through the Trade Press about the Centralization of Capital making great inroads into the retail trade of every city, town, and village of the United States is more true to-day that it was at that time, and you will more fully realize now my warnings to you of its intent to use its influence in the Congress of the United States with your experience of last winter in your efforts to defeat the Parcels Post Bill, and its never ceasing endeavors up to the present time.

The Retail Trade came nobly to our assistance, and responded liberally both in our efforts in be-half of the Pure Food Law, and as against the Parcels Post.

We are soon to elect men to represent us in Congress.

We should know that the man who represents us does not cater to the element that is antagonistic to the interests of the business men.

The aspirants for National political honors will soon be busy mixing with the people. Courting the friendship and good will of all, especially the business man, whose influence he realizes to be of much importance.

Then will be the time for everyone approached to make it his duty to secure from the different candidates a promise to assist in any legislation for the interest of the retail merchant, and to oppose any legislation looking up to the encroachment of the Mail Order evil.

Make Your Influence Felt.

Then will be your opportunity to make your influence felt.

More can be done at this time to secure protection to the retail interests with less effort and more assurance of success than can be done in the six months session of Congress.

If we had taken this precaution a few years ago, such a Bill as the Henry Bill would never have made its appearance. The Amendent to the Bankruptcy Law making it impossible for anyone to take advantage of it to defeat a credit for the necessaries of life would have been passed. The Dixon Bill giving the retail merchant the right to attach the wages of a civil service employee for the necessaries of life would have been a law.

Competition Necessary.

We have no doubt all of us felt the effects of unjust and unnecessary competition, and yet competition, to a certain extent, is the life of trade. Without it we are apt to grow selfish and arbitrary. It is a spur to urge us on to energetic application to business, and without it, I fear many of us would languish and die, but I believe co-operation through our association will remove all serious obstacles out of our way.

Human nature is not perfect, neither are all merchants absolutely truthful, but it is a known fact that the merchant whose business methods are far from the ideal, becomes a better and more reliable merchant when he has joined the association. So that through the association we expect to better our conditions along these lines.

It is possible for us by working upon broader principles and along generous and helpful lines to break down prejudice and build up friendship without abating one whit our efforts to secure business and make a reasonable profit.

Dictation by Consumer.

For years the retailer has had practically nothing to say in regard to how he should conduct his business. The consumer dictating entirely his methods, never considering the cost.

Things are gradually being changed, so that now the merchant, through his organization has begun to realize that he and not the consumer should manage his affairs. New methods are being installed, certain eration and exchanging of ideas of the merchants of the different associations.

It is but a short time since it was almost considered a crime to ask man to pay his account when due and mre so to inquire into his credit.

We have almost outlived this condition, but unfortunately there is enough left to make it uncomfortable.

Bills Before Congress.

Let us consider for a short time two of the bills before Congress that are of the utmost importance to the retailers of the United States, namely, the amendent to the Bankruptcy Act, and the Parcels Post.

Bankruptcy Act.

Through a discussion in regard to the Bankruptcy Law, some points have recently been brought out that might well be placed before you for your consideration.

COFFEE.

C. E. Bickford reports under date of Sept. 3rd:

The active demand noted in our last circular continued during August, the month's deliveries totaling 33,678 bags against 26,000 bags in August last year. A steadily hardening tendency in prices of mild coffees in all markets has tempted buyers to deviate from their hand to mouth policy, and buying has been considerably more spirited than for the past several months. The arrivals in this market to date now exceed the total receipts of any previous year. Deliveries however have fully kept pace with the heavy arrivals, and are well above the average deliveries to the same period of the past five years.

July-August receipts of Santos and Rio have been light and below the average of the past 4 years for these months. The New York market has been steady during the month, although trading has been light. Spot Brazil coffees show a decline of $\frac{1}{16}$c since August 1st, while Central American and other mild coffees are quoted from 3/8c to ½c higher there.

RICE.

Crowley, La., Sept. 1.—"The Rice Journal" says:

The end of August finds harvest just beginning in the Gulf Coast rice belt. Only the earliest of the Honduras rice has been harvested and threshed, but the Honduras generally is getting ready for cutting and the first week in Sep-is a great help to any grocer because it gives such complete satisfaction. It will aid in building up a permanent coffee trade among housewives who want the best.

FOLGER'S GOLDEN GATE COFFEE

The quality of Folger's Golden Gate Coffee is always the same—smooth—rich—aromatic.

tember will see the harvest well under way. By the middle of September mill receipts, what at this time are inconsiderable, will begin to assume large volume.

Only generalties as to quality and yield are safe at this time, and guesses as to the acreage are really idle, although it may be stated that the general impression is that the Louisiana acreage is approximately that of last year, while the Texas acreage is larger by from ten to twenty per cent.

The quality of the early rice, as shown by the first receipts is usually good. The yield is also above the average.

Market conditions are favorable The mills are not rushing into the market as eagerly as in some farmer years, seeming to desire to wait until the price of clean has become reasonably fixed. The telegraph strike may hinder the movement of the crop a little if it continues.

The general outlook for rice, especially for the produces, never appeared better than it does at this time.

M. Phillips & Co., report under date of Sept. 10:

The market for the past week has been active owing to the demand of local and out of town jobbers who have had to replenish their stocks. Assortments are badly broken, there being very few choice grades in stock. Cable advices from Japan note an advance of 10c over previous quotations.

Domestic Japan Rices are becoming very scarce and prices have advanced ⅛c.

A few sacks of New Crop Rice have been received by two mills in Crowley but this will not be milled for a week or so and will be taken up at full prices by nearby dealers.

We will have no New Fancy Head Rice to offer for shipment from mills before Sept. 15th and it will take at least thirty days before cars can be brought through from the South.

Japans will be marketed about thirty days later.

DRIED FRUIT ETC.

Under date of Sept. 7. "Cal. Fruit Grower" says: "While the amount of new business passing in cured fruits is not startling, the general tone of the market is firmer this week than it has been since the sulfur excitement began some weeks ago. Peaches are back to the point where they were prior to the easing off of the market following the uncertainty of the situation over the matter of sulfuring, and packers have advanced their prices to growers several points during the past ten days. When confidence in the future of the situation so far as sulfur is concerned began to return and packers went into the fields to buy, some little business was done on the basis of 9c to growers. This was followed by increased offerings on the part of one packer over another of¼c at a time until at this writing growers are back to 10c basis again and sales being made at that figure. A number of the packers found themselves short some small quantities and have been taking peaches under cover to fill these requirements at prices ranging from 9 and 10c, as noted. Asking prices now for packed goods are on the basis of 10¾ and 11c for choice yetllows in 50s.

Other lines of cured fruit remain without much alteration or animation except apples, which are firmer but not quotably higher than last week. Figs are going out from Fresno in carload lots.

The prune market shows indications of increased strength this week and values are on a little higher plane. What few old prunes there are left are steadier and not subject to such a wide range of values as heretofore; 1907 crop are quotable ¼c higher than one week ago.

Santa Clara growers are generally asking 5c, and at least one sale at 5¼c is among our reports. But a small proportion of prune crop remains still in first hands, and we do not learn of many packers that are long any considerable amount. The prune market looks at this juncture to be in good shape for the future. Some packers are not quoting Santa Claras at the moment and do not care to do so until they know they will have the goods in hand when needed. Speculation is an unknown term this season, and dealers have for the most part bought and sold simultaneously.

The raisin crop is getting on to the trays in Fresno County, and should the weather prove at all favorable for curing, raisins will be ready for shipment early this year. Quotations do not show any material change since last week with the exception of a slight hardening in seedless in some cases and perhaps in 4-crown loose. Most seeded quotations are on the basis of 8¾c for fancy No. 16 with choice at 8¼ and 8½c. These figures, however, are subject to variation as to packer.

A little rain fell in the Fresno district the other day, but so very little as to be of no consequence. The ultimate size of the raisin pack this year will depend much on the weather. Reports continue to come from New York of a curtailed production in Smyrna Sultanas this year and consequent advance in quotations. All such reports that come to our notice advise more or less of their lack of confirmation, but the same advices continue to appear. The Greek currant retention has been fixed at 35 per cent this year in currants on 66,000 tons and in cash on the balance of the crop, and the market in Greece is reported firmer in consequence.

PRUNES.

It is reported fros San Jose that prune drying is under way, and as receipts at the packing houses will be heavy by September 1st most of the packers are making arrangements to get under way at that date. The feeiing in prunes continues strong, though orders are no more plentiful than they have been for some weeks past. The total crop of California will be less than was anticipated some little time back owing to the very heavy dropping in many of the outside districts, particularly San Joaquin valley.

DATES.

The new crop of Hallowee dates is expected to be considerably shorter than that of last season.

HONEY.

..Los Angeles.—The Southern California honey crop is seriously hampered by unfavorable weather. To date the product in the hives is computed at much less than last year. In the event of continued cloudy and chilly weather the season's output will be greatly lessened. Spot stock has been about cleared off the market and a short yield will exert a decided change on future prices. The request for honey is increasing, and added interest is exhibited in the occupation of cultivating apiaries.

CANNED GOOD.

..Under date of Sept 7 "Cal. Fruit Grower" says: "The rush of peaches which came in all at once this year on California packers is abated. Many canneries are still wrestling with the help problem. Tomatoes are beginning to demand packers' attention, and under favorable weather conditions a good sized pack of this vegetable will be made. Some business is being done by California canners in this line at 82½ and 85c with reports of some sales as high as 87½c for immediate delivery. Canners generally have booked all the fruit business they can take care of, and the chief interest lies in the proportion of deliveries of the various grades and varieties that can be made.

Eastern markets report canned fruits very firm, both for California and eastern goods, with very little spot stuff offering anywhere. Receipts of peaches at Baltimore continue light and the pack will be very small. The eastern tomato market shows practically no substantial changes in the situation. Owing to the scarcity of raw material packers are not at all anxious and are in many cases not quoting. Canned corn, which was for so many, many months weak and cheap, has been improving of late and a better feeling is now noted through the unfavorable crop outlook in many sections. Guessing on the 1907 pack places the probable output at 6,500,000 to 7,500,000 cases, which is way below any since 1903. Corn and tomato packing East will be a question of weather, and as packing started late, the season will be a short one. Maryland canners have been paying from $12 to $18 a ton an even, in Baltimore, as high as $27 recently for raw tomatoes. Think of it.

CORN.

Corn is still in good favor, with prospects of only a moderate pack, and a carry-over much less than for several years. Any snaps in the corn line should be picked up, and the buyers of these snaps stand in to make a good profit on their speculation.

The Maine corn crop is reported to be in good condition and a full pack is promised provided frost holds off.

COVE OYSTERS.

Cove oysters promise to be a mighty hard commodity to find in the near future. The pack was abnormally small this year, and it looks as though there will be a scramble pretty soon to get the goods to supply the country trade which cannot get fresh goods.

CORN STARCH.

There has been a sharp advance in prices on corn starch and dextrine in the East owing to the rise in corn.

MACARONI.

The State Pure Food Commission has issued a notice to the effect that macaroni colored other than with eggs cannot be sold in that State, and has begun the prosecution of a Fresno manufacturer under the California food law.

Holland herrings.—The market is slightly lower than last week. Shipments are arriving quite freely and demand is improving.

Scotch herrings. — Notwithstanding the large catch, prices are keeping up very well and are unchanged from last week. Quality is particularly nice although large fulls are scarce. Most of the herrings run small this season.

Norway herrings are being offered, but it is too early to take them over as they would spoil before arriving here. Weather is still too warm.

Imported sardines. — There is no change in either the French or Portuguese situation. There is no catch nor any stocks neither here or abroad and there is virtually nothing offering.

½ Boneless sardines.—Just a few have been packed and are held at high prices.

Stockfish.—Prices are unchanged and ought to go lower as the catch this season has been considerably larger than last.

Anchovies.—None are being offered as yet from Norway, as the catch is very poor.

Norway smoked sardines.—Catch is poor and most packers of well-known brands are unable to take further orders for this season. This may not be able even to fill all their contracts.

French, Belgian and Italian Peas are scarce, especially the finer grades and purchases are certainly advisable before the season's pack is sold out.

Olive oil continues high and the finest grades of olive oil are very scarce and high. We are receiving only small lots, which hardly supply the hand to mouth demand.

DOMESTIC SARDINES.

Sardines are in light supply and exceedingly strong, with the market here inclined to follow the advance named by eastern packers.

IMPORTED SARDINES.

Imported sardines are still exceedingly scarce, as there is no catch in France, Spain or Portugal. In Norway the catch continues light and very little packing is being done.

CANNED SALMON.

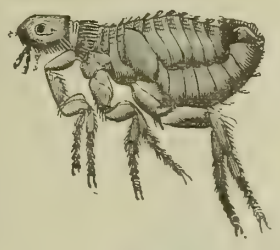
The situation in this line is extremely strong. By a perusal of the dispatches printed below an excellent idea may be secured of the conditions viewed from a jobbing standpoint:

New York, Aug. 30.—The Journal of Commerce says: Except in one year opening prices on red Alaska salmon have never been so high as that announced yesterday on the 1907 pack. The exception was the quotation of $1.50 made in 1906.

The jobbing trade, although looking upon the 1907 prices of $1.15 f.o.b. as unusual, appear to be well satisfied with it, as in view of the advance talk of a very short pack of higher figure was generally looked for.

It is admitted by most, if not all jobbers, that the price named, which is 20c higher than the opening quotation on the 1906 pack, is warranted by the conditions of supply and demand.

The new goods will come on an absolutely bare market, for it is not questioned that the little that is left on the spot will go out clean within the next few weeks.



There is some difference of opinion as to how short the pack of Alaska red salmon will be as compared with that of last year, the estimates of the probable shortage varying form 500,000 to 700,000 cases.

According to some reports the total quantity that will be available for distribution in the United States will not exceed 750,000 cases, including all brands.

The English markets, it is authoritatively stated, have ordered and confirmed 200,000 cases of Association brands. This is the first time in two years that English buyers have been in the American market, and their purchases this year, which are attributed to the close clean up of stocks in England, are excepted as an indication that a radical change has occured in the sentiment of those markets.

One reason given why a higher price than $1.15 f.o.b. was not made on red Alaska salmon of this season's packing is the lack of adequate warehousing facilities on the Pacific Coast, which made it necessary to market the pack more quickly than usual.

If all of the orders that have been booked subject to approval of price are confirmed, and the indications are that they will be, it is intimaed that packers will not be able to deliver in full. The Corby Commission Co., representing the Kelley-Clarke Co., of Seattle, who were first in the field, yesterday, with opening prices said in announcing their quotations: "The present situation on salmon is unprecedented; Columbia River is short over 50 per cent; there has been an almost entire failure of sockeves on Puget Sound and in British Columbia, and the pack of red Alaska salmon is at least 500,000 cases short of last year, which, taken in connection with the almost entire depletion of spot stocks, means that there has not been sufficient salmon packed during this season to supply the world's normal requirements, and that before the 1908 pack salmon is available higher prices will obtain than ever before in the history of the industry. While we appreciate the fact that the crop of "Wolf!" so far as salmon is concerned, has been heard times innumerable in the past, the present situation speaks for itself, and 'a word to the wise should be sufficient.'

The opening prices made yesterday on Puget Sound sockeye salmon are also 20c a dozen higher than those of last year, being $1.65 for talls, $1.80 for flats and $1.10 for half-pounds f.o.b. common shipping point o nthe Coast. The pack on the Sound this year has been almost a failure, the total output being estimated at 80.000 cases, against 183,977 cases last year, 820,914 cases in 1905, 107,943 cases in 1904 and 158,802 cases in 1903. The entire 1907 pack of Puget Sound Soceyes is reported sold, and no new business is being accepted.

Bellingham, Wash.—Prices for sockeye as well as all other grades of canned salmon will be high this year. The pack has been so short that almost the entire output of the canneries on the Sound has been sold or the orders placed subject to the prices to be named. Last Thursday E. B. Deming, general manager of the Pacific American Fisheries, and representing the Deming-Gould brockerage firm, announced the opening prices of canned goods. Deming estimates that only about half as many cases of red fish have been packed as expected. On the Sound 80,000 cases of sockeyes were packed and 52,000 on the Fraser River. In Alaska the returns show that approximately 1,000,000 cases of reds were packed. The Alaska figures cover the Bearing Sea and all the fishing districts in the far north. Each case contains four dozen pound-cans. Following is a list of prices for the season compared with the prices of last year:

Sockeye, talls	$1.65	$1.45
Do flats	1.80	1.50..
Do ½-pound flats	1.10	1.00
Cohoe, talls	1.00	.85
Do flats	1.15	1.00
Do ½-pound flats	.80	.72½
Alaska red, talls	1.15	.9o
Do flats	1.35	1.15
Do ½-pound flats	.95	.85
Pink, talls	.80	.75
Do flats	.90	.85
Do ½-pound flats	.67½	.....

Deming says there will be no profits made on the sockeye salmon this year, even if they are sold at the rate of 7.20 a case for the best varieties. The expense of getting the fish has been so heavy that the profits have been eaten up in the packing.

LIMA BEANS.

According to Los Angeles advices, reports that have gone out that the lima bean crop of that section will fall short of that of former years are premature. The outlook, on the contrary, is for a bountiful crop. There are more acres in lima beans than in previous years, and according to the advices above quoted the yield ought to be larger than the record breaking crop of 700,000 sacks which was harvested last year.

Santa Monica.—The harvest began Monday, and the farmers find that the crop will be much better than expected, better than the crop of last year.

WOODENWARE.

All lines of woodenware are still on the upturn, and further advances are predicted.

CALIFORNIA WINES.

The crop this year is better than that of last, according to expert opinion, and there are prospects for a large mash of the fruit at the various wineries. The grapes are ripe, and if not picked very soon would spoil. The rates on the wine grapes from all points in the State to the various California wineries have been reduced 20 per cent by both the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific railroads at the request of wine manufacturers. The traffic officials for the railroads have been advised that the shipments of these grapes will probably be very heavy this year, owing to the large crop. This is the biggest reduction in the wine grape tariff in many years.

There is less wine in California at present than for a long time past, owing to recent large shipments East and the great losses in the San Francisco fire. The manufacturers are looking forward to a large vintage this year.

THE NATIONAL FORESTS AND THE LUMBER SUPPLY.

A point in the industrial progress of the United States has now been reached where development of the country is made, not in the fact of the forest but with its essential aid. The old process of exhausting the supply of timber in a region and then seeking new fields is practically over. Already the lumber industry is turning back on its tracks. A quality of timber is eagerly sought in the Lake States which a few years ago was ignored as utterly worthless, and in the South the whole pine region is being gone over in a close search for the old field pine, a tree once despised but now bought up at prices much higher than those formerly paid for the magnificent timber of the virgin forests.

A publication just issued by the Department of Agriculture, entitled "National Forests and the Lumber Supply," defines the important part which the National Forests are destined to play in the economic development of the country. Abuses have grown up under the laws which provide for the disposition of public land, notably the segregation of large holdings of timberland for speculative purposes. Timber from the National Forests is now purchased by the thousand board feet, and payment is made upon the actual scale of the logs when cut. Two dollars and a half per thousand feet is comparatively low as present charges go, but since the cut ranges from 5,000 to 20,000 feet per acre, the Government receives from five to twenty times as much for the timber as it did under the timber and stone act.

Public opinion now demands, not that the Government should dispose of its remaining timberlands as rapidly as possible and leave it to private enterprise to exploit the forest hastily, but that what remains of the National Forests should be more conservatively used. The Government has been forced into the lumber business solely in order that a supply of forest products may be guaranteed to future generations.

Probably 65 per cent of the total stand of merchantable timber within the Forests is located on the Pacific Coast, where for a long time the enormous supply of privately owned timber will satisfy most of the demand. This more accessible privately owned timber surrounded the Forests as the meat of an apple surrounds the core. It has been entirely eaten away in many places, while in others it is locked up by speculators. The thing to remember, then, is that this immense body of public timber is there as a great reserve against the time when private timberlands will be depleted, and for use as a weapon against monopoly.

The first effect of National Forests upon prices, particularly where there is still a great deal of available timber, is to raise the price of outside stumpage toward its actual value by withdrawing the excess supply of low-priced timber from the market. But later, as the supply of timber dwindles and values are forced upward by speculative holdings, the effect of the Forests will be to check the advance of prices.

In the virgin forest, growth is just about balanced by decay. In the western forests, however, natural deterioration is greatly augmented by forest fires. The fires usually do most harm by damaging merchantable timber, but, great as this injury is, vastly more actual loss in forest wealth results from the yearly burn-over of the grass and undergrowth of the forest. Ground fires do not consume the large trees, but they destroy seedlings outright and injure growing trees so that they quickly decay. Finally, the forest floor, composed of a mold of needles, twigs and mosses, is burned away.

Far beyond the present influence of the National Forests upon the lumber supply will be their importance in the future. The United States is now facing a shortage in the stock of available timber. The yield from the National Forests will aid greatly to bridge over the period in which mature timber will be lacking.

The definite result, therefore, of the sale of timber from the Forests will be to sustain the lumber business, to maintain a steady range of timber values and so discourage speculation, and, far more important still, steadily to further the uninterrupted development of the great industries dependent upon wood.

Bredhoff-Nelson Co. has secured the store 43 Clay st. running back to Commercial st. into which it will move soon.

The Cudahy Packing Co.—F. H. Carroll, Pacific Coast manager—has removed into its new building, 51-71 Union st.

Mr. William Cluff, of the Wm. Cluff Co., leaves the middle of this month on a year's trip around the world, going by way of the Orient.

Joseph Flately who has been in charge of one of the departments of J. H. Newbauer & Co., is now connected with the J. K. Armsby Co., where he will be glad to meet his many friends.

John McEwen, who has been in the transportaation business for many years, has been appointed assistant general freight agent of the Pacific Coast Steamship Co.

Levenson Company, the sole agents at Pine and Front Streets for the Perfection Cheese Cuter, report business excellent, and they are very much pleased with their new quarters.

Benj. A. Kohanoff was held for the Superior Court last Saturday on a charge of arson, the bail being fixed at $5000. Kohanoff is charged with setting fire to his restaurant at 18-20 Clay st. on the night of Aug. 10th. The building was completely gutted by fire.

Crocker have applied for two permits of the Board of Works, one for the construction of a 5-story brick loft building at the southeast corner of First and Mission sts. to cost $190,000, and the other for the reconstruction of their building on Fremont st. near Mission, at a cost of $60,000.

Oakland, Cal.—The Oakland Cracker Co. will take over the plant of the Golden Gate Cracker Co. at 9th and Cedar streets. The new company is now in process of organization and it is reported that there will be ample capital forthcoming to carry through the nterprise. The Golden Gate Cracker Co., because of lack of capital, went into the hands of a trustee some time ago.

An appeal to the citizens of San Francisco to aid the Board of Health in a general warfare on the rats which infest some portions of the town was formulated at a meeting of the board recently. The rats are regarded not only as a nuisance, but also as a menace from a sanitary standpoint, since they are a frequent carrier of disease germs. Grocers should do their part.

NEWBERRY LETTER.

South Poland, Me., Aug. 26, 1907.

Your letters of August 1st reached me in Portland, Me., just before starting for this place, and being away from home, cannot comply with your request as to photo. As to myself, how fast the time has passed, as the last association work I have done was at Oakland, now nearly one year ago. On my return from the Convention was obliged to leave my business and am now taking this trip to help my physician to make me a new man. Have heard once or twice from my dear friends, Hauch and Sanchez. They both have had their troubles. I am at sea as to your success, but hope you have made a success of the Advocate. The State Association principles, which should be along needs a good strong Advocate of its principles which should be along educational lines of practical knowledge to the retailer by practicability—I mean how to buy and what to sell at that he can make an average profit of 20 per cent on his sales or 25 per cent on his cost; educate him to know that it cost him 15 per cent on his sales or 20 per cent on his cost price to pay expenses; educate him, that if he sells half his goods at 10 per cent profit, he must get 30 per cent on the other half to do his business justice, that 40 per cent of his sales are on four articles—sugar, coal oil, flour and packing house products; educate him to take 20 per cent off of his fixtures, horse, wagon, etc., each year and 5 per cent of his credit, and to get at a correct yearly balance; in fact, teach him to look at the actual side of his business; then to work hard and maintain manufacturers' made price and get them to make more; stand by his actual friends—men like A. Schilling & Co. and the Globe Mills. Then anything the Advocate can do and as they have filled the above they have succeeded to my way of thinking. I will read it commencing October 1st. when I expect to be back in the harness as good as new. Have been putting my best endeavors with Eastern manufacturers and shall bring home some fine results, I hope while I may be to late for this special edition of yours, my heart is with you and you can call on me after October 1st and get prompt response at my old address. Yours,

T. R. Newbury.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

The new pathological laboratory being put up by the State University as headquarters for its work in southern California is nearing completion. With its equipment the laboratory will re-present an investment of about $10,000. Extensive experiments are now being made there with fifty-seven varieties of tomatoes; also a collection of sixty different varieties of walnuts has been set out for investigation purposes. Prof. Ralph E. Smith is in charge of the plant.

In another of a series of suits for alleged infringement upon a patented process for bleaching nuts, the Anderson-Barngrover Manufacturing Company has brought a bill of complaint in the United States circuit court against the Los Nietos and Ranchito Walnut Growers' Association, Mountain View Walnut Growers' Association and the Anaheim Walnut Association.

G. W. Hume & Co. have made extensive plantings of asparagus on their ranch near Biggs, Butte county, and within a couple of years expect to have in cultivation three hundred acres of that vegetable.

Excavation work has been completed on the immense new beet sugar refinery to be erected at Corcoran. The company has already made contracts with growers for 4,000 acres of beets.

William Patrick of Lodi is said to have a new method for canning watermelons and cantaloupes, which he has thoroughly tested and produces a very palatable product.

Berkeley.—It is announced that a magnificent hotel to cost $350,000 is to be erected in the heart of the business district, at Shattuck ave, and Kittridge, on the Shattuck estate. Mrs. Frances K. Shattuck, widow of the Berkeley pioneer, and W. E. Woolsey, manager of the estate, have decided upon it. The principal stock will be held by the Shattuck estate, and the remainder by other Berkeleyans. The frontage is about 270 feet on both Alston way and Shattuck ave.

Gonzales.—The proposition to erect a condensed milk factory in Gonzales is meeting with excellent success, and the promoters and principal stockholders of this enterprise, which will involve the expenditure of 40,000 to $50,000 for buildings and machinery alone, are A. R. Patrick, president of the Alpine Condensed Milk Co., and John B. Meyenberg, one of the owners. It is proposed to commence the erection of the factory before December 1st.

Sacramento.—A contract has been let by Baker & Hamilton for the erection of a 3-story brick building on an 85x150-foot sit, in the rear of their store on J st. The firm intends to carry a very much larger stock at this end of the line than it has heretofore, and consequenly is going to enlarge its quarters in order to handle the increase.

VANCOUVER OYSTER ENTERPRISE

Eastern Bivalves Are Planted on British Columbian Coast.

Consul A. E. Smith, of Victoria, reports that another American enterprise has been launched on Vancouver Island, as follows:

"A company composed chiefly of American citizens, with a steamship commander as manager, has established in Esquimalt Harbor, near Victoria, a large oyster plant for the propagation of Eastern oysters. Two carloads of the bivalves, known to the trade as "spat," purchased in South Norwalk, Conn., have already arrived here and been planted in the cove where the company have secured 43 acres of water front. The consignment includes oysters of one, two and three years of age. They have been laid out according to their age in square beds 50 by 50 feet. Though the bulk of the oysters planted will have to remain in the sea bed for two or three years, a large quantity will be dug up for the market in September, and it is expected that sufficient demand for this catch will be found in British Columbia. It is calculated to supply, later on, the markets on, the markets as far east as Winnipeg and Chicago.

At present the market here is supplied with the Olympia oysters, large beds of which are under cultivation at Olympia, Grays Harbor, and Wallapa, Wash. The American manager of the new concern was for seventeen years engaged in oyster culture on the coast of Massachusetts, and regards the Pacific coast as well suited for the cultivation of the Eastern oyster as are the Atlantic coast beds.

If your business is easily handled with your present system now is the time to look ahead and plan.

ATTRACTING TRADE.

REACHING FOR BUSINESS.

With the fall season here it is time for the retail grocer to begin to consider what particular effort he will make to improve his business and attract new custom.

The large dealer in the city, or the small dealer in the country may share in the improvement incident to the fall season.

The dealer who makes the most out of his opportunities, begins early and keeps at work continuously. Otherwise, some more enterprising competitor will make more out of it than he will himself. An early start and continuous work will accomplish wonders in this direction.

While it is often desirable and more profitable to work along the lines of least resistance, sometimes a dealer will achieve a more pronounced and lasting success by doing the opposite and exert himself to overcome such real or imaginary difficulties as confront him.

Methods of increasing business vary with individuals, but the same basic principle underlies them all—to attract favorable attention to the store and thereby increase the number of possible buyers who enter and undoubtedly the number of sales actually made.

Sales are generally productive of profit. If they are not they should not be made. The dealer who can enlarge his number of possible buyers and increase his sales has mastered the secret of successful merchandizing and is in position to command fortune.

A Special Opening.

One successful method of attracting favorable attention is to advertise a special opening of fall goods. Grocers can do this as well as others. Further, there are thousands of dealers who handle not only groceries, but dry goods and they can emphasize their fall business by having an opening week in which all varieties of goods handled shall share.

More buyers will go where all varieties of goods are offered; and the more buyers one gets the more profit he will make.

If one intends beginning the fall and winter campaign with an opening it ought to be widely advertised for at least a week before it occurs.

Advertise it in your windows.

Advertise it inside your store.

Use every possible means of publicity—newspaper advertising, posters, flyers, circulars, and any other kind that may occur to you. And keep it up without intermission until the week of the opening.

Then vary it by advertising the consummation of your plan and give some of the special trade opportunities you are offering.

Don't be half-hearted about your advertising. Consider it a part of your investment upon which you are to obtain profits, and be satisfied to wait a reasonable time for the returns.

Dress Up The Store.

For such an opening special effort must be made to make the store attractive.

The goods must be attractively arranged with price tickets to enable possible purchasers to know what they will cost without having to ask.

Each day during the sale, some one thing should be made a leader with a special price for that day. Frequently a leader like this will attract customers.

While special sales are quite likely to attract attention to one's store and goods, it is essential that the interest thus created be maintained, otherwise the full value will be lost. Interest must be kept up by means of advertising and special offers so the good work will not end with the opening sale.

Of course the success of any business is built upon the steady trade from day to day, not the spasmodic special sales. While all special sales and all openings must be emphasized and advertised to make them develop the best that is in them, it must be remembered that back of this is the substantial business which is built upon the daily trade.

CLERKS CORNER.

REMARKS TO EMPLOYEES.

One of the greatest difficulties with which the average merchant has to contend is that of securing faithful, intelligent employes. So many clerks cannot be made to see that in serving their employers faithfully they are working for their own best interests; their heart is not in their work and they fail to make the most of the opportunities for advancement which it offers. The following remarks to employes, compiled from interviews and letters of H. E. Partridge, general manager of Wyman, Patridge & Co., Minneapolis, contain much food for thought on the part of all employes.

Experienced Men Scare.

"It is nearly impossible for us to get first-class experienced men for our needs, consequently we are ever on the lookout for young men that will develop into usefulness. Since last May, hundreds and hundreds have applied for positions with us. Probably nine-tenths of those applying were turned away because either they were plainly lacking in qualities necessary for success with us, or upon inquiry of former employers, we learned they had left a bad record. The remaining one-tenth, we hired, numbering 182. Of these 89, or nearly 50 per cent, were not with us the following January 1st. Here was a selected lot, one-tenth of the applicants in a given time, and one-half of those gone by January 1st, and this in an institution that offers extradaordinary opportunities to young men for development.

"The reasons for leaving were many. A few were offered more money elsewhere and took positions where the immediate returns were better, but with no chance for advancement. The most of them were let out by us because of idniference—working for money instead of success, watching the clock rather than their work, and keeping bad company and late hours.

A Business University.

"We pay small salaries to beginners; why should we not? Very few beginners are worth anything to us at first; on account of our large stock for several weeks and often for several months we lose more in showing a boy where, why and how, than we get from his services, but by the same token, when men master the work, the reward is correspondently greater. We offer a young man an organization that has been thirty years in the building, a business university of the highest grade, and a chance for every man to show of what stuff he is made.

You Can Compel Attention.

"If your call does not come, do not blame your house, but try harder. Drop all outside attraction until you have established yourself and see if you cannot compel attention. It does not necesarily follow that all can fill high positions. Some by their nature develop rapidly, some slowly, but all who are adapted to mercantile pursuits can, I believe, do better here than anywhere else. Not all can be leaders; the most of us must be in the ranks, but no one can afford to do otherwise than his best.

"Every young man should appreciate that in his first business years he is simply laying the foundation for the structure he will erect during his working life. The day you enter a business house, put aside school-boy ways; work as you have never worked before; do more and better work each day than you did the day before; seek responsibility; let others keep short hours and tell stories of what they did the night before; you bury yourself in your work and when 6 o'clock comes, you will wonder where the day has gone. Do not think you will be overlooked. Employers are too anxious for young men who can carry a part of the load to overlook you for long.

Responsible Positions Only for the Faithful.

"At a critical time in the Revolutionary war, when Washington was close pressed, he gave an order to his subordinates, 'Let only Americans be placed on guard tonight.' Likewise, in the intense competition in business today, the watchword is, put only the faithful in responsible positions.

Too many young men now-a-days think that good clothes are more important than good habits, and a good time is better than good work. A crease in your trousers and a part in your hair is of trifling account in the vital matters that concern a young man. The real question is, what foundation are you laying to build upon for the next fifty years; what use are you making of the faculties given you? Your employer wants to know if you are honest, if you have ability and if you have the ambition to use that ability. You can afford to make great sacrifices for three or four years, if you can reap the reward for the next thirty or forty years.

"Many a boy who has been discharged for cause takes it lightly, but he will find that most responsible positions are bounded now-a-days and there is an increasing tendency to look up the record of every employe.

Things to Avoid.

"Another marked tendency among large employers is to discourage drinking. There is nothing in drinking for anyone except the liquor people. Liquor is a dangerous enemy for young men to flirt with. The debit side has loss of time, loss of money and bad associations, the credit side has nothing at all to balance. It's a one-sided game. There is the slipping away, little by little, of the self respect that is indispensable, and finally the drinking habit owns you. I have watched it for a life time and it's all bad.

"It is said, 'boys will be boys,' but at 20 and 21 he is no longer a boy. Most young men are wasting the years of preparation by doing far less than they can do, by following the foolish life will blame everybody but themselves. Life is earnest; be careful you realize this before it is too late. Your future is entirely in your hands. No one can help or hinder you much. It is for you to determine whether you will make the most of your opportunities and live an increasingly useful life each year, or waste these younger years and when you die owe a debt to the world for having lived."—Com. PREFACE.

Within a comparatively short period of time the retail merchants, particularly the retail grocers of this country, have come to realize very fully the immense advertising value of of their show windows. The old method of dumping a lot of goods in the show window has given way to something better. Expert window trimmers have shown the retailer the possibilities that the windows possess for drawing trade, and as a result the retail grocers of the country are showing a commendable desire to make better window display. They have come to realize that there is much to learn about window trimming, but there has been on suitable text-book on the subject available to the retailer. To supply this want this book is published. Those who are desirous of learning what there is to know about window dressing may do so by reading the instructions set forth in this volume. S. W. ROTH.

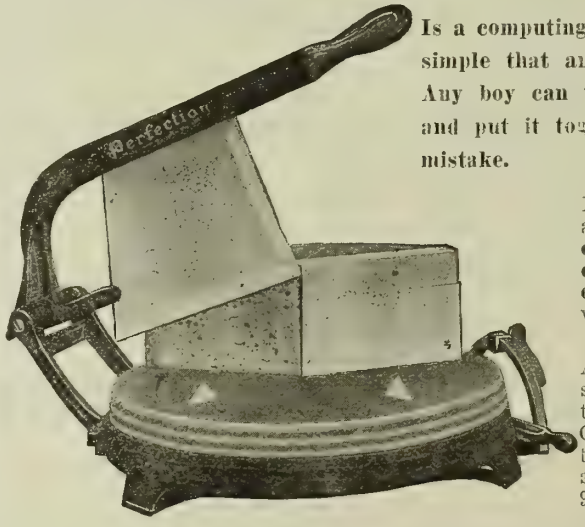
Value of Window Dressing.

It has always been a part of the merchant's business scheme to show the goods he has for sale to the best possible advantage. Neat clerks, clean shelves, clean floors, clean goods are matters of importance that all merchants worthy of the name have regarded as essential to success. His wares he would show as best he could in the light of the knowledge of his time. But the world moves, and those methods that were satisfactory in one period would be out of date in a later period, and these newer methods would in turn become obsolete.

Merchants above all men must keep abreast of the time. They must be alert to look for new business methods and keen to observe their effect. And then, they must seize upon them and put them into practice at once. The successful merchant has always done this and he will continue to do it, leaving his unfortunate competitors to keep the wheels of their business in the old ruts. Perhaps there has been no part of the merchant's business that has undergone such radical changes in recent years as that of displaying goods, and more particularly that of window displays.

Those merchants who made a very creditable exhibit of their wares twenty years ago inside of their stores were not fully alive to the value their windows possessed for display purpose. It is true they made some use of them, but it was comparatively small when we consider how much might have been done. The merchant spent his display energy largely on the interior of his store. This was well. Once he got the people inside his store he could offer them a creditable ocular feast, calculated to tempt them to buy. But the all-important thing in a merchandising business is to get the people in the store.



There are many ways to attract new trade; to get people to come into the store. But there is no way particularly for the retail merchant that is better than a well-conceived window display. People passing a retail store will pause to notice an attractive window display. They stop out of mere curiosity and go on without any thought, perhaps of entering the store. They pass the place again. They see a new display equally as attractive as the one they had already seen. The impression is forced upon them at once that the store is conducted by an energetic merchant of good taste and an apparent desire to please the people. Still another new display is made and the people notice it. There is business life in the place. People like to contemplate that fact. Then they recall the dull, stupid old store, where they have been in the habit of trading, and however much they may rebel at forsaking old friends they are irresistibly drawn into the new place.

Another person passes the store and is forced to notice the window displays. He looks at the display and is reminded by seeing some particular piece of goods in the window that he needs such goods and at once he concludes to stop and ask the price. He enters the store with a half conviction that if he buys he must pay a bigger price than he would have to pay at the untidy little shop where he usually deals. He is surprised to find the price is the same. Then the package he gets is sound and unsoiled. It is wrapped in good paper by a neat, polite clerk. There is a tone about the place he likes and he comes back.

The benefits of extending credit are limited. The retail merchant, wishing to help along his honest customer, is often led into extending an unlimited amount of credit.

In the rush to increase sales, how easily we forget the practical lessons that are daily brought to our notice.

Every retailer who has had an extended experience has been told by hard-up debtors that it would have been better for them, both, in reputation and pocket-book, if the merchants had not been so lenient and had insisted upon prompt payment of the obligation when due.

So it is that we get kicks and not thanks for our supposed kindness, and as a last resort, the debtor, after taking advantage of the credit extended, makes a break for the District Courts and files an application to be released of all indebtedness through Bankruptcy.

Through our association we hope to secure an amendment to this Law.

We have the assurance of support in our efforts, of the National Association of Credit men, who promise to do all they can to assist us in this measure. It is to their advantage, they claim, to have the law kept on the Statutes, but amended to the extent that it shall not be taken advantage of for any other purpose than that for which it was intended.

If we can amend this law to the effect that we, as retailers, shall not be subject to anyone taking advantage of it to defeat their creditors for favors received from the retail merchant, then so let it be, for it is not our purpose to interfere with affairs other than our own, but we have repeatedly said that unless this bill be amended that we shall have a bill introduced which repeal the law in its entirety.

Such a bill was introduced in the last session of Congress by one of the Texas reprensentatives, and will be brought up for consideration at the next session.

We seek to have the bill amended to the extent that no one can take advantage of it unless they owe more than $500 (Applause) This bill will protect the retailer.

Now About Parcels Post.

In a letter recently received from Chas. Wm. Burrows, Vice-President of the National Board of Trade, is the following interesting matter bearing on Parcels Post

"But first I call your attention to another industry that has waned. Twenty-five years ago, it is estimated, there were 3000 live book-sellers in the country carrying good stocks of books representing the various classes of literature, history, biography, science, travel, poetry, and fiction. To-day there are estimated to be only 1000 of the same class, and they are steadly withdrawing from business, though in the meantime the population of the country has increased by 50 per cent.

By the passage of the Parcels Post Bill now before Congress, the mail order houses and many manufacturers of advertised small wares would unquestionably benefit materially, and on this account it is that we run across so many specious articles explaining the benefits of following the German and English Parcels Post system.

As the developments would inevitably give a serious blow to many of the small merchants in all lines, a blow so crushing as would certainly force many of them out of business, merchants associations in different sections have energetically protected against these schemes, and will continue to bring upon our National law makers pressure to defeat legislation whose enactment would permit a few mail order houses in the large cities to control the retail business of the entire country.

The expense of distributing merchandise sold by these people, being paid in large part, by indirect public taxation.

When we consider the total area of Germany to be 208,000 square miles, while the area of Texas is 265,000, of that Germany is but four-fifths the size of Texas; that the area of England is 50,000 square miles, less than on fifth the size of Texas, the comparison cannot be thought of, and if we would perpetuate the retail industry of the United States, every effort should be made to defeat the Parcels Post Bill.

Let us, as far as opportunity, time and strength will permit, exert all our influence to prevent any of the Jack Rabbit, Scotch Thistle, or Gypsy Moth Legislation, which will surely result disastrously in Parcels Post legislation."

Imagine, if you will, the representatives of a large political organization passing a resolution in Philadelphia last Fall, advocating the passage, at the last session of Congress of a Parcels Post measure. If I had no other one thing to present to you to show to you and convince you of the necessity of organization, this should be enough.

Catalog House Letter.

A large company in the middle west is now issuing a little monthly magazine and places it in every shipment of their goods that goes to the consumer in which it says; "If we had a Parcels Post law, this package, (with which the magazine is enclosed) would have cost you much less than by express." At the close of one of the articles in the magazine are the following words. "Then let us see to it that a Congress is elected, that is pledged, first, to give this country a general parcels post, the best and cheapest and most extended in the world; second to established a Parcels Post that should do all the general transport business on rates something like the following: Parcels up to one pound, one cent; one pound to eleven pounds (peck) five cents; eleven pounds to thirty pounds (half bushel) ten cents; thirty pounds to sixty pounds (bushel) fifteen cents; sixty pounds to one hundred pounds (half barrel) twenty cents; one hundred pounds to two hundred pounds (barrel) twenty-five cents.

This is something like the Henry Bill, which calls for packages in weight up to two hundred pounds, dimension to the size of a barrel, and not to exceed six feet in length for 25 cents.

National Grange Active.

Let me quote to you from an interview with N. J. Bachelder of New Hampshire published in the Denver Post on November 13th, 1906, which is as fallows:

"It was from this body of a million farmers all over the United States that the President received his most effective support in the carrying out of his 'square deal' policies.

Encouraged in the success of the fight made in upholding the President's hands, the National Grange, now gathering in Denver for its annual convention, will launch a vigorous campaign at the convention for the passage of the National Parcels Post system in the Government.

In fact the farmers have the President with them in this movement. Other forces will be brought into alliance to secure this boon from Congress."

And further on in the interview these words appear: "Heretofore the express companies have stood in the way of success because of a selfish motive."

Retailers Forgotten.

There seems to be but one object in view, and that is the defeat of the express companies, forgetting that the entire retail interests of the United States are placed in he greatest jeopardy. Forgetting, or do not realize that the enormous amount of money drained from the community in which the members of the Grange live, is so much of the life and wealth of that community put into the large trade centers and the coffers of the mail order houses.

It is has been a mystery to me why this great body of intelligent men and women should not see the iniquity of this measure.

What are the retail interests doing to counteract this tremendous influence? Not so much, possibly, as we wish them to do, but there is in existence an organization known as the Affiliated Presidents and Secretaries of Retail Associations, who have been doing some vigorous work.

National Board of Trade.

Two years ago, the National Board of Trade were very largely in favor of a Parcels Post measure, but through educational influences and energetic work, assisted by the organization of which I speak, last year they voted as opposed to the Parcels Post Bill.

This was a great gain, for the National Board of Trade is composed of influential bpsiness men, but we must not lose sight of the fact that while the business interests have been aroused to a very great extent in opposition to this Bill, there is at the disposal of the promoters of the measure millions of dollars.

Retailers Must Act.

I have never hesitated to say that this bill is the most uncalled for bill that was ever presented to Congress, and if those who are the promoters of this bill say that they depend on the assistance of the President of the United States, it is for you and I, as business men of the country to say that we depend on the assistance of the President, and demand of Congress, that any bill detrimental to the retail interests of the United States should be buried in obilvion. The business men should control the situation, for it is they on whom the entire credit of the country depends. Hence, I say again, that the necessity for organization was never more apparent if it were only to defeat this one measure.

Co-operation Spells Success.

What we need is co-operation, for it is the only system that will insure success in any organized body. By its application to the regular attendance at all meetings, by carrying out the recommendation of the majority, by following out as closely as possible all the precepts of organization, and stick together by acting in unity on all quetsions.

The greatest monument that any man can rear for himself, or leave to mark the place that he has filled in the world, is that in his time, in the age and generation in which he lived, he made the most of his opportunities. That, considering his environment, as he was given to see right he did the best he could. So let it be with us.

We seek the co-operation of the manufacturer and jobber. We seek their moral influence, believing that by co-operation of all interests we shall be able to bring about conditions in the trade that will be a benefit to all concerned.

The Call to Arms.

Individuals and local associations must be aroused to action. The locals must be brought to a realization of their duty towards themselves as well as the State Association in respect of providing the necessary funds for campaign and new organization work, a new propaganda must be spread broadcast throughout the State, and those now listless must have forced to their closest attention their perilous position as between farmers' organizations on the one side and the ever-growing menace of the Parcels Post proposed legislation and the practical remedies that may be adopted by communities to minimize the constantly spreading influence and trade absorption of the mail order concerns.

These evils can be met and fought sanely, logically. But how? Through individual effort? Never. Your local, state and National organizations are the only practical sources of your defense; through them, by united effort, you may hope to work out yur individual salvation.

But how are these reforms to be effected? By hot air? By grandiloquent speeches? Never in the world. It will take some money, mixed with brains as a basis. Then work, active intelligent work, the work of educating the dealer how to defend himself successfully from outside assaults.

Extension of Organization.

..Let us do our utmost to extend our organization. Put into it zeal backed by the courage of our convictions. Let us take into ourselves the fire and enthusiasm used in strengthening and making our organization the influence it should be. Let us from this convention go away determined to preach the gospel of organization and association In three months from now you can make your organization a strength so that nothing can withstand its force.

But while we seek this co-operation from a moral standpoint, let us from a financial standpoint be independent of all other influences.

I do not advise an independence of antagonism, but an independence of co-operation, where each, manufacturer, jobber and retailer, can work out the different problems andsolve them to the advantage of all.

The independence that we seek is that kind of independence which creates and fosters idealism, out of which springs friedship, manliness, loyalty, and of which the whole business fraternity is cemented into one great brotherhood.

Co-operation the Watchword.

Co-operation should be our watchword, and as one of our exchanges would say:

"Organization is the vehicle of co-operation. It may be either the slow, slumbering wagon, drawn by a jaded yoke of oxen, or it may be the forty-horse power automobile, moving with the swift flight of the strong pinions of the eagle. It is up to you to choose which it shall be. If you go into it with zeal and determination to make your work a success, you will be traveling in the automobile.

The spirit of co-operation is a difficult thing to define. It is that indefinable something that encourages men to achieve higher ideals and higher plans of conducting their business. It leads to the earning of more dollars through the medium of their business. It makes friends of enemies. It lightens the trials and tribulations of business life

The co-operation of the association through its members is binging men and interests in harmonious unison as they have never been brought before. It is raising the activities of mankind to a loftier and more successful plane than has ever been known, and it is destined to accomplish wonderful results.

Through our association men are brought together in fraternal units, thus spreading that "Peace on earth, good will to men," which by ruinous competition that goaded on man against his fellow man, made the observance of that noble precept well nigh impossible.

Then let us realize that we are independent one of the other, and put forth every effort to bring into each mind the spirit of co-operation, each giving to each, that sympathy that will cement us into one great brotherhood.

Let us concentrate our energies. Fight for that which we think is right, and victory will crown our efforts. (Prolonged applause.)

EDITOR OF THE "ADVOCATE" TALKS.

The convention re-assembled at the hour set. In the absence of Mr. Hauch of Alameda, who was to address the convention on the value of a trade paper in association work, Mr. Eddy, editor of the "Advocate," made the following remarks:

I am indeed sorry that Mr. Hauch cannot be here today to handle this subject. His experience in association work has been such that in many respects his treatment of the question of the value of a trade paper in association work, would be vastly ahead of what I can say in the premises.

The great difference between Mr. Hauch's argument and my own lies in the difference between theory and experience. My viewpoint, from the editorial chair of a trade paper has placed me in a superior position to definitely measure the value of such a publication in association work. I speak from experience, close and intimate, though limited in period.

A few evenings ago, Mr. Green, who will address you later in the morning, made some remarks relative to the value of a good trade paper. Among other things he said that the power wielded by the trade press of the United States was so great that if he could get them to work in unison for association ideals, the success of the movement would be instantaneous and permanent.

A Powerful Lever for Results.

How many of you realize what a powerful lever you possess in the trade paper you at present control? How were the laws won in this city last January? True, individuals came and went, telegrams and letters played their part, but back of it all, gentlemen, was that weekly association circular, the Retail Grocers' Advocate. This messenger of your, clad in its golden uniform, spread the news of what you were striving to do, all the way from San Diego to Siskiyou Grocers in that 700 miles heard of the progress and setbacks and final victory, alone from the Advocate. Many of them worked with a will, and you never knew it. They saw their representatives; write to them, and otherwise assisted in the fight. These men could have been reached by other means, but at what an expense and certainly not every week.

A Weekly Prod.

Then, too, the rank and file of association workers were kept up to the highest notch of activity by those weekly prods. We of the Advocate feel that the laws now on the Statute Books of California as a result of last January's campaign were put there more through the Advocate's co-operation than through any other single cause.

The Power of the Press.

Another phase of the question presents itself. The power of the press is no negligible quantity. If a man feels that his every act is under the scrutiny of a medium of printer's ink, which circulates among those who know him best, he is going to be very careful as to his course of procedure. In that fear of publicity you possess in the Advocate a power you little realize. The paper stands like a watch dog, ever on the alert to grab and shake the man or firm who tries to harm your business by one means or another. You constantly have at your command a mouthpiece through which to shout to your fellow grocers all over the Coast: "Gentlemen, here are the facts, draw your own conclusions." With this great power constantly under your hand and properly used there is no reason why you should not make vastly greater progress next year than the one just closing.

Valuation.

When it comes to a valuation of dollars and cents there is no basis of appaisement from which we can draw conclusions. Suffice it to say that the benefits derived from your trade paper are vastly more than you can realize. To trace the returns would be a task titanic, though I think your flour profits of now and three years ago are worthy of consideration. The Advocate won that fight for you.

Income.

From an income point of view the value of a trade paper to an association is best answered by the check turned over by me to the chairman of the committee on Advocate. True, the check is a small one so far as cash goes, but there are several thousand dollars worth of easily convertable assets behind that check and more to come—yes, much more to come.

Variety Absolutely Essential.

A trade paper which publishes association news to the exclusion of all else is not the paper to win results. There must be a constant variety of matter, the perusal of which will show the grocer some return for his trouble. If the same general line of matter comes each week the paper will be laid under the counter until some convenient moment (which never arrives) and so on for week after week. The paper whose advent is looked forward to, like the next meal from the hands of a good cook, that paper is the winner of the race. Now, Gentlemen, that is what we are trying to do with the Advocate.

We are trying to make the paper of interest and value to you in every respect. We want it to make money for the association and therefore for you. We want it to be so interesting that you will chase over to the P. O. on the day it is due, in a perfect ferment of impatience to get the paper open.

Advertisements As News.

One word more and I am through. The advertisements in a trade paper are news items of extreme value. Those manufacturers who use our columns are your friends to such a degree that it is actually your duty to support them constantly and consistently. They prove in a most tangible way their sympathy with the work the association is trying to accomplish. I cannot urge you too strongly to support the advertisers who use the Advocate. They are our proven friends—the other fellows are unknown qualities.

"The Man Behind."

It is a fact, no doubt known to you, that it is not the subscriptions tha support a paper. It follows that the more advertisers we have the better paper we can give you and the more money we can earn. Therefore, if you want to make the Advocate of still greater value than it already is, just remind your jobbing and manufacturing friends that it is the man behind the counter who sells the goods and always will, and that an ad. in the columns of your paper would be extremely gratifying to you. May we count on you?

PRICE MAINTENANCE.

To Mr. J. F. Paulding of Los Angeles had been assigned the subject: "Establishing and Maintaining of Prices by the Manufacturer." Mr. Paulding is now considered an authority on this subject and his remarks which appear below are worthy of very careful study by all interested parties—manufacturer and retailer alike:

Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention: — The subject of prices maintenance has perhaps caused more thought, more argument and taker up more time with less result than most any question before the American grocers to-day. Only one question has superseded the price question and that is credits and it is very questionable whether that important subject has had as much time and thought as how to prevent price cutting. Hardly any association of any locality, that has been organized any length of time; but what has had this important question before the meeting more than once More Associations have gone on the rocks of defeat for want of some proper manner to control this all important question, than all other questions combined. Practically every plan that could be devised had been tried without success up to three years ago and yet the trade demoralizer had his way almost invariably because those who seek to gain trade by cutting prices know that price maintenance in any form will take away their advertising advantage, therefore it has been a life and death struggle with them and they have held on until ultimately they have gained their point by discouraging the great majority of the dealers and caused an abondenment of every plan that was inaugerated. Boycott had been levied against department stores, wholesalers and retailer. Agreements had been made between wholesalers and retailers. Understandings had been entered into between retailers and themselves but the proper power of punishment necssary for a successful carrying out of price protection was always lacking and it is doubtful if there is an association in this country to-day of any mentionable size that has a protected price that has been maintained in a year without same has been abondened permanently in the end. There may be a few who have a sugar card that is lived up to, or a few articles that are listed by an understanding, that are meeting with some degree or success; but to have a list of articles worthy of the name of protection I believe I am right in saying they have always been a failure when backed up by agreements of any kind whether between retailers and wholesalers, or not popular under such circumstances, therefore such a plan as forcing a wholesaler to discontinue selling one of his best customers usually meest with his hearty disapproval and he backs up his disapproval by devising ways and means of protecting that particular customer, or customers. Any agreement regarding prices if successful will ultimately call for a direct boycott and if any association wishes to secure uninterrupted profits on their staple articles they will have to go to the fountain head and work with the only party who has a right to protect their goods and that is the manufacturer.

Price Agreements Fail.

We have had our experience with price agreements based on an understanding with th wholesalers also our failure along with other associations who had tried in like manner to secure proper profits. It was a bitter pill but we had to swallow it and try another plan and in this we have succeeded. When the prices established in 1902 failed one of our members Mr. J. A. Faazenda stated he believed that the proper way to secure protection was to go to the manufacturers and ask him to set a retail price and protect same which would interest the great mass of retail dealers in any brand of goods on which a permanent profit was assured. We have been guided largely by the well known firms of this state, namely, the Sperry Flour Company and the Globe Grain and Milling Company, who had been for several years establishing and successfully maintaining prices on their leading brands of flour. We approached a number of manufacturers on the question with a result that more than sixty manufacturerrs, many of national reputation are to-day maintaning retail prices on their goods in the Southern Territory. Of course there are a few occasional cuts; but not 10 per cent of what there was before the prices were established and the retailers are reaping a profit on their staples that could not be enjoyed under any other conditions. We have had the same trouble with those who wish to demoralize the prices as we had when we originally started our prices which failed. The demoralizers were reckoning with a different class this time and with those who had a right to invoke the law if necessary to back up their desires in the matter. Suits have been threatened, and goods refused demoralizers, and there are certain stores in the south to-day that will do without some brands of goods rather than maintain the prices established by the manufacturer. It is the manufacturer who is directly interested because he is the direct loser if his goods become unpopular. The wholesaler is not interested because if the demoralizer fails to buy one brand he will go to another and he secures the profit just the same. Again the wholesaler except on his private brands has no right to invoke the law for his protection while the manufacturer has. A copy right gives the manufacturer the right to control until the goods are in the hands of the consumer and any manufacturer who cares for the interest of the great mass of retailers can give a profit protection that will make the grocery business pay something like what it should.

Protected Price Opposition.

There are two classes of retailers who do not want protected prices. They are, first the man who is receiving favors, and second, the pessamist who does not believe that prices can be controlled. Take the situation in Southern California for instance, we have a few who do not want the manufactures to maintain prices and they are the direct cause of 99 per cent of the cutting. They cut the well known articles to gain trade and the smaller man who cannot afford to cut things he has to meet downtown competition and he slashes away until he goes the way of 90 per cent of all small cut rate stores,—through the Board of Trade. Any man who is not receiving favors from the wholesalers and manufacturers cannot afford to cut prices even though they sell for cash. The man who is receiving favors can afford to sell below the average and does not want protected prics. Take two of our large cash dealers for example. They are buying Perfection Soda Crackers, in three pound packeages, made by the Pacific Coast Biscuit Company, for 2.40 per dozen, less 10 per cent and a window full of these goods has been on display on a prominent street in our city for two weeks offering to sell the goods at list price or 20 cents a package. The small man pays just 20 cents per package and has to get 25 cents or go to the wall. The big cash man sells at 20 cents and makes a leader and makes his 10 per cent just the same. Again take the same retailer, he is selling National Biscuit Company's goods for 3 for 25 cents of $1.00 per dozen. He is getting them for 85 cents per dozen providing he buys $250.00 a month which no doubt he does, and is therefore selling the goods as a leader for a 15c margin of profit, yet the little man is paying $1.00 per dozen for his goods. Again take Shredded Wheat Biscuits, this same dealer had always sold them for 10 cents a package. He bought them for $4.60 per case and makes 40 cents profit where the little man has to pay $5.00 and sell at costs if he met the competition, or he had to parade as a high priced man before the public if he wanted a living. I could go on down the line and give you the names of numerous articles which would come under the same head; but this is enough to picture to you the reason why this particular dealer does not want prices protected. He is afraid to do business on a par with the rest of the trade. He wants inside prices which are not allowed the rest of the dalers and he would no doubt be the first one to ask for protection from the manufacturer if he were placed in the position of the men who are to-day advocating the maintenance of prices by the manufacturer. The great question is what are we going to do with the man who is favored. Are we going to continue to patronize a manufacturer who will deliberately give this dealer and his kind this inside price and allow him to demoralize the conditions so that it is impossible for the man with small means to gain a livelihood. He is worth perhaps a quarter of a million dollars. He can buy for cash and get all the discounts. He can use the quantity that makes an order attractive to the manufacturer or wholesaler. He pays no rent and sells for cash. His excuse for not wanting prices protected is that he sells for cash and loses no bad bills. I tell you gentlemen of the convention that this is not the reason. The reason he is cutting is that he is getting his goods so that he would be ashamed to tell you how much less he is buying goods for than you are. He like the great trusts who have recently been fined for receiving favors that were dnied the rest of the trade. The Standard Oil Co. has annihilated thousands of small businesses, made men go hungry, and taken children from school, all because they were receiving favors that were denied their competitors. My plan would be to go to the Pacific Coast Biscuit Company and the National Biscuit Company and say "Gentlemen, you are giving 10 to 15 per cent off your goods to this man and his kind and we want you to protect the great mass who are not able to buy the quantity," and if they said there was nothing they could do, tell them to take away the extra discount and then he would not want to cut and if they refused to do as asked, then tell the trade far and near what kind of manufacturers they were dealing with. Not only these two firms, but every one of their kind should be called to the attention of the trade throughout the entire West. There are others just as bad and I only use their name because their goods have been brought to my attention in a cut price window recently, therefore I name them. If any grocer within the hearing of my voice can get a better plan than this I hope he will bring it up for discussion before we adjourn. Let these manufacturers establish a price that will give all a profit and if they must give such men as this 10 to 15 per cent discount make it contingent that the retail prices shall not be cut or he same will be taken away from them. There is no binding agreements ncessary, between wholsaler, retailer or manufacturer. Just tell the manufacturers whose goods are being cut and that unless the cutting is stopped you will refuse to handle the goods he is making. Then you would see these fellows get in the band wagon and be just as good as any one; but they will not do it just as long as you grocers will allow the manufacturers to give them special prices and permit them to use these favors to demoralize your trade.

National Discussion.

This paramount question was the best discussed question before the last National convention. For three hours the merits of having the manufacturer establish and maintain prices was discussed and every man who belonged to an association where the plan had been tried supported the resolution. The main objection to this question was that we were liable to prosecution under the anti-trust laws of this country and the question was lost by a small majority on this one point. In answer to any such an argument I wish to say to my eastern friends who may happen to read this paper that we are just trying to avoid that one liability and we have succeeded. We as retailers have no right to establish prices among ourslves and no agreements can be entered into between wholsalers nor manufacturers regarding this subject: but the retailers have a right to ask the manufacturers individually to prevent the trade demoralizer from cuting the prices below a living margin or take away the special discounts.

Threatened Prosecutions.

There have been more prosecutions within the past twelve months for violations of the anti-trusts laws, than any previous year in the history of this country. In every case where there was a conviction, it was bcause there were agreements between two or more parties which is a violation of the law. The Pacific Coast Plan will obviate the necessity of any agreements and therefore take away any liability whatever of prosecution of the members of any Association. The Government attorneys who prosecuted the drug trust proved collusion between the Patent Medicine Men and the National Druggist's Association. and also provd that the National Retail Druggists Association maintained a list of people who would not maintain prices. The only way for any assiciation to govern any movement to maintain prices is to keep out of binding agreements because attorneys will bring out every point in order to prove collusionand try and parade before the public as trust busters to gain a little notoriety for themselves. With all we have accomplished in the way of maintenance of prices I will defy any attorney whether he be connected with the Government or a private concern to find one single agreement between our Association, or any manufacturer, or any agreement made between the retailers, and wholesalers, or among the retailers themselves. When we can create a condition of this kind in our vicinity, it can be done in others. To more forcibly illustrate my contention that we are keeping within the law I wish to point out to any skeptical grocer whether he be of the east or west, our experience with the recently enacted Cartwright law which is an exact copy of the Ohio and the Texas anti-trust laws. When this law went into effect on the 23rd day of May there was much joy in the camp of the trade demoralizers, who wished to take unto themselves the credit for freeing the trust ridden public of the grocers trust and no less than half a dozen dealers in Los Angeles were out with their advertisements promptly on time, stating they had defied the trust- and there would no longer be any prices dictated to them by any combination of wholesalers, retailer or manufacturers. Not only did these parties promise the public that hereafter there would be no more grocery trusts to contend with, but they taken a certain amount of credit on themselves for the passage of the law. The District Attorney called at the Association office and questioned the secretary, requsted a copy of th by-laws, and soon thereafter appeared notices in the paper that the grocery trust of which J. F. Paulding had been the managing head for the past five years would be a thing of the past, and perhaps the secretary would be in jail. The daily press was full of possible happenings and the department stores especially were much gratified that they could have their way at last, and defy the ever alert grocery trust that was grinding the public between the stones and keeping them (the department store) from doing as they pleased. One evening paper in particular taken up this fight and promised the public that the Retail Grocers Association, would have to disband with all other organizations of like character. A reporter who had gained some reputation in Chicago for getting information from members of organizations where an agreement had been made between the members called at the office several times and tried by diverse ways to get a copy of th old cast aside agreements of the Association in order to publish it along with his other vast amount of misinformation. He endeavored by every means to prove an agreement to maintain prices and so sure was he that he could do so he allied himself with the District Attorney's office in order to clothe himself with the authority to demand the most private papers on file regarding the subject. He was always treated with courtesy but told that there were no prices established by the Association, but all prices that were in effect were made by the individual manufacturers and that no law would effect the manufacturers right to continue this policy. This was the cause of this particular reporters remorse. He had pledged himself to his advertisers, and the public that there was to be a sensation, a prosecution and a conviction, and investigate as he might he could procure no evidence that would be of any use to him whatever. We have not heard of him for some months and his paper has ceased to mention in any way the grocery trust. The department stores were as sensational as the reporter and it seemed as if there was a collusion between the two for the purpose of making our association disband. They suffered disappointment and our Association is still in existence and the reporter has been forgotten, and we have forgiven him for his intended injury, because he is not responsible for his lack of knowledge of matters that he had never studied. It was a case of mistaken identity and he like some of our Texas and Ohio grocers placed the manufacturers establishing and maintaining prices on a plan with the oft tried and ever fatal way of prices by agreements between members.

Final Vindication.

The district attorney however would not give up his contention that the manufacturers had no right to establish prices, and he took the stand that the new law prevented any prices whatever, thereby placing an individual manufacturer in the light of a trust. I was one of a few who taken the position that no law would prevent the individual manufacturer from establishing prices and many were the predictions that failure was confronting this important department of the retail grocers paper. We let matters run along with as little publicity as possible well knowing that conditions would right themselves in the end. The final result is that the District Attorney has announced that the manufacturer has the right to establish prices and the daily papers have made a final statement that the Retail Grocers' Association is not nor has it been in violation of the law at any time.

The firm of ishop & Co. secured efficient attorneys who presented such conclusive evidence that the manufacturer had the right to protect his goods that the District Attorney says there will be no prosecutions unless two or more manufacturers are caught working together on the subject. This another bugaboo has passed and we are still on top.

THE BOSTON CONVENTION '08.

Secretary Connolly, who is also a director of the National Grocers Association then spoke forcefully upon the necessity of sending a strong delegation from California to the Convention at Boston in May, 1908 in order to help get the grocers of the country enthusiastic in the matter of having manufacturers maintain prices.

"The chief object to my mind," he said, "is a first class representation at Boston from California next May. If we would send a delegation such as they will from Denver, we will, have enough men to convert probably every delegate to the National Convention to our idea of joint action in inducing the manufacturers to maintain retail selling prices."

Mr. Connolly told of the great interest already excited by the discussions that took place at Dallas. He stated that both National Secretary Green and the delegates he had met later were agreed in stating that the matter of maintaining prices was of the greatest value.

Mr. Connolly told of activity in forming Dallas clubs. He urged that the grocers of California unite in forming a "Boston Club" of people who might desire to attend the next National Convention at Boston and be dwelt at length upon the value of attending that meeting. He told of the election to represent the West on the Board of Directors of the National Association and told how Oregon and Washington were preparing for a large representation and told the California grocers of many of the good things they might expect.

"The address of National Secretary Green," he continued, "has opened the eyes of many of our grocers to the need and value of the National Grocers Association."

Mr. Connolly explained the plans of the grocers intending to go to Boston in the shape of a Boston Club. He urged enough dues to insure $100 a piece for each member and then give theatre parties, whist parties, etc. to raise more money for general distribution. (Read about Boston Club elsewhere in this issue—full details.)

Upon the completion of Mr. Connolly's remarks, various sections the state were called upon for brief reports of progress. This feature wa commenced so close to the hour of adjournment that only Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Jose and Modesto had an opportunity to report.

On behalf of Los Angeles Mr. Mattaz of that city said:

While we of the South are not able to report an increase in our membership since last year, we are able to rport material benefits gained for our members.

Among the accomplishments of our organization since our last convention was the saving of $2.00 a month license which the city council proposed to put on every dealer who sold cigars. We were the only organization that took up the fight and with the assistance of a few individual cigar dealers we succeeded in preventing the passage of the measure after it was recommended by our Mayor and had received the favorable comment of a majority of the council. We also had a fight with our city council regarding a scale inspector which was added to the city force for the protection of the public supposedly, but the office was really created for the purpose of giving a political friend a job, and while we did not gain all we asked for we did succeed in having the proposed charges cut in half which means a saving of perhaps $4.000 a year to the merchants of Los Angeles. We were the only ones to protest against th passage of this measure and no individual help was given to our committee. We have also passed through a serious situation regarding the new anti-trust law and have passed through same without any loss whatever and we stand to-day stronger entrenched for the good of the grocers of our community than ever before. We have done our share toward securing the four valuable laws secured at the last session of the legislaturre, having spent with other Southern California towns about $300.00 in legislative expenses in addition to the amount we paid to the State Association. We have made material progress toward the organization of a mutual fire insurance company having at the present time more than $150.000 promised in risks and several thousand of our reserve funds subscribed. We have increased the size of our paper and delinquent list. We have just moved into larger and more central quarters where we have an office, meeting hall and display room 90 by 20 feet which gives us ample space for all purposes. We still have our fight on with the department store management and while we have to report two of our wholesalers as deserters we believe they have seen their mistake and the prices now being published at the department store shows they have to respect the wishes of the retail grocers of Southern California whether they buy goods direct or through the jobbers We are preparing for a mammoth pure food show which we believe will be the biggest exposition of the kind ever given in the west. We just held the most successfull picnic ever given by our association netting us more than $1.000 which gives us funds to meet our State and National expenses. Many matters of smaller importance have been accomplished too numerous to mention, but we are satisfied with our progress and wish each and every Association as great success as we have achieved and if there are those who have done more we extnd the glad hand and say well and good, for you are entitled to all you get.

San Francisco.

George B. Doyle was then called on to report on behalf of San Francisco. Mr. Doyle's remarks were brief and to the point, reciting as they did the recent success with Ghirardelli and the pending fight for a living and maintained profit on beer. The fact that San Francisco is at present free from any vicious cutters and trading etamp troubles was also brought out. Mr. Doyle went on to say that all present indications pointed to a big membership in the very near future—the present membership campaign now under way with the assistance of Mr. Carl Harrison showing great results.

San Jose.

San Jose was next called upon and delegate Jones gave a very optimistic report of conditions there so far as the future was concerned—their chief difficulty being to secure an efficient secretary. It now appears that a way has been found to supply this deficiency through an arrangement now being planned.

Modesto.

Modesto, with Mr. Clary of Rice & Clary as the speaker, made her report to the effect that while the Association there had at times fallen into a somnolent state, the present state of affairs was such as to insure an Association of great value to all concerned.

On motion, the convention then adjourned until 9 A. M. Thursday.

AN AUTOMOBILE RIDE.

At this juncture the delegates found automobiles at the door and the balance of the afternoon was spent in visiting Sutters' Fort, Oak Park, The Buffalo Brewing Co.'s plant and the California Winery where the delegates were treated to many courtesies, now duly acknowldged.

THE THEATRE PARTY.

In the evening the delegates and their ladies were given a theatre party at "The Alisky"—the thrilling military play "Winchester" being the bill.

THIRD DAY.
Thursday Sept. 12.

The third, and last day of the convention found most of the delegates in their chairs at 9:30 A. M. when President Jost called them to order.

At the close of Wednesday's proceedings, members from various points were reporting conditions as they found them in their own bailiwicks. The following reports were made upon call of the chair:

Joy D. Campbell, Stockton.—"We consider our Association the best investment we have ever made. We had to change our plans under the new law,but we have been able to go on with our work because, of the good feeling that has grown from long comradeeship brought about by our organization. We have one man who cuts a little now. We ignore him and his prices. We realize that the future of our Association work lies with the State Association. Success in maintaining prices lies with the manufacturer. We can no longer do this through agreements by Association. Our work must lie along this line and we should be alert to secure these ends.

J. P. Burbank, Anderson.—"I come from a small town. We have no organization but would be glad to help in building up an association for this district with Redding as a center.

Mr. Peck, Beckwith.—"I came here as an idividual to learn and to take back to my neighbors news of what is possible in the way of organized effort. This meeting has been of great value.

Mr. Dodge, Crockett.—"We have only four grocers in our city. Mr. Booth, one of our neighbors, attended the last convention. We believe the retail grocers are doing good work in their organization. I came to do what I could to learn how to better conditions in our neighborhood and I propose to help organize our own and near surrounding towns.

Mr. Rodgers, Vallejo.—"I intend to go back and try to encourage our grocers to form a grocers association. We have 12 or 13 grocers and, with the adjoining towns, we can make a good association.

J. F. Limpinsel, Placerville.—"We have an association of 6 members. We have an understanding as to certain prices, particularly as to butter and eggs."

Mr. Limpinsel explained that the greatest problem they faced was the unfair action of a certain flour milling company which is to-day one of the strongest supporters of protected prices throughout Southern California and the cities about San Francisco bay and in Sacramento and Stockton. A lively discussion ensued in which many members joined. Numerous delegates suggested that if properly called to the attention of this mill, the correction would be made.

Mr. Jones, Sacramento.—"Our Association has had its ups and downs. Our old association got into the shoals about five or six years ago. About four years ago we reorganized and elected and executive committee which fixed prices on certain important staples, that were upheld by the entire trade. We have since that time been a power to help ourselves and, I think, every grocer in the State. One source of strength has lain in the fact that there has been almost no friction among the largest stores.

Mr. Hale, Sacramento.—"We have no combination on prices. Our organization advises its members as to what prices should be and they sell at those prices."

Mr. Faucher, Sacramento.—"Upon the passage of the Cartwright law, we did away with the fine formerly imposed on those who did not maintain our prices. Our members now cooperate because they have learned its value and we depend on the honor of the grocers and our trust has been well founded."

Mr. Meacham, Toamles.—"I have learned a great deal by my experience at this convention. The State Association has done a great deal for all the grocers. I am satisfied that it has done as much for us in the country as for the men in the cities. We had the same trouble with one of the flour companies as was reported by our Placerville brother. When we made our complaint, it was corrected."

F. F. Dustin, Redding.—"We have no grocers association although we have a Merchant's Club. The grocers work together and we obtain satisfactory prices in most instances. Flour prices are all right now. One of the reasons our representation is so small is that the grocers of Redding have no real complaint. The grocers are able to settle most questions by telephone.

COMMITTEE REPORTS RESUMED.

A few more reports were made. The convention then resumed the reports of committee.

PROPOSED LEGISLATION.

John D. Campbell of Stockton presented the following report:

Whereas, To properly conduct a mercantile business on safe lines, it is necessary that laws be passed to protect those engaged in same and

Whereas, The passing of such laws can best be secured by co-operation of mercantile associations; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we recommend that the Board of Directors of the California Retail Grocer's and Merchants' Association present at the next session of the State Legislature, laws covering the following points:

1st. That date of the last transaction shall be the date from which statute begins to operate.

2d. Honest weights and measures—net weight or measure to govern.

3d. Dishonest advertising, such as offering goods not as represented: offenses being punishable by a fine or imprisonment or both.

4th. That a law similar to the Equitable Process Law as operated in Kentucky to be used against debtors that try to trade their just obligations.

5th. We recommend that the state association and all local association communicate with their nearest represented in Congress and urge them to defeat the proposed Parcel Post Law or any law on similar lines.

6th. Also recommend that an amendent be placed on the bill known as the Palmer Bill to read $500 instead of $300. (National Legislation in re Bankruptcy.)

7th. We also recommend that the State Association and all affiliating Associations work with the Congressional Representatives and Senators from this State in an effort to defeat the Parcels Post measure known as the Henry Bill.

Same was adopted 8 point see copy ..

FAVOR THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Mr. Stulz of San Francisco introduced the following report, which was adopted as read:

Whereas, the dissemination of the association idea has been much encouraged during the past few years by the activity of the National Retail Grocer's Association, and

Whereas, the grocers of the country would be greatly benefited by the prevention of the passage of the Parcels Post bill and

Whereas, the retail merchants of the United States need the protection of a limitation of at least $500 as the amount that a man must owe before before he can take advantage of the Bankruptcy Law and

Whereas, the grocers of the country can only secure recognition from the National Congress through the medium of an organization that voices the sentiments of the grocers in many different states, and

Whereas, there are many movements of general value that can be assisted by the co-operation of grocers in widely different communities; therefore be it

Resolved, that we consider it to the advantage of every Grocer's Association in California to affiliate with the National Retail Grocer's Association and lend its influence and financial support to the maintenance of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to every affiliating association in California, with a letter advising them to forward their per capita tax to the national secretary, and, if possible to send a delegates to the annual convention, which convenes at Boston in May, 1908.

ABATING TRADE ABUSES.

F. F. Dustin of presented the following resolutions which were adopted:

Whereas, Many Wholesalers and manufacturers sell indiscriminately to all hotels, restaurants, boarding houses, colleges, logging camps, etc.

Whereas, Much of that trade would otherwise go to retail dealers, and

Whereas, The majority of this, business is ultimately secured by those firms, which while doing a retail business, pretend to be wholesalers; be it further

Resolved, That the California Retail Grocer's and Merchant's Association disapprove of the practice on the part of wholesaler's and manufacturers in selling to establishments that would otherwise be supplied by retail grocers, and whose trade really belongs to the retailers of their respective communities; be it further

Resolved, That when a wholesaler or manufacturer insists upon continuing such a policy in the face of opposition that we will consider such action on their part as unfriendly, and act accordingly.

Whereas, The firm that sells to consumers in any one community makes it evident that they would sell to the consumers in other communities if circumstances made it profitable; be it

Resolved, That the affiliating association and individual members of the California Retail and Merchant's Association pledge themselves to confine their trade as far as possible to those concerns whose business is large enough to warrant their doing a strictly wholesale grocery business in each community where they operate.

Whereas, The retail grocers of many communities suffer from the unfair competition of tea and coffee peddlers, and the consuming public are generally deluded in the quality of the goods purchased from the persistent salesmen who play upon the sympathy and credulity of the innocent housewife and who pay no rent, no taxes, no license, no insurance, no interest on investment, no clerk hire, no gas power or light, and pay nothing to support the local government.

Resolved, That each Association should use its influence with the legislative body of its community to secure the passage of ordinances tending to restrict peddlers and make them pay their just proportion towards conducting the local government.

Resolved, That we consider it unfair for any firm that seeks the trade of retail grocers to send out peddlers, or solicitors for peddlers, or supply peddlers with goods.

Further resolved that when existing troubles hereinbefore specified cannot be remedied by local action that the State Association be notified to take up the matter and secure satisfactory adjustment of the trouble.

PREMIUM SCHEMES.

Whereas, The adoption of premium schemes as a method of advertising by one manufacturer, invariably results in the adoption of similar schemes by his competitors, and by so doing, reduce the value of said advertisement to nothing; and

Whereas, The payment for these premiums always has to be made by the retailer and later by the consumer, and

Whereas, In this way, the retail grocers are forced to handle crockery, silverware, clocks, etc., generally to the disadvantage of other merchants and without adequate returns to the grocers for the amount of money invested and the special effort required; be it

Resolved, That this organization declare itself as being opposed to the use of premium schemes by manufacturers, be it further

Resolved, That we will, in every instance, give perference in the sale of goods to those who seek to secure an increase of business because of quality and price consideration rather than by the giving away of presents.

Resolved, That the only legitimate basis of competition is quality and sevice, and that we are opposed to the giving of premiums in any form or manner.

EXTENSION OF ORGANIZATION.

Frank B. Connolly of San Francisco presented the following resolutions which were adopted:

Extension of Organization.
Dependent Branches.

Resolved, that where there are enough grocers and general merchants in a town to authorize the formation of an association shall be formed as "The .....Branch of the California Retail Grocer's and Merchant's Association" and the dues of the members be fixed at not less than $1.00 per month, payable in advance, the State Association to supply all letter heads, envelopes and other printing. That the State Association appoint a secretary whose duty it shall be to distribute to the members each month a copy of the State Delinquent List; to collect the dues each month, to help members act together to induce manufacturers to maintain prices in their territory to get from the members their bad bills sending the accounts to the State Association for its collectors to handle; sending a list of all accounts in his hands each month together with a record of collections, etc., to the State Association office for publication; keeping a record of all meetings of the branches of which he is secretary and attend to the correspondence of said branches. Each branch Association shall be entitled to 10 per cent of all moneys collected for dues from its members, the same to be paid to its local treasurer.

Recommend a Delinquent List.

Whereas, we recognize that a delinquent list and a collection agency is of inestimable value to the members of the California Fetail and Merchants Association, and

Whereas, it is necessary to facilitate a more speedy location of bad debtors and obtain a ready co-operation of the various members with the State Secretary, be it

Resolved, that the Secretary undertake issuance of credit ratings when called upon by the indivual members or secretaries of the affiliating associations, that he shall keep a record of such ratings in his office for ready reference.

National Secretary Green in this respect explains the National Organization was maintining a list of Secretaries so that each secretary in California could get information for his members from any association in the country.

INDEPENDENT BRANCHES.

In those communities capable of maintaining an effective, independent organzation, we would recommend that the following steps be taken:

First.—Let the State Field secretary help canvas the local field to secure the greatest possible membership.

Second.—Canvas adjoining communities to insure and secure their co-operation where practical.

Third.—Visit the affiliating associations at least once each year.

CONSTITUTION & BY-LAWS.

F. B. Fancher of Sacramento submitted the report of the Committee on changes to the Constitution and By-Laws.

A suggested change fixing the per capita tax permanently at $1.00 instead of leaving it to be fixed each year was adopted.

It was suggested that the number of Directors be changed from 5 to 6. A motion to adopt was made.

Mr. Mottaz of Los Angeles moved to amend by making the directors10, thus making the Board consist of 15.

Mr. Hale of Sacramento favored the motion.

Mr. Pearson of Stockton explained that he had opposed the idea at first but now favored it since he saw that it would be a great help.

W. E. O'Connor of Stockton suggested that the directors could appoint committees to take charge of special work, such as extending organization and attending the "Advocate."

Mr. Stulz of San Francisco favored the motion.

Several other members favored it and it passed.

Mr. Paulding moved the Sec. 3 be amended by making quorum 7 in lieu of 5 as at present.

Mr. King opposed on grounds of personal experience proving inadvisability.

Mr. Dustin explained his position as a director and said his experience made 5 seem sufficient.

Motion put—division called for—rising vote—17 aye—18 Noes. Motion lost.

After some further discussion the report was adopted with amendments.

WAYS AND MEANS.

Mr. Pearson of Stockton for the Ways and Means Committee offered, the following resolution which were read and adopted:

Resolved, That each affiliating Association be asked to pass a resolution making the Advocate its official paper and also authorizing its secretary to send out official letters on the request of the Advocate committee to help the paper get advertising.

Resolved, that the dues of individual members remain at $3 per year.

Resolved, that the State Directors be given full power to all in the matter of filing the dues of Dependent Branch Associations and deciding what proportion of the dues shall be given to the local treasury

Resolved, that the per capita tax remain $1 per year per member.

Resolved, that each affiliating Association report every 3 months reporting accessions to membership and paying full per capita tax per on all new members.

GROCERS ADVOCATE.

John W. King, Chairman of Advocate Committee offered the following resolutions which were read and adopted:

Whereas, effective association efforts depends upon the enthusiasm and confidence of the members. and

Whereas, in California the instrument that has done most in the way of organizing and in securing united action has been the Grocers' Advocate; and

Whereas, this paper is now the property of and controlled solely by the California Retail Grocers & Merchant's Association be it

Resolved, that each affiliating association be asked to take the following steps:

1. Pass resolutions making the "Advocate" their official paper.

2. Authorize the secretary to write official letters on the request of the State Chairman of the Advocate committee to help get advertising.

3d. Have the secretary try to get all members to at least try the paper for 3 months.

4th. Authorize the secretary to send data at least once a month to the "Advocate" on the request of the Advocate Management. be it further

Resolved, that every member of the State Association should "boost" the Advocate to all drummers as the best paper of its kind published—which it unquestionably is. since there is none other like it.

MAINTAINING PRICES.

J. S. Jones of Sacramento on behalf of the Maintaining Price Committee offer the following resolution which were read and adopted:

The Jobbers Responsibility.

Whereas, The cost of conducting the grocery business has been continually increasing, both through the necessity for stores of finer appearance, better delivery service and putting in of high class fixtures, and

Whereas, the merchant who intends to pay one hundred cents on the dollar must secure a fair margin of profit on all the goods he sells, and

Whereas, The few cutting stores of each city usually fail after a short career in which they have demoralized the prices of the conservative trade and taken from the conservative grocers many of their customers; be it

Resolved, That this association consider that the jobber who supplies such cutting firms goods on credit is guilty of an act that is prejudicial to our interests and unfriendly and unfair to the rest of their trade.

Want Manufacturers To Act.

Whereas, The highest courts of the land have decided that the manufacturer may name the price which consumers shall pay for his article, and also has the right to refuse to sell to dealers, both retail and wholesale, who fail to maintain the prices he may fix; be it

Resolved, That we consider it to the best interests of the grocery trade for the manufacturer to require from the trade agreements to maintain a certain fixed retail selling price upon his product satisfactory to the retailer and also that he require of the jobbing trade that they refuse to supply retail firms that insist upon cutting his established prices; and Grocers Want Contracts.

Whereas, When the manufacturer fails to require of every retail dealer handling his goods a contract to maintain the selling price, and when the manufacturer fails to enforce the contract in any instance, the trade is upset thereby and those parties who maintain the contract are put at a disadvantage by those who did not, and are therefore liable to lose trade; be it

Resolved, That this association favors the selling of goods on the contract plan by the manufacturer, and will co-operate with the manufacturer, in maintaining such contract price only when the manufacturer enforces the price contract by every legal means in his power.

Should Encourage Workers.

Whereas, The maintenance of prices on an article in one community tends to make it easier to maintain the selling price of that article in other communities; and

Whereas, The opposite of this is true, and the selling of an article at a cut-rate in one community dissatisfies consumers who are paying a fair price with the dealer supplying them; be it

Resolved, That it is the duty of each Retail Grocer's Association on the Pacific Coast to lend its strength and influence towards encouraging the goods of those manufacturers who may maintain their selling prices, even though the grocers of those particular communities may not have been successful in establishing a card price.

All Associations Should Help.

Whereas, The success of the movement to maintain prices in any community in many instances depends upon the knowledge of the manufacturer that if he fails to maintain a fair retail selling price in a certain community, he will lose business in many other communities, and

Whereas, When manufacturers will allow their goods to be cut in one community, it is very good evidence that they will allow their goods to be cut in other communities.

Resolved, That each affiliating association in California should, in justice to itself, pass resolutions agreeing to discourage the sale of goods, the prices of which the manufacturers will not maintain.

Contracts With Jobbers.

Whereas, certain manufacturers have found it possible to minimize cutting on their goods by selling only through jobbers who sign a contract to sell these goods only to retailers who sign agreements to maintain the retail selling price, Be it

Resolved, that we urge upon manufacturers the advisability of the contract plan. Be it further

Resolved, that we will assist in every way in our power to advance the sale of goods so protected.

Want National Co-operation.

Whereas, the value of the maintenance of prices and the extent to which manufacturers can afford to devote themselves to this policy depends upon the extent to which they are supported by the retail grocery trade. Be it

Resolved, That we urge the officers of the National Grocers Association to use its influence to induce manufacturers of articles of widespread use to adopt the contract selling plan in all communities where the retail grocers are prepared to give such manufacturers the support that will warrant their undertaking this system.

Practical Methods.

Whereas, every dealer must help if the protection of prices by the manufacturer is to be continued profitably to all concerned. be it

Resolved, that the Field Secretary take the necessary steps to keep members informed at frequent intervals of the prices that are being maintained and secure from members the promise to notify him promptly whenever any such prices may be cut.

GENERAL RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Paulding, of Los Angeles, Chairman of the Committee on General Resolutions, offered the following resolutions; same were adopted as read:

Whereas, Owing to ill health caused largely by zealous work in behalf of an association two of one leading members, Mr. J. R. Newberry and Mr. H. Hauch were unable to attend our eighth annual convention and

Whereas, we miss their genial countenances, wise counsel and valuable suggestions. therefore be it

Resolved, that we express our regrets at their non attendance and hope their trips will be the means of restoring their health and bringing them back to us better in health, more loyal in spirit.

Maintaining Prices.

(By request of officers of Pacific Coast Retail Grocers' Association.)

Whereas, The Pacific Coast plan adopted by many manufacturers, whereby the retail price of many of our leading staples are protected, thereby guaranteeing an adequate profit to the retailer, has been very beneficial to the retail trade at large, therefore be it

Resolved, that we reiterate our belief in this policy and recommended other manufacturers to inaugurate this system. Also our National Association to endorse this movement and make it a paramount issue.

Praise for Pioneers.

We especially commend the following manufacturers, who are doing an interstate business and who have adopted the Pacific Coast plan of protecting a consumer's minimum price:

Enoch Morgn's Sons Co, of New York on Sapolio.

Fairbanks & Co., of Chicago, on Cottolene.

National Food Co., of Niagara Falls, Shredded Wheat Biscuit and Triculi.

Kirk & Co., Chicago, Soaps and Crystola.

Gibson Soap Co., Omaha, Neb., Soap. Crystola.

Thurston, A., Chicago, Silver Polish.

Also the following California manufacturers:

A. Schilling & Co.
C. P. Grogan & Co., Los Angeles, Olive Oils.
Bishop & Co., Los Angeles, Ketchups and Crackers.
Los Angeles Soap Co., Soaps.
Bowles Bros., Compound Flours, etc.
Del Monte Mills, Meals and Breakfast Foods.
The Sperry Flour Company.
The Globe Grain & Milling Company.
The Stockton Milling Company.
The Port Costa Milling Company.
The D. Ghirardelli & Co.
A Schilling & Co.
J. A. Folger & Co.
Phoenix Milling Co., all of whom are protecting their prices.

Who Are Wholesalers?

"Whereas, in the great fabric of produring and manufacturing, distributing and consuming trade, there is a great need of harmonizing and systematizing to the end that the producer and manufacturer shall get the highest possible price for their production and that consumers shall have their goods at the lowest possible price consistent with economy and perfection in the food line; therefore, be it

Resolved that the producer and manufacturer should recognize two branches of the grocery distributing trade, namely, the wholesaler and retailer, and that there shall be a difference in the price that each shall pay the producer and manufacturer for their product, and

Whereas, it becomes necessary that there shall be a well defined line drawn between these two branches of distributers; therefore, be it

Resolved, that the producer and manufacturer shall recognize as a wholesaler those who distribute to wholesale and retail distributers, and as retailers those who distribute to wholesalers, retailers and consumers; and be it further

Resolved, that when the wholesaler, who, having the advantage, shall sell other than wholesale and retail distributers, they shall then be declared retailers by the producers and manufacturers and price his goods accordingly."

AGAINST PARCELS POST.

(Resolution by J. F. Paulding adopted by the L. A. Ass'n Sept, 6, 1907)

Whereas, The concentration of capital, power and influence in the hands of a few dangerous and against public policy and

Whereas, The passage of any act by our Congress that will tend to create a condition that will inure to the benefit of only a few is detrimental to the best interests of the great masses, especially when only large corporations with immense capital would be the only beneficiaries and

Whereas, The concentration of the mercantile business in the hands of a few has historically proven a detriment to the producer, consumer and the great mass of retail dealers and has almost invariably caused a reduction of wages, and the employment of female and child labor, also to impoverish the hundreds of thousands of small retailers who support our rural communities by subscribing to local charities, employing our nations wealth fairly and where it will do the most good and

Whereas, The large department stores and mail order houses are the leading exponents of a parcels post measure and would benefit by it to the detriment of the great masses of the American people and the passage of any such an act would concentrate trade at great centers of commerce at the expense of the government and cause the public to face a postal deficit and build up a monopoly of the retail trade of this country and

Whereas, Owing to the great territory covered by the U. S. Postal service the loss would be enormous, the greater portion of which would be borne by people who gained absolutely nothing by the passage of the act; and the benefits revert to a few which is against the principles on which our government is founded "the greatest good to the greatest number" and

Whereas, No country of greater area that one of our principal states has a parcels post now in effect which fact precludes any reference to them as a reason for adopting such a measure in this country and

Whereas, The retail merchants of our rural districts, especially of the West are forced to buy goods in wholesale quantities and pay local freight and packing charges which in many cases are more than the proposed charges by parcels post and in no instance will the merchants be able to take advantage of the proposed measure, therefore be it

Resolved, That we the California Retail Grocers and Merchants Association in convention assembled this the 12th, day of Sept. 1907 do hereby protest against the passage of any parcels post measure under any plan that has yet been devised and urge our president and representatives to oppose all such legislation.

TO HELP OHIO GROCERS.

(Resolution by J. F. Paulding.)

Whereas: The tendency of some wholesalers to start retail and chain stores seems to be growing in favor and

Whereas:—We note that the Eldridge Higgins Co. of Columbus, Ohio, have recently bought a number of retail stores in that vicinity notwithstanding the fact they are receiving the benefits of the best price offered by the manufacturers as wholesalers, therefore be it

Resolved—That, we, the retail grocers of California, offer our support to our Ohio brothers, in placing Eldridge Higgins Co. where they belong, on the retailers list.

PRIASE FOR JONES of San Jose.

(Adopted by a rising vote.)

Whereas—The grocers of San Jose have for the past three years been facing an unfortunate condition which precluded them from sending delegates to the State Convention, and

Whereas—Notwithstanding the unfortunate sntuation Mr. H. E. Jones has always been in attendance and did his utmost to further the interest of the State Association, therefore be it

Resolved—That we extend our hearty appreciation and a vote of thanks to Mr. Jones for his loyalty and manifest interest in our welfare and request that he grace our conventions in the future with his presence under all circumstances and be it further

Resolved—That we recommend that many more Jones of a like kind shall be induced if possible to go into the grocery business in this State.

PARKS BROS. ARE RETAILERS.

(Resolution by J. F. Paulding.)

Whereas:—Repeated complaints have been made against the firm of Parks Bro., supposd wholesale grocers of San Francisco, accusing them of Retailing and

Whereas, These complaints have as yet been undenied, therefore be it

Resolved, That we recommend our board of directors to take this matter up at once and request the manufacturers to place them on the retailers

FOR BETTER ORGANIZATION.

(By request of F. F. Dustin.)

Whereas The benefits of our State Associations have largely been confined to the larger and more central cities, and

Whereas There is a great need of our small districts being better organized, therefore be it

Resolved, That we recommend our board of directors to send an organizer to the outside towns at the earliest opportunity.

PRAISE FOR WORKERS.

Whereas We believe that good and efficient service rendered to our association should be appreciated, especially when rendered without recompense, therefore be it

Rsolved That we extend our thanks and appreciation to the following for their services rendered during the past year and during this Convention.

Mr. A. A. Jost our president.
Mr. F. B. Connolly, our Secretary.
Mr. A. H. Powers our Field Secretary.
The management of the Advocate.
Mr. F. F. Wear: Advertisers in the Advocate, and every member of the board of directors and

We recommend a rising vote of thanks for the splendid entertainment accorded us by the Sacramento Retail Grocers.

The motion was put and passed with three cheers and a tiger.

VALUE OF CO-OPERATION.

At this juncture Mr. F. B. Fancher of Sacramento delivered an extemporaneous address o nthe value of cooperation citing the experience of Sacramento grocers in this respect. His remarks were listened to with great interest and frequent applause

Mr. Fancher was formerly Governor of North Dakota.

"SHORTAGES AND LEAKS."

Mr. George B. Doyle of San Francisco was then called upon to deliver an address on "Shortages and Leaks" but owing to the limited amount of time remaining, Mr. Doyle confined himself to a few remarks which came straight from the shoulder and certainly wakened more than one delegate to the leaks of various sorts which sap the grocery business.

PACIFIC COAST RETAIL GROCERS ASSOCIATION.

Mr. Connollyl at the request of the Pacific Coast Retail Grocers Association read the following report from that organization:

Los Angeles, Cal., September 3.

The Pacific Coast Retail Grocers Association begs to report to the Convention as follows:

Wonderful Progress Made.

Our whole work during the past year has been concentrated upon one thing and one object, that being the Pacific Coast plan and what it means to honest manufacturers and it seems to us who have been nearest the firing line that we have made wonderful progress, much more signs of receptive recognition from the largest manufacturers during the past year than ever before. The more the Pacific Coast plan is understood the more it is appreciated and adopted. The wonderful fight made by the Pacific Coast at the National Convention for fixed prices and the result of that work if familiar to all of you gentlemen. There is no question to-day of the success of the proposition. It is along the line of progressive commercialism; is the only way that leading manufacturers to-day can get anywhere near the proper results from their wonderful amount of advertising. Straws point the way the wind blows.

Retailer Is King.

The retail dealers of this country are just beginning to recognize their power for good to their friends the consumer through united, conscientious and honest effort. The failure of the "Sunny Jim" breakfast food aggregation is entirely due to their lack of recognition of the retailer in allowing him a reasonable compensation for the work that they have been doing or trying to forc them to do. They depended entirely upon printers' ink, ignoring the Jobbers' compensation and also the retailer. They did remember the jobber to the extent of 8 per cent, but they practically required the retailer to do his work for them for nothing. The retailer bought none result, to them, after spending $3,750,000 for advertising, they had to go to the wall, showing conclusively the manufacturers can manufacture and advertise, the jobbers can stock, but it takes the retailer to give the increase. This should be kept uppermost in the minds of every intelligent and honest reailer. First, that his customers are his friends and they look to him for protection; therefore he has that part of the trade absolutely with him if he is honest; it wants each one of us to recognize honesty as a basic principle of our success. Therefore we find the necessity of expanding the Pacific Coast Association to a wider and a grander field and we recommend that the Pacific Coast Association be reorganized into the National Protective Association; for this organization to take in the entire field of the American continent. United States, Canada and its provinces.

Our reasons for this are first, that we have a State organization which plays an important and a prominent part in the handling of our local associations; that we have our local association which locally sustains the State association and keeps in touch with the individual members in the different localities. These should work in absolute harmony. The National Protective Association should be an organization that reaches every state and territory, as well as our bordering nation that we can work in harmony and justice not only to ourselves but to our neighbor.

It is going to be of the utmost importance that the future of the retail grocery business should be kept on the highest possible plan and that can only be done through trusted education organized and handled by the retailers themslves. We must have reliable and honest information upon everything that pertains to our business; we must know and not to be deceived by interested parties, either manufacturer, producer or distributor.

The membership of this National organization shall be composed of producers and manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and consumers. You will readily see this covers the entire vocabulary of American commercialism in our line.

Must Accept Conditions.

In our investigation and pressing the subject with important manufacturers during the past ewelve months there has been but one answer and that is: "Yes, we will work with the retailer either through the jobber or direct, as it best suits our policy, putting the lowest line of gravity between ourselves and the consumer." "You must recognize" they say "that the consumer is our objective point; that we must use the distributors best adopted for our purpose. It may be the wholesaler and the retailer, or it may be the retailer alone. Still we propose to work to get our production to the consumer at the easiest and most inexpensive way we can in order that he shall get our production at the most reasonable and economical price. Now there is no exception to any manufacturers that we have had the opportunity to discuss this matter during the past year. So this proposition confronts us. We must adopt ourselves to the conditions. Therefore, we must get in close touch and work in harmony with the wishes of the manufacturers' goods that our customers demand and always reserving the right to scrupulously inspect the integrity and the food value of such production. Now, this is the main object of the National Association, that it shall take up and investigate scientifically and with the government on the Pure Food lines that our customers shall have the greatest food value of the kind of goods that we present them that can be or is made in this country or in foreign lands. This is a broad subject and is of as much interest to prominent distributors all over America. Therefore in order to get the best results we must not be selfish in our investigations and protections. Thetre are approximately 250,000 retailers in America, and out of this number there are less than 300 catalogue houses—that is firms that issue monthly, semi-annually or annual catalogues. These houses are of great importance to the balance of the trade because it assists them in giving them an idea of what goods are retailed for and what merchants ask for them.

The object of the National Association should be to get manufacturers to establish minimum retail prices; to issue price lists showing the retailer what the goods are to be retailed at, as well as wholesale by the wholesaler.

Years's Progress.

The Pacific Retail Grocers Association added 23 business manufacturers during the past year to the number that have fixed retail prices. We strongly recommend the State Association to adopt the Pacific Coast plan in manufacturers making fixed prices. This plan, as you know, requires the manufacturer to place upon the outside of the case a notice reading in effect as follows:

NOTICE.

Goods contained in this case are sold on the condition, which is made part of the consideration of this sale, that if the purchaser retails them he will sell them at not less than our minimum fixed consumers' price, and if he wholesales them he will sell them under the same condition. That in receiving these goods it is understood and agreed that the distributors will conform his selling price at not less than our lowest minimum fixed prices than are as follows: (Here follows the fixed prices).

Now, we feel that the Association should in some proper way adopt strong resolutions and then insist upon manufacturers who claim to be friends of the retailers adopting this in every instance.

The latest convert we have to this plan is Walter F. Lowney of Boston, Mass. and the Joseph Campbell Soup people in their entire line, of Camden, N. J. and th Sea Foam Baking Powder people of New York, a rival of the Royal Baking Powder, which is making great strides in New England. There are six other large manufacturers prominent who have agreed to give this matter great consideration and will report to us, and I believe in every case will adopt it between now and January 1st. All of these institutions are goods that are staple on the Pacific Coast. The entire efforts of the Pacific Coast Association have been made for the entire coast and we want to commend the work of Secrtary J. J. Higgins of Seattle, Washington, untiring in his efforts, publishing his paper and has carried on the work to a wonderful degree and is a power in Washington and Oregon.

Credit to Paulding.

The Secretary of the Southern California Association, Mr. J. F. Paulding is an untiring worker; never has slacked in his duty towards the Pacific Coast Association; doing the work that has been required of him, and more too, in Southern California.

The finances of the Association will be reported to you by our worthy Secretary and Treasurer, but we know from past experience that the amount of money must be very limited that has been used during the past year. The actual cost prices were carried out according to agreement. We do not find the responsive demand that we anticipated because of a lack of funds to carry the necessary intelligence to the proper people.

Ine th National Protective organization you will notice that it is proposed in that to carry the cost prices only of those articles that we go into or have a demand from interested people in wanting to know the particular cots. There are certain lines of goods that the National organization's people will keep the organization thoroughly posted in, which are enumerated in the suggestions of benefits to be received from that organization.

Hoping that we have not given you too lengthy a report for our hopes for the future, we are, yours truly,

J. R. NEWBERRY.

THANKS TO MR. GREEN.

On motion of J. F. Paulding of Los Angeles a vote of thanks was given Mr. John A. Green of Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers. As a mark of special appreciation a standing vote was taken.

Mr. Green responded in a few words of thanks in behalf of Mrs. Green and himself; saying that he loved the work and the California Retail Grocers and Merchants Association could rest assured that nothing will be left undone which tended to the welfore of the grocers.

Mr. Green serves without compensation, only requiring, that his necessary traveling expenses be paid. The position carries with it a high salary but Mr. Green preferred the money be used for the good of the National Association.

NOMINATIONS.

Next in order came the report of the committee on nominations. Chairman Mottaz, in its behalf, offered the following candidates for the approval of the convention:

President, Geo. B. Boyle, San Francisco.

1st Vice-President, F. N. Aubry, Stockton.

2nd Vice-President, C. A. Mattaz, Los Angeles.

3rd Vice-President, H. E. Jones, San Jose.

Treasurer, C. B. Pearson, Stockton,

Directors:

A. A. Jost, Sacramento.
W. C. Longstreth, Los Angeles.
J. R. Newberry, Los Angeles.
J. J. Hughes, Nevada City.
J. F. Limpinsel, Placerville.
L. Warnke, Alameda.
H. K. Duncan, Oakland.
L. R. Eccleston, Fresno.
F. B. Connolly, San Francisco.

Mr. Jones of San Jose offered a minority report in which he recommended Mr. John W. King in lieu of J. W. Limpensel of Placerville, stating as his reason that Mr. King had proved an extremely efficient director and had handled the "Advocate" with great success.

Mr. Paulding said that the Los Angeles delegation had succeeded in getting one officer and two directors and therefore felt that they could best withdraw one of their men, and said that they would be willing to have Mr. King serve in place of Mr. J. R. Newberry. With this understanding Mr. Jones withdrew his minority report and Mr. King's name was placed in nomination in lieu of Mr. Newberry.

With the above amendment the report of the committee on nominations was adopted.

CONVENTION CITY.

Nominations for the honor of entertaining the next State convention were then declared in order.

On beha'f of San Francisco Mr. Jos. A. Stulz placed that city in nomination in a few well chosen words.

Mr. Mottaz of Los Angeles seconded the nomination, explaining as he did so, that he came to the convention determined that his home city should win the plum—but that the pressure in favor of San Francisco was so strong that he felt it his duty to do all he could for the Northern metropolis—depending upon the sense of justice of the San Francisco boys to get the convention in 1909. His remarks were the occasion of prolonged applause.

Nominations were then declared closed.

Upon the vote being put San Francisco was declared the meeting place of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association September, 1908.

Mr. Stulz arose and assured Mr. Mottaz and the Los Angeles delegation that he would pull for Los Angeles with all his might next year.

Mr. Geo. B. Doyle of San Francisco thanked the convention for the honor bestowed upon his home city and upon the Associated Retail Grocers and promised the delegates the time of their lives.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mr. Fancher of Sacramento moved that the Secretary be instructed to cast the ballot of the convention for the officers and directors as proposed by the Nominating Committee.

The motion was put and adopted, whereupon Mr. Connolly stepped forward and cast the ballot with the result already recorded on page 5 of this issue.

The new officers were then escorted to their seats and President Doyle expressed his appreciation of the honor bestowed upon him and promised an administration which would bring forth all the strength within him.

Mr. Jost, before relinquishing the chair to Mr. Doyle, took occasion to thank the officers and directors who had served with him, for their cooperation and friendship.

A motion to adjourn sine die being in order same was put and passed—thus closing the most successful convention the grocers of California have ever held and one which promises much for the ensuing year under the new officers and directors.

STATE DIRECTORS MEET.

Old Board Adjourns Sine Die and New Board Organizes.

After the banquet on Thursday evening, the Board of Directors of the State Association, who had served during the past year, met in session and after voting on several minor matters adjourned sine die.

Immediately upon that action being taken, the new Board gathered and organized. The hour being late, little discussion was indulged in. It was agreed to meet in San Francisco early next month. Meeting then adjourned.

TROLLEY RIDE TO MARYSVILLE.

Most Enjoyable and Entertaining Visit to the County Seat of Yuba County.

On Thursday afternoon the delegates were taken for a flying trip to the prosperous and busy city of Marysville, via the new electric interurban system, operated by the Northern Electric Co. Something over an hour was taken in going from Sacramento to the point of interest.

The Chamber of Commerce of Marysville had been advised of the proposed visit of the grocers and they were certainly on hand with a big welcome. The details of the entertainment provided were under the supervision of Mr. W. H. Parks, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

On arrival, the visitors were greeted by his Honor, Mayor Hall, who in a few well chosen words expressed his pleasure at the opportunity to entertain the representatives of the grocers of the great commonwealth of California.

The ladies who accompanied the delegates, were escorted to the parlors of the Western Hotel by a committee composed of a number of prominent ladies of Maryville. In their behalf, Mrs. Emma Hapgood expressed her gratification at having the opportunity to meet the wives of the delegates. She was followed in turn by Mrs. P. J. Flannery, president of the Marysville Improvement Society, and Mrs. J. R. Garrett and Mrs. J. W. Hall.

Mrs. J. A. Green, wife of the Secretary of the National Retail Grocers' Association, replied in fitting words to the cordial welcome extended to herself and ladies accompanying her.

Several large carry-alls were provided and the city of Marysville and its charms were thoroughly displayed to the delegation and after refreshments were served in a prominent cafe, the return trip was made, leaving Marysville at 6 p. m. and arriving at Sacramento at 7:30.

THE BANQUET.

How Sacramento Treated the Delegates at the Farewell Gathering of the Delegates.

A most fitting climax for the most interesting convention yet held by the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association was the magnificent banquet tendered that organization by the Sacramento grocers.

Over 150 guests were seated at the tables on the top floor of the Red Men's Temple. The march to the banquet room was started at 8:15 o'clock and after all had been comfortably seated at their respective places, Mr. F. B. Fancher on behalf of Sacramento and the Grocers' Association of that city, extended a cordial greeting to the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association and other invited guests.

As will be seen by the menue printed below, those present were treated to a banquet, first-class in every particular:

MENU

Manhattan Cocktails
Large Eastern Oysters
Sauterne
Bouillon Dainty Chips
Shrimp Salad Stuffed Olives
Cold Turkey Baked Ham Cold Tongue Rolls Bread and Butter
Sandwiches
Salted Almonds Olives
Claret
Creamed Chicken with Mushrooms
Mashed Potatoes French Peas
Assorted Fruits
Champagne
Ornamental Cakes
Fancy Assorted Small Cakes
Brick Ice Cream
Swiss Cheese
Black Coffee Shasta Water
Cigars

After the majority of the items on the menu had gone the way of all good things eatable, Mr. Fancher arose and in his inimitable style introduced the various speakers of the evening.

The first among them was Governor J. N. Gillett. The Governor was evidently well prepared to talk to the grocers. He assured the grocers that he owned 240 pounds of flesh and bones to them and more particularly to his own grocer, Mr .Finnie, of Sacramento. His respect for the grocers was very great, realizing as he did, that they were the food distributors of the commonwealth. The Governor stated that he had been looking for the so-called "green" grocer all of his life, but after having done business with them for all those years, he had never yet been able to find the real article. He had therefore come to the conclusion that there was no such thing as a green grocer. One thing is certain and that is, that Governor Gillett made his credit good with every grocer present.

Mayor Beard of Sacramento, next expressed his gratification at being present, and said that in view of the fact that you can reach a man's heart through his stomach, he certainly had a very hearty interest in the grocery business. He went on to say that his experience with the grocers had proven them to be good fellows, his friend Fancher especially. He also observed that credit-giving grocers were a boon to humanity—himself in particular. With this last remark, the Mayor sat down amidst a storm of laughter.

A well-balanced quartet then favored the banquet with several selections.

Mr. John A. Green, Secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers. was next heard from. He stated that he had been in the grocery business for 23 years, and that if he were once more a young man and had to again make a choice of his life's work and had the present knowledge which he has of the grocery business, he would re-enter it with the greatest avidity. He made an address on the value of organization and among other things said:

"If three or four earnest workers in an organization can accomplishment so much, how much more can we accomplish as a united organization. In ganization we are strong, and in our strength we can demand and receive respectful attention.

May its strength be used to promote its welfare.

May its influence be felt everywhere, and its object be attained by creating a brotherly friendship.

Then we shall have no premium giving.

Petty jealousies will be a thing unknown.

And so it shall be with all that is detrimental and opposite to good, clean business methods.

Let our minds be filled with the spirit of organization.

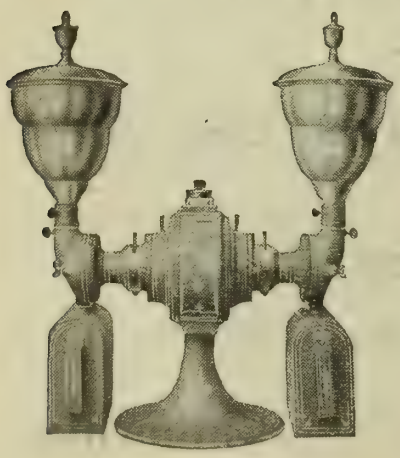
Let us believe that everyone working in his own independent way is doing so with an honest purpose.

Let us arise above the petty annoyances that place themselves in our pathway.

Let us sacrifice everything for the success of our organization.

Let us be filled with the spirit of charity.

Let us be true to ourselves.



Let us above all things be true to our organization.

Let my last words to you be these, so that they may guide you in all your deliberations in the future:

Organization, association, friendship, oneness of purpose. The retailers' organization for the retailer, dominated by him and sustained by him, then shall we be triumphant in all we undertake."

At the conclusion of his remarks, the amount and earnestness of the applause showed that his remarks had sunk deeply into the minds of his hearers.

Mr. Jos. A. Stulz was then called upon by the Toastmaster and expressed his pleasure at being present, reminding the delegation and guests present, that he was regarded around the bay as "the daddy of the grocers." This is true to a large extent, since it was largely as a result of Mr. Stulz's work that there is a State Grocers' Association existing in California today. In fact, at the time he was elected president of the State Grocers' Association there was no such organization in existence. The National Association of Retail Grocers in session in Cincinnati, elected him president of the California Association and then told him to go ahead and create something where nothing existed. As Mr. Stulz said, the results of his efforts were obvious. The convention which had adjourned that afternoon was sufficient reply to the question as to what had grown from the work of himself.

Mr. Geo. B. Doyle, newly elected president of the State Grocers' Association and president of the Associated Retail Grocers of San Francisco, then addressed the gathering. Mr. Doyle had just finished saying that only that day he discovered why the Sacramento grocers were such good fellows, when a champagne cork popped loudly and laughter at this opportune incident continued for almost a minute. Mr. Doyle dwelt on the importance of retail grocers as distributors of the necessaries of life and cited the conditions existing in San Francisco for the first two or three days after the great fire, when the retail grocery stores were confiscated by the authorities for the benefit of the inhabitants of the stricken city. Mr. Doyle also noted with pleasure the obvious sentiment of co-operation existing between the Sacramento retailers and the Sacramento jobbers. He said that conditions of that sort did not rule in San Francisco, but that he had hopes that such might be the case in time.

Superior Judge P. J. Shields of Sacramento, was next heard from in an extremely witty address in which he expressed his opinion of retail grocers. He urged them to educate their customers to buy quality instead of quantity and praised them for their efforts in forcing the Pure Food measures through the U. S. Congress and the State Legislature.

Mr. A. H. Powers was then called upon by the Toastmaster and his remarks took the trend of a historic description of what the grocers had accomplished by organization in the past; and in closing he gave them a glimpse of what they could do in the future if they only used the power which they possessed.

After Mr. Powers had seated himself and the applause meeting his address had subsided, Mr. Fancher arose and read the following telegram sent by Mr. Gustav Wormser, president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association of California:

San Francisco, Sept. 12th.

Frank B. Connolly,

Secretary California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association, Convention, Sacramento, Calif.

Regret exceedingly cannot leave owing to sickness in family. Please express to members my heartiest wishes for complete success of convention. G. Wormser.

Mr. P. C. Drescher of the firm of Mebius & Drescher of Sacramento and a member of the California Wholesale Grocers' Association, then delivered a series of remarks which spoke well for the conditions existing in Sacramento between the retailer and the jobber. Mr. Drescher stated that he had been in the wholesale grocery business for over thirty years and that the changed feeling between the jobber and the retailer had been a source of much gratification to him. What the retail associations had accomplished, received his heartiest commendation. He said that he felt that the average retail grocer was forced to work much harder for his profits than any other individual in other lines of endeavor and for that reason was entitled to a greater proportion of profit. Mr. Drescher also stated that he felt satisfied that such gatherings, as that which he was addressing, were extremely beneficial to both the jobber and the retailer alike and that the old position at being at loggerheads had now passed into the region of forgotten memories.

Mr. Wm. Curtis of Wood-Curtis & Co., followed Mr. Drescher and among other things impressed the fact upon the grocers that they as a class got closer to the people at large than men engaged in any other branch of trade. A large proportion of Mr. Curtis' remarks dealt with the prospects, present and future, of Sacramento, as a city, and from what those present at the convention could see, there is no question but what Mr. Curtis' remarks will be borne out by results. If there are many more "boosters" as good as Mr. Curtis, working for Sacramento, at the present time the future of that city is not in any doubt.

Mr. Alden Anderson, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Sacramento and former Lieutenant-Governor of the State, sounded a keynote in his remarks when he said that from his study of the retail business he was convinced that if the retailers did not organize among themselves, a large proportion of them would go to the wall or else make a bare livlihood with no pleasure in living. Mr. Anderson's experience in the fruit business as a producer and a shipper placed him in a particularly excellent position to judge of the value of co-operation in that line of business and the same advantages could easily be applied to the retail grocer.

Mr. J. F. Paulding, secretary of the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association, then spoke on Mutual Fire Insurance and covered the question in a deep and exhaustive review. Owing to the hour being late, Mr. Paulding cut short his remarks. The Advocate is promised a good article on this question from the pen of Mr. Paulding, very shortly.

Superior Judge Chas. N. Post of Sacramento, came to the fore and made himself popular with all of the grocers present by the way in which he handled his remarks. He said that he appeared as an advocate of the consumer and that he wanted those present to feel that they had best be very careful about what secrets they passed around, while he was present. The grocers all voted Judge Post a good fellow and showed no fear of his exposures. Judge Post reviewed the history and progress of the early Sacramento jobbers and retailers and told of his early experiences as a wholesale groceryman, from which line of endeavor he thanked his stars he escaped at an early age, to become a legal light.

The last speech of the evening was that of Mr. F. B. Connolly, one of the directors of the National Association of Retail Grocers and secretary of the State Grocers Association. Mr. Connolly can always be counted upon to make a good address. His heart is wrapped up in his efforts to make the grocery business better for all concerned and frequent applause punctured the various points he made as he talked. Mr. Connolly has quite a reputation for a poet also, and before taking his seat, he read the following verses which he prepared at the banquet table in odd moments:

California's best grocers
Looked forth with delight
To convene in Sacramento
And be with you tonight.
As we return home
We will always relate
How well you entertained us;
John Green says, "Its great!"

Paulding and Mottaz came up from the South,
Accompanied by Longstreth and Powers.
They told how they do things, successfully, too,
In that land of fruit, sunshine and flowers.

Mayor Beard (without whiskers)
Gave us the keys of the town.
We all think he's a mighty fine Mayor.
O'Connor and Aubry have done things up brown.
Jack Sullivan says Trask is a stayer.

Then Warnke responded and warmed up a bit.
Jost and Connolly read reports of the year.
We saw the State Fair,
With its elegant exhibits;
We're exceedingly glad to be here.

The Board was to meet next morning at nine,
But Connolly was sleeping away;
The Committee reported and John A. Green spoke.
We could have listened to him a whole day.

We went to the Rex with Joe Stulz to lunch,
That genial and good-natured host,
Then Eddy and Paulding preached to the bunch,
To Boston we got started—almost.

The autos then took us to Sutter's Fort and Oak Park
And the sights of your beautiful city;
At the winery and brewery;
Doyle drank all the beer;
To leave there Jones tho't it a pity.

The theatre party had finished the day.
Except for the 'Frisco delegation.
Geo. Golder and Duncan
Saw the sights, so they say;
Their good boys above all temptation.

Promptly at nine we started today.
Heard Limpinsel, Meacham and Peck;
The officers selected and
'Frisco next year;
The slate came near being a wreck.

We visited Marysville;
Had a nice trip—you bet.
At the banquet we forgot all our ills;
Met our famous Governor, James N. Gillett.
He's a dandy; he signed all our bills.

And now in conclusion,
"Sacramento is great"
When you want a convention city.
She'll always be the Capital of our beloved State.
Gentlemen, this is the end of My ditty.

Mr. Fancher then arose and declared the banquet at an end, and after singing of "Auld Lang Syne" the banqueters filed out one by one.

GHIRARDELLI'S PRICES.

We particularly desire to call the attention of our readers to the full page advertisement of The D. Ghirardelli Co., on page 59 of this issue.

Through an error on the part of the printer, and undetected by ourselves, the "Advocate" was made to say, in several recent issues that the prices were:

Ground Chocolate, 1-lb.....30c
Ground Chocolate, 3-lb.....80c
Eagle Chocolate, 1-lb.....25c

The right prices are those quoted in the advertisement referred to hereinabove. Be sure and read same.

BOSTON CLUB ORGANIZED.

Twenty-Four Grocers and Their Wives Sign the Roll.

At odd times during the convention Secretary Connolly busied himself in organizing the "California Boston Club."

This organization is made up of those grocers, their friends and their ladies, who plan on going to the National Convention of Grocers, which will convene at Boston next May.

The following named grocers and their friends have signed the roll:

Quite a few others signified their intention of trying to arrange their affairs so as to go. Mr. Connolly feels quite sanguine of enrolling at least 50 members.

The dues will be announced in a few days—probably $10 per month per member. The dues will be supplemented by various entertainments during the winter, designed to yield a revenue.

Members of the Boston Club will go in special cars from here to Boston. At Ogden a special train will be made up and the delegations from Oregon and Washington will meet our club there.

Lavish entertainments are promised us all along the line—Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, Cincinnati, Boston, New York, etc. Applications for membership and further information can be secured by addressing Mr. F. B. Connolly, 901 Stanyan St., this city. Any grocer is eligible to membership.

ENTERTAIN VISITOR.

Visit of John A. Green Made Pleasant by Associated Grocers.

The stay of Mr. John A. Green, secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers in San Francisco was made one continuous round of pleasure.

Secretary F. B. Connolly met the distinguished visitor and his wife at the Ferry on Saturday evening, Sept. 7th, and took them to his home.

On Sunday afternoon they were whisked over the city in an automobile, through the few remaining ruins and out to the site of the Cliff House, laid bare the afternoon before.

A few members of the Associated Retail Grocers met at "Jacks" on Golden Gate Ave. and the automobilists were taken there to meet them and to make way with a modest dinner which had been prepared.

Among those present were: George B. Doyle, president of the local association; James S. Irvine, 1st vice-president; John W. King, 2nd vice-president; John F. Schomer, treasurer; Frank B. Connolly, secretary; and directors Stulz, Elliott and Schmidt, as well as Messrs. Eddy, Harrison, Trask, Powers, Keefe and Pedilina, together with L. Warnke of Alameda, director of the State Association. The wives of Messrs. Doyle, Connolly, Irvine, Eddy, Keefe and Pedilina were present. The guests of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Green, occupied the position of honor.

During the progress of the dinner Mr. Green, President Doyle, Secretary Connolly, Director Warnke, Field Secretary Powers, Assistant Secretary Harrison, Director Elliott and Editor Eddy, as well as Messrs Keefe and Pedilina were called on for a few words.

The party broke up at a late hour, all present having had the opportunity of chatting with Mr. and Mrs. Green and listening to the words of good cheer which fell from the lips of the visitor from the National Association.

SKIDDING OVER THE SIERRAS.

The Sapolio Automobile Climbs Over the Summitt to Reno, Nevada.

Unsuspecting natives have been startled by the "Honk Honk" of the Sapolio Automobile all the way from Palo Alto to Reno, Nevada.

Mr. J. P. Gillespie, the California representative of Enoch Morgan Son's Co., has just completed an auto trip over the Sierra Nevada Mountains, tacking Sapolio signs as he went and otherwise marring the beauties of nature by defacing every available rock with big dauby letters in which Sapolio's virtues were enthusiastically voiced.

Mr. Gillespie started on July 20th, accompanied by his assistant, Mr. Grubb. They reached Tracy at noontime. Here they found that the bridge over the San Joaquin River was washed away and their machine had to be sent to Stockton on a flat car.

Through the Hot Valley.

After covering Stockton, Mr. Gillespie continued to Sacramento, stopping at all of the towns on the way. The Sacramento valley is particularly hot at this season of the year and the suggestion was not of the celestial regions.

The climbing commenced almost as soon as they left Sacramento. Some little time was spent in Folsom. By good luck Messrs Grubb and Gillespie were able to avoid detention at the big State's Prison and were able to "make their get away" towards Placerville.

This town has a number of wide awake merchants who were much interested in Sapolio's overland trip.

The next notch up the grade was to Pacific, 15 miles away.

The succeeding stop in the journey was Slippery Ford, another 15 miles.

On reaching Slippery Ford, Mr. Gillespie had to pass over a snow slide which had torn away the road for a good distance, filling the space with huge rocks, trees and soft snow. The Sapolio automobile was the first machine to get over this snow slide without block and tackle. The passage was made with considerable difficulty but the machine passed over on its own power.

A Fortunate Hold Up.

CHECK No. 1: — After leaving Slippery Ford, the Sapolio Machine met its first set back. Going up the mountain, a sprocket broke. The machine started to back down the hill at a rapid rate and there would have been a bad mixup of Gillespie and his Grubb at the bottom of a steep canyon had not a big granite rock intervened.

The travelers were miles away from any telegraph and telephone communication with the outer world. They finally got the machine back to a blacksmith's shop some miles away. Though the blacksmith had seen an automobile, he had never before touched one. As a consequence, Mr. Gillespie had to superintend the taking apart the machine and the repairs and three days were required before the automobile was ready to proceed.

The rest of the trip to Reno was made without further accidents.

Stops were made at Tahoe, Tallac and all the intermediate towns.

The splendor of the view from the summit looking down over the Carson Valley is sufficient to repay the travelers for almost any exertion in reaching it, according to Mr. Gillespie.

The travelers found everything booming in Reno. The mines were producing well and highly productive oil wells have been struck.

Reno's Wholesale Grocers.

The enormous increase in business consequent upon recent developments resulted in the establishing of two strictly wholesale grocery houses. These are the Reno Grocery Co. and G. Mitchell & Co. Enoch Morgan Son's Co. are very strict in not supplying at wholesale prices firms that do a retail business. They had no hesitancy in recognizing both of these firms as wholesale grocers.

Experiences Another Hold Up.

CHECK No. 2:—Mr. Gillespie had an unfortunate experience in Reno. He wished to have his machine overhauled and put it in charge of the Reno Garage Co., who claimed to be experts and to have only first class machinists in their employ. After tearing the machine apart and charging him 100 per cent. more than he would have had to pay a firm located anywhere else, he had to take the machine to Mr. Kenyon, proprietor of another garage in order to get it going. Of course, Gillespie had to pay him for his services.

The return trip was full of incident.

The road out of the Carson Valley over the summit of the mountains, is very sandy since the valley is practically a desert owning to the fact that rain falls very seldom in the territory east of the summit of the Sierras.

Climbing Out of the Desert.

Getting out of the Carson Valley, the traveler faces a nine mile hill, the grade of which is so steep that there is a raise of one mile in six. It took Mr. Gillespie 7 hours to make these nine miles, a large part of which was through sand six inches deep and so sharp that it actually cut the rubber off the tires.

After passing the first hill, the machine had to make another hill to reach the second summit. This was an even steeper grade, the raise being one mile in every five.

CHECK No. 3:—While rushing down the steep grade beyond the summit came the third perilous adventure. While the machine was going at a high rate of speed, the brakes by which it was controlled ceased to work. Mr. Gillespie threw on the emergency brake and it broke.

Realizing that the machine could not be controlled, he yelled to Grubb to jump. Grubb hung on, too scared to move. Mr. Gillespie then decided to take the chance of a collision rather than a smash up with the additional possibility of being drowned in the American River, which was winding through the canyon over 200 feet below. So he turned the machine into the bank.

It stopped with a jolt that loosened the pegs in their shoes.

Some minutes passed before Gillespie got his nerve back and Grubb still insists that he don't know yet whether he is alive or dead and is half way convinced that he is walking in his sleep.

When their nerves had quieted somewhat they roughly patched the machine. Then they tried to continue on their way down the grade.

Before they had gone 100 feet, the improvised brakes gave way. Gillespie did not wait for the machine to get impetus this time but turned its nose into the bank.

As it was late in the afternoon, he and Grubb camped out all night, sleeping on the cushions.

The next morning the brakes were again patched. This time they held for the twelve miles that had to be traveled to get to a blacksmith shop. Here the machine was put in good repair.

The return trip through the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys was one continuous record of sign tacking and calling upon the grocers.

Mr. Gillespie informs this office that he found that most of the better class merchants in the mountain cities were interested readers of the Advocate and that he did not even hear of any other grocery trade paper during the entire trip.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

E. L. Chaddock, of Chaddock & Co., has invested and patented a new machine for seeding raisins which, it is claimed, will be no infringement on the Petit patent. The machine, according to the Fresno "Republican," bids fair to break the control of the "High Five," which seemed fixed by the recent decision of Judge Wellborn in the United States District Court at Los Angeles to the effect that all existing seeders not manufactured by the United States Consolidated Raisin Seeder Company, the owner of the patent, are infringements on that patent, and the infringing companies making or using such machines liable to damages and a royalty to be paid in future for the use of the machine. Not only this, but the new machine may even be made cheaper than the Petit device, and thus in time supplant it to a large extent.

The Home Grape Juice Company of Harrisburg, Pa., has been incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000,000. The incorporators are: W. S. Harris, Edward L. Bergstresser and Eugene L. Brock, all of that city. The company will grow and cultivate grapes, cereals, etc.

The Western Pacific Railroad is about to enter the magazine field. It has purchased the Overland Monthly and will install Marble Wright as editor. The price paid was $35,000, and the publication will be used like Sunset, to boom this Coast. The first issue will be the November, under the new when the public has lain in darkness and gullibility so long, a deal of explanation is necessary to make the average consumer realize that pure foods do not always look like the stuff that a strictly commercial packing industry has been serving up for many years.

At a recent meeting of the Supervisors' finance committee Supt. of School Roncovieri recommended that bonds in the sum of $2,000,000 be issued for the construction of a modern class-A building on the Lincoln school lot at the corner of Market and Fifth sts. It was figured that the revenue from the building would pay for the bonds and maintenance of the building in ten years.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

When I purchased a 200 account McCASKEY REGISTER, I certainly knew it had some excellent qualities. I started it on Friday, May 3.. On Saturday, my four clerks took their orders with the McCASKEY ORDER BOOK COVER AND PADS and the goods went out with the ONE WRITING the clerks took from the customers on the road and I was only Ten Minutes late. This was certainly grand on the first Saturday. I was afraid some one of my customers would object to their accounts being totalled, but instead, I WAS COMPLIMENTED ON THE SYSTEM—not one objection. IT COLLECTED IN TWO DAYS $576.00 that I would not have had in three months. If the ladies in the Grocery Stores only knew the great value of the McCaskey System, they would have it shipped by express and not by freight.

LESSONS OF CONVENTION.

General Outline of What May Be Expected During the Coming Year.

THE ADVOCATE MOST IMPORTANT.

Success in San Francisco Will Help Make Successes Elsewhere.

By Aaron H. Powers.

After the excitment incident to a general meeting of men from many different places and after the effects of the unstinted hospitality of our Sacramento bretheren has abated, it is the part of wisdom to take a general view of the outlook.

The State Grocers Association found it necessary to devote its funds to creating machinery that would be effective with the legislature. This was done.

After the legislative session had passed, there not sufficient funds remaining to extend our organization propaganda and nurse weak organizations. As a consequence organization expense was eliminated and the organization went to the State Convention with nearly $300 in its treasury.

The Advocate Gets Results.

All this time, the Advocate was earning money. As the paper has of necessity, to conduct a credit business with the Eastern advertisers and many of its subscribers, and as the Association put up no money to conduct the publication the first earnings has of necessity, to be employed as capital for meeting the current necessities of the paper. This requires, at least, $1000. At the State Convention, $300 was turned over to the State Ass'n as its share of the net earnings which will be about $1500 for the year.

During the ensuing year, the Advocate will be turning over from $50 to $100 per month to the State Ass'n, IF the directors do their share of helping it get business.

This means better conditions for everybody.

The First Step.

San Francisco must have a strong organization if the grocers are to be a recognized power in inducing manufacturers to fix and maintain retail selling prices.

All the strength possible to be mustered should be thrown into this work during the next 30 days.

With San Francisco strong and a proper collection system, here are some of the things the grocers of interior cities can expect.

First—Uniform fair prices on leading staples.

Second—Abatement of the selling by wholesalers to consumers.

Third—Effective Collection Letters.

Fourth—A "Black List" of Delinquent Debtors for various districts.

Fifth—The collection of bills the grocers can't collect themselves.

Laws Won.

The following laws have been secured by the efforts of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association:

1. Permitting the Attachment of the wages of public officials.

2. Making a Wife's Separate Property responsible for family bills for the necessaries of life.

3. Mutual Fire Insurance.

4. Extending life of open book account to four years instead of two.

5. Making the drawing of a worthless check "with intent to defraud" a state's prison offense.

6. A fair guaranty clause in the pure food law.

POINTS TO WATCH.

GROCERS TO MAKE PLANS.

Important Meeting Called for Thursday Evening, Sept. 26th.

WILL ELECT NEW OFFICERS

Arrangements Being Perfected to Help Every Man in the Grocery Business

An extremely important meeting of the grocers of San Francisco, will be held on Thursday evening, Sept. 26th.

The meeting will be held at Veteran's Hall, 431 Duboce Ave., at the foot of Fillmore street.

For the past year, the Associated Retail Grocers have been making splendid efforts for the betterment of the grocery trade and have succeeded in accomplishing much that in the past had been deemed impossible. This progress has been made in the face of great difficulties.

Plan to Help Everybody.

At the meeting on Thursday night, certain definite plans will be laid before the grocers. These plans will, without a doubt, help every man in the grocery business very largely and be of special value to the members of the Associated Retail Grocers.

Every grocer who is interested in getting a fair profit on flour, bottled beer, bread, coal oil and a few more of the leading staples, is invited to attend.

Officers for the ensuing year will be elected and other matters of importance taken up.

A meeting of the Directors of the Associated Retail Grocers was held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 17th, at the offices of the organization 1714 Webster street. The new plans were talked over.

No definite steps were taken, however, as it was deemed wiser to submit the entire matter to the judgment of the members of the organization at their annual meeting.

All grocers of San Francisco are invited to attend this meeting.

Remember the time and place:

TIME: — Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, at 8:30 o'clock.

PLACE:—Veteran's Hall, 431 Duboce Ave., foot of Fillmore st.

PURPOSES: — Election of officers and completion of plans.

LESSONS OF CONVENTION.

Sixth—Information as to whether persons seeking credit formerly paid their bills.

The Second Step.

With San Francisco thoroughly organized, the next step would be to get the grocers of San Jose, Los Gatos, Santa Clara, Palo Alto and the other cities in that district united in a district organization with a secretary in common, a black list of all the people in that district who do not pay their bills and the ability to count on the help of San Francisco and the other cities of the State in any movement where common help would be of value.

Oakland and Alameda County, with the towns on the East side of San Francisco bay from Oakland to San Jose could then be brought to working together with Oakland as a center.

Next, the cities about Sacramento can be brought into line with that city. Each neighboring community should become a satellite of the Capitol City and, under Secretary Merring's direction and with a largely augmented income, much of value can be accomplished.

Modesto, Lathrop, Lodi and, perhaps Galt and several other towns could be made tributary to Stockton. Secretary O'Connor would find the additional income sufficient to warrant his engaging an assistant for much of the detail work.

Help for the South.

At this juncture, the organizer should be sent to Los Angeles to work under the direction of J. F. Paulding. The work in the South will be similar to that in the north.

Then the creation of new organizations should be taken up. The following cities can, with advantage be made the centers of new organizations: Fresno, Chico, Eureka, Vallejo, Santa Rosa, San Rafael, Santa Cruz, Salinas and Bakersfield.

In other cities, the grocers can be brought together directly through the influence of the State Grocers Ass'n.

All these results depend on two things.

First—San Francisco must be strongly organized.

Second—The Advocate must be supported and kept on a good paying basis.

Don't fail to see pages 34 and 35.

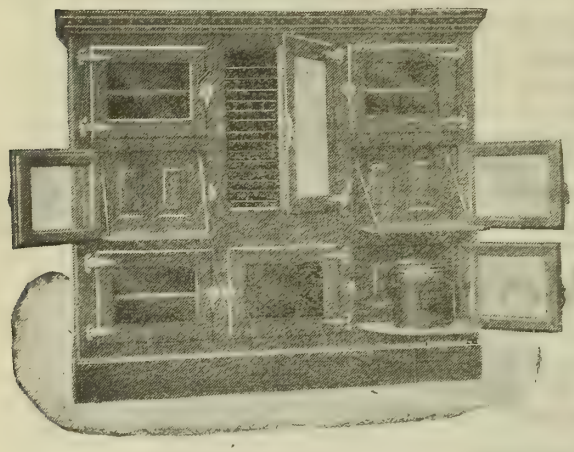
RETAIL PRICES ADVANCE.



Higher in Every Month of 1906 Than in 1905.

Washington.—The annual investigaeion of the Bureau of Labor into wages and the retail prices of food, the report on which has just been placed in the hands of the printer, shows that in the principal manufacturing and mechanical industries of the country average wages per hour in 1906 were 4.5 per cent higher than in 1905, the regular hours of labor per week were 0.5 per cent lower, and the number of employes in the establishments investigated was 7 per cent greater. The average full-time weekly earnings per employe in 1906 were 3.9 per cent greater than in 1905.

During 1906 wages were increased generally in nearly all industries, 40 of the 41 industries covered by the investigaton showing some increase. The greatest increase was in the manufacture of cotton goods, where the average wages per hous in 1906 were 11.2 per cent higher than in 1905. Briefly stated, two industries showed an increase in hourly wages of more than 10 per cent, seven industries an increase of 5 per cent but less than 10 per cent, and thirty-one industries an increase of less than five per cent. In the industries as a whole, weighted according to importance, the increase in hourly wages was 4.5 per cent.

The fact should be borne in mind that these figures apply only to wage-workers in manufacturing and mechanical industries and do not show conditions so far as salaried employes are concerned.

The retail prices of food, weighted according to consumption in representative workingmen's families, were 2.9 per cent higher in 1906 than in 1905. As the advance in wages per hour from 1905 to 1906 was greater than the advance in the retail prices of food, the purchasing power of an hour's wages, as measured by food, was greater in 1906 than in the preceding year. In 1906 the purchasing power of an hour's wages as expended for food was 1.4 per cent greater than in 1905 and the purchasing power of a full week's wages was 1 per cent greater in 1906 than in 1905, or, in other words, an hour's wages in 1906 in the manufacturing and mechanical industries of the United States would purchase 1.4 per cent more food than an hour's wages in 1905, and a full week's wages in 1906 would purchase 1 per cent more food than a full week's wages in 1905.

The price of food was higher in every month of 1906 than in the corresponding month of 1905. The increase over the corresponding month of the preceeding year, which in February, 1906, was only 0.4 per cent, grew steadily greater throughout the year, the price in December, 1906, being 5.1 per cent above that of the preceeding Deecmber. The price in December, 1906, was 4.8 per cent higher than the average for the year 1906, which year showed a higher average than any other year during the seventeen years, 1890 to 1906, covered by the investigation of the Bureau of Labor.

The increase in prices in 1906 over 1905 applied, in unequal degree, to 25 of the 30 articles included in the investigation. The articles which showed the greatest advance in prices are lard, 9.8 per cent; evaporated apples, 9.1 per cent; fresh pork, 8.8 per cent; dry or pickled pork, 8.7 per cent; bacon, 8.4 per cent; ham, 7.3 per cent; while the advance in fresh fish and mutton exceeded 5 per cent. The only articles which showed any material decrease are flour and sugar.

The articles which showed the most marked advance in prices in December, 1906, over December, 1905, are butter, 15 per cent; lard, 13.9 per cent; fresh pork, 12.2 per cent; dr yor pickled pork, 11.9 pe rcent; bacon, 11.1 per cent, and ham, 9.8 per cent. The only articles which showed any marked decline i nprice in December, 1906, from the price in December, 1905, are potatoes, 5.8 per cent, and flour, 4.8 per cent.

As compared with the average for the ten-year period, 1890 to 1899, the average wages per hour in 1906 were 24.2 per cent higher.

BAKING POWDER WAR.

New York.—J. R. Newberry, head of the J. R. Newberry Co., the big Pacific Coast grocery syndicate, is in New York and has made preparations to carry the baking-powder war to the Coast. Mr. Newberry in an interview intimated that there is going to be some fun on the Pacific Coast in the baking powder matter, having placed an order for two cars of an independent brand, and proposes to put up a stiff fight when the material reaches its destination.

GROCERS ACCUSE FOUR FIRMS OF COMBINATION.

District Attorney Investigates Alleged Violation of Cartwright Law.

The district attorney's office is investigating a charge made by Hensley, Merritt & Co., wholesaler grocers, of 25 Oak street, San Francisco, against four jobbing firms of this city of violating the so called Cartwright act passed at the last session of the legislature. The law is to prevent acts in restraint of trade in the state, and is in many respects similar to the federal laws controlling interstate business.

The firm complained to District Attorney Langdon that the four firms in question, by acting in combination, had kept Hensley, Merritt & Co. from obtaining goods from certain eastern dealers, and alleged they had formed a trust for the restraint of local business.

Langdon turned the matter over to his assistant, W. Hoff Cook, who has asked the four jobbing houses accused to explain their actions. The law provides for a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $5,000, or for imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than one year, or both.

PURE FOOD A RELIEF.

"Talk about the grocery trade being antagonistic to Dr. Wiley and the rest of the Pure Food authorities," said a well known jobber the other day; "people don't believe there's a reputable jobber in the country who won't hold up both hands and vote the law an emphatic success. When we get it all running right there will be some pleasure in being a grocer and selling the nation food that is food.

"We had no idea how far away from decency we had drifted in this matter of serving up goods that would sell, rather than goods that were wholesome and entirely suited to health. Manufacturers had evidently been blinding themselves to the real welfare of the consumer in their race to put out the goods that would sell best. They were bleached and colored and artificially flavored and preserved till there was real danger, let alone an nudesirable uncertainty, and we were so engrossed in the commercial side of the question that we entirely forgot the consumer. It was time the Government called a halt, and when we get over the trouble of readjusting things, of packing things as nature made them, of leaving them their natural flavor and color and of telling the truth on the labels there will be some satisfaction in being a grocer."

DUST AND FLIES.

Now is the season when the retail grocer might profitably take a few lessons in the containing influence of street dust in food products. It is all very attractive to see edibles piled up in the open window or at the door of the corner grocery, but when one notes a cloud of street dust sweeping down upon them it might be worth while to consider the value of glass and screens and closed doors over grocery displays. Then there are the flies. Here is a Western board of health issuing in its bulletin interesting information of how flies carry disease germs. One of its experts recently captured a fly which had been daintly refreshing itself on a spot of sputum just ejected by a consumptive. He took a culture from the fly's feet, and determined the fact that he had thereby captured no less than 5,000 tuberculosis bacilli. Isn't it time to look after a few of the fly specks?

Bellingham, Wash.—An anonymous letter received here warns all Japanese and Chinese in this city to leave at once. Japanese working at the canneries are armed and say they will resist any attempt to force them out of town. The Chinese, however, will not make a strong stand. E. B. Deming, general manager of the Pacific American Fisheries, says if the Orientals leave the salmon canning industry is doomed, as the Japanese are being persuaded to affiliate with the labor unions.

SUGAR.

On Sept, 11th, the refiners issued their cards, dropping the price 10c. on Cane sugar and 20 points on Beet. The correct price will be found in our list in the usual place.

New York, Sept. 12.—Willett and Gray report:

The week.—Raws: Advanced .03c. Refined: Unchanged. Net cash quotations this date are: Molasses, 3.09c.; Centrifugals, 3.95c.; Granulated, 4.65c.

Raws.—In consequence of weakness which developed in the European markets during the week under review, there developed a desire to sell by the holders of Surinam, Porto Rico and Cuba sugars.

Louisiana crops conditions continue favorable, and the prospects of turning out the largest crop in the history of Louisiana are improving. The largest crop on record was the one of 1904-05 when the crop outturned 335,000 tons.

The general situation looks steady and firm, with the question of improvement now in abeyance and depending largely on the course of European markets.

Refined.—In California where the domestic beet crop is in full progress there is noted a decline of 10c. per 100 lbs, for cane refined with 20c. per lb. differential on beet refined. The quotations being for cane 5.10c. per lb. net and for beet 4.90c. per lb. net cash. This price for beet refined shows a handsome profit on cost of manufacturer.

The outlook is for a steady refined market, with contracts sale from decline.

COFFEE.

New York, Sept. 12.—Willett & Gray report:

The receipts at Rio and Santos so far this crop are about 500,000 bags less than they were at this time two years ago in the crop that gave a total of 10¼ million bags.

The Coffee trade is holding off, in fact, the interior is buying only the minimum possible to get along with, and as they have followed this practice a very long time they have thus been laying the foundation of thoroughly sound conditions by which the position of the current crop must be judged, and quite a time must elapse before anything postive is known as to the now-growing crop. The trade will only accept or believe that which is in conformity with its wishes, even the advice so far indicate the possibilities of another small crop.

Desirable goods have been in demand and sold at full prices regardless of the occasional reactions in futures.

Visible supply of world, in bags, Sept. 1, 1907, 16,004,313; Aug. 1, 1907, 16,075,812; Sept 1, 1906, 10,756,653.

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co., report under date of Sept. 17:

"The market remains very firm and we look for same to be entirely bare of Domestic Japans from Oct. 1st. to Nov. 15th.

"A new feature is the Unpolished Japan rice grown from Imported Seed in the Hawaiian Islands. This will help to fill up the assortment of Japan grades until new crop arrives. There is only a limited quantity however and we therefore do not expect the supply to be equal to the demand during the next six weeks.

"New Crop Fancy Heads are still firm. The market has not shown any signs of weakening up to the present time.

"Several mills have started operations and have put a few lots on the market but will not sell unless they obtain full prices."

New York, Sept. 10th.—Dan Talmage's Son's report:

Good demand has prevailed during the week. Prices are well sustained in sympathy with conditions at the South.

Advices from the South note quiet market on the Atlantic Coast. Reports from the growing crop are favorable and harvest is now the most important feature. At New Orleans, market is strong with active demand. Recepits of Rough are light and turn-out of Mills sold daily. High class parcels are being taken at advanced figures, and on account of high prices exacted, the trade in many instances have turned their attention to the lower grades, which being in more request have shared in the advance. In the Interior-Southwest Louisiana and Texas some few parcels of New are being offered, and quickly taken at prices trifle above the parity of New Orleans.

New Orleans, L. A., Sept. 7.—Siewerd Milling Co., Ltd. report:

"The Week's Rice Market closses active and Strong, and largely oversold at an advance of a full quarter of a cent. Trade in general buying freely, and with great confidence. Recepits of Rough Rice falling off rapidly: Supply of Raw Material not sufficient to run Mills on half capacity."

DRIED FRUIT.

Taken as a whole, the market in this time is in a peculiar condition. Heavy buying is not the rule, but regardless of this fact the market shows a strengthening tendency now that the status of the commodity has been settled by the Government authorities.

PRUNES.

We have been predicting right along a strong market on prunes and as each week rolls around, our judgment is proven to be correct. There is a general confidence in the fruit, with a wide spread feeling that even higher quotations than those quoted to-day, will be obtained as the season progresses. No mistake will be made in buying prunes at this time.

San Jose.—From appearances the new crop of prunes is going to fall considerably short of the estimates. Competent judges, put the yield now in to about 20 to 25 million pounds for the Santa Clara Valley, and it is fully expected that deliveries will fall short about 25 per cent, and in some instances where farmers have finished bringing in their green prunes they have failed as far as 50 per cent short.

"Regarding quality," one writer says "the prunes we have dried ourselves so far are large and excellent, and if the present cold and unfavorable weather gives place to warm and genial sunshine we should have a lot of as fine prunes as could be harvested. There are no offerings being made at all by growers, although we know that the principal packers on the Coast are in the market and are offering 5c. sack basis.

"There is absolutely no doubt in the writer's mind that owing to the extreme shortage in Santa Claras this year, and the short sellers who are trying to cover, that Santa Clara prunes will command before January 1st a 6c sack basis. In other words, it appears that there are not enough to go around, and you need have no hesitancy in advising the trade to come in out of the wet immediately at prevailing quotations.

"Our unsold stock is limited, and the few remaining prunes in the grower's hands are held all the way from 5c to 5½c. sack basis. From all reports the holdings in the grower's hands to-day do not exceed 10 per cent of the total crop."

RAISINS.

If any particular change can be said to have taken place during the past week, it would be towards a firmer condition of the market.

Fresno mail advices say that reports from the vineyards indicate that the raisin crop is ripening in fine shape. The berries are filling out better than last season, and it is predicted by some of the packers that there will be a substantial gain in weight this year. It is probable that the quantity of green grapes required to make a pound raisins this year will be one-half pound less than last year. The absence of extreme heat this season has been of great advantage to the crop. Instead of lessening the sugar in the grape, the weather has been favorable to the development of the berry in its natural and best form, without drying or other ill effects.

FIGS.

Prospects are becoming brighter for a good pack of California figs this season, according to late Fresno advices. During the recent spell of cool weather the fruit ceased to drop almost entirely, and it began to look as if the crop would be too small to furnish an average pack. Now, the stuff is coming in better and there is no reason why the pack should not run above the normal. The increased acreage every year is a factor to be seriously considered in the fig question, as it is always very appreciable in its effects. A fig packer is quoted as saying that in case the weather holds good for one week the crop will be very large. A big block of the figs was held over from last year by most of the concerns and this will help to increase the size of the pack which will be put out.

EVAPORATED APPLES.

This variety of fruit is extremely firm and quotations are on the advance with no prospects of relief.

WALNUTS.

The principal California walnut associations abandoned their intention to make opening prices on the 15th, and will wait until the 23d or 25th. It is generally expected that the opening figures will be on the basis of 15c f. o. b. for No. 1 soft shell.

ALMONDS.

Antioch.—Almonds are begining to come in and prices at present seem to indicate a good demand for the nuts. While not many lots have been purchased as yet, still those who have sold realized good returns, the average price paid so far being 15c per pound, according to quality. M. H. Jacobs of this place made his first shipment this week, and states that so far the nuts are of a good quality and from now on they will come in more rapidly.

HONEY.

Riverside.—L. Bamberger has just come from his ranch at Winchester and reports the honey crop to be a surprise when compared with the former reports sent out. The bees have stored more honey the past week than in all the year preceding and if this warm weather continues the coming week will equal it. The honey is a splendid quality and selling higher than for many years.

CANNED FRUITS.

The demand in this line is proving greater than the supply and there is nothing to prevent continuous advances until the pack of 1908 becomes available. The peach crop throughout the eastern states is extremely short, thereby increasing the demand for California packed goods. The grocer who stocks up on this line of goods for the next 8 or 10 months's requirements, will make some money.

CANNED CORN.

Advices received from the east with respect to the condition of canning crops generally, are of a disquieting nature and are supported either by the withdrawal of offers by packers or a display of reluctance by them to book further orders for futures delivery until they can get a better idea of how they will stand in the matter of deliveries on contracts already in hand. This condition of affairs applies to corn with particular emphasis, not only with respect to Standard Western corn. but the Maine pack as well. Up to the middle of last month, the latter crop promised to be one of the biggest packs ever made, but the dry, cool weather experienced there recently has had a very serious effect, because of the fact that the ears have not filled properly. This time last last year, the bulk of the Maine crop was in cans, but so far this year no packing has been done. In the judgment of some authorities, a pack of 80 per cent is the most that can be counted on. Even worse reports come from New York and Maryland and the Middle Western corn packing states.

CANNED STRING BEANS.

String beans were packed by a larger number of canners this year than ever before, according to Chicago advices, but the output of this article, too, seems to have been swallowed up in the demand which has increased—a result of the general prosperity—for everything in cans.

MARTIN'S CHEESE.

According to advices received from eastern sources, Martin's Cheese shows quite a degree of firmness there. This condition will very soon reflect itself in this market.

CANNED TOMATOES.

Canneries in the various parts of the State, are now operating full time on this vegetable, but none of them are making quotations. Some deliveries have been made and the local market is low at $1.00 per dozen on 2½ lb. standards. If the rains come early this year, the season will be cut short and present prices will suffer an advance. From all that we can glean, the present price on 2½ pound goods is low and should be taken advantage of.

BEANS.

The market in this line is inactive. owing to the unwillingness of operators to make purchases until they can better forsee what the growing crop will amount to. There seems to be a well defined belief that Pinks will harvest a light crop, but so far as other varities are concerned, there seems to be little in the way of prediction.

Stockton.—The local bean buyers agree that 600 acres are in beans in this county this season and that the yield will be over 150,000 bags. Last season there were 9000 acres in beans in this county and the total yield was 138,000 bags. The average yield per acre throughout the county was about 15 bags. Much of the island will yield from 35 to 40 bags to the acre this season.

Griffith-Durney Co., (Brokers's selling to jobbers only) report under date of Sept. 12th.:

SALMON.

We think that every wholesale grocer, as well as every canned goods broker in the United States will admit that this has been a year of "whirls." We opened prices on Asparagus and sold the entire pack in less than twenty-four hours. We opened prices on Tomatoes, and the entire California pack, consisting of probably 800,000 cases was sold in less than two days. In less than a week after opening prices on fruits, the entire estimated pack of about 2,-500,00 cases was sold. While, therefore, we have had some experience in "whirls" we were not prepared for the salmon "whirl". It was the swiftest and most exciting "whirl" we ever experienced. The total pack of Alaska Red Salmon, which is estimated to be 1,500,000 cases, was sold out in less than thirty-six hours. We probably declined as many orders as we accepted, and we believe that a great many dealers, who refused to place their orders subject to approval of opening price have not been able to secure the quantity of Red fish they will need.

"Now, there is no Alaska Red salmon unsold in first hands; there are no Columbia River Chinooks to be had at any price; there are no Sockeye Talls, very few Sockeye Flats, and but a limited quantity of Sockeye Halves. We think Medium Red Salmon, (both Alaska and Puget Sound), has been practically sold up, and there will, therefore, be practically no salmon to offer between now and next season of any consequence except Pink fish. We are satisfied that the majority of the Alaska packers who put up Pink Salmon have sold the bulk, if not all of their pack, and that the surplus of Pink fish now unsold consists of Puget Sound Humpbacks, of which there has been a large pack.

"There still continues to be tremendous demand for Chums, but until we know that who have packed sufficient to fill orders already booked, we do not think it wise to enter more orders for this fish."

HAY.

Somers & Co., report under date of Sept. 17.:

"The market here shows no new or interesting features. The receivers of Hay are maintaining prices at a very fair range, considering conditions. At no time have prices been on a ruinous basis for producers, but it is generally conceded that as soon as the rains set in there will be a marked advance on practically all grades of Hay on this market.

"We give present quotations as follows:

Choice Wheat Hay	$18.00 to 20.00
Good Wheat Hay	16.00 to 17.50
Other grades same	11.00 to 15.00
Wheat & Oat	11.00 to 16.00

Attracting Trade.

CLEANLINESS WINS TRADE.

The Grocer Who Tries to Cater to Particular People Has the Right Idea.

Some householders have a perfect mania for cleanliness; others are moderately inclined in that direction; others still are disposed to shut their eyes and take their traditional "peck of dirt" without so much as blinking. The wise grocer need bother himself little about retaining the patronage of the last named once it is secured, but the custom of the others is not easy to win and it is hard to retain.

The vendor who advertises himself as grocer to particular people has the right idea. All householders wish to trade in the particular class, no matter what the actual facts, and he who proclaims his adherence to the law of cleanliness is pretty sure to attract attention and win custom. If he wishes to keep it and enlarge it he must consistently and carefully live up to his profession every day he is in business.

It is the habit of the grocer to display his wares in front of his place of business. The passerby will notice a great difference in the method of dealers. Nor will he find it difficult to arrive at correct conclusions concerning the class of consumers each grocer has or the general character and disposition at the head of each establishment. A grocer's actions speak louder than words, and they speak through his display.

The careful dealer makes careful provision against the nuisance inseparable from the summer months. So far as he is able he keeps down the dust on his sidewalk and the adjoining street. He procures suitable protection for the goods displayed in front of his building and in the storeroom to the end that dust may be shut out and that the pestilential and inquisitive fly may not work its evil will upon his wares. He is looking out for the welfare of patrons in a practical way.

Wins Increasing Patronage.

Such a dealer wins constantly increasing patronage. The particular people who are disgusted with the slovenly habits of the grocer from whom they have been purchasing and who are looking for some one who will suit them better are attracted by the trim appearance of his place, like the cleanly habits indicated and give him a trial order. This is usually the beginning of a trade worth having. And while this class is won none of the less particular class is lost.

Some grocers seem to be utterly incapable of understanding that carelessness and slovenliness mean a steady loss of patrons. They go from bad to worse. Their business runs down at the heel and they are at a loss to explain the situation. One such, when approached by a regular customer who was disgusted with the dust-covered condition of some goods he thought of purchasing and who suggested to the grocer that daylight street-sweeping was a nuisance, was a bit surprised and perhaps disgusted when the grocer looked at him for a moment and enquired, "Why?" But that dealer was the exception to the rule. The average grocer is thoroughly up-to-date. And so cleanliness is still the all-important requisite for the grocer. Trade-getting schemes may come and go, but the cleanliness of the store is here to stay.

Santa Ana.—Fire about Aug. 21st destroyed the Fairview grocery store, with all its contents. Mr. Holland was proprietor. Suspected cause, incendiarism.

WORLDS FAMOUS BANQUET.

Plans Under Way For Rehabiliation Celebration Two Years Hence Includes Wonderful Gathering.

Just how rapidly San Francisco is recovering from the effects of the fire may be realized when it is learned that already plans are afoot to inaugurate the new Palace Hotel with a California State Dinner, to be given in commoration of the Rehabilitation of the City of San Francisco. The California Promotion Committee has already engaged the hotel for this purpose and the new hostelry will be opened in such a blaze of glory as has never before marked a similar occasion. It is the intention of the Committee to make this one of the most notable banquets of the times, and according to the plans, which are yet incomplete, it will certainly be the most remarkable dinner ever given on the Pacific Coast. To this dinner will be invited the President of the United States and his Cabinet, members of the Diplomatic Corps at Washington, noted financiers of the country, Governors of all the States of the Union, with their Staffs, together with other notables who will make this gathering the greatest and most interesting that has ever been held.

It is expected that the Palace Hotel will be completed and ready for occupancy two years from now, and so great are the plans that the Committee feels that it will take the entire time to complete all the arrangements for this State dinner. The Committee has already closed its arrangements with the Palace Hotel Company and has a number of artists working out special designs for the seating arrangements and decorations of the banquet hall. It is determined to have these decorations entirely unique in the matter of banquets, and a number of startling surprises will be in store for the guests on that memorable occasion.

Clerk's Corner.

HOW THE JOB WAS LOST.

Soldering Causes Clever Man to Lose His Place.

"Soldiering" is a habit which is easily acquired but which is not so easily gotten rid of. Many a young fellow has spoiled his chances of future success by responding to those elements in his nature which advise him to do only what he has to do and take things easy when the boss is not around.

The Chicago Tribune in a recent issue offered a prize of $5 for the best told story of how a job had been lost. Many interesting anecdotes on this subject were forthcoming but the one which in the opinion of the judges is told in such a manner as to contain a warning to other young men, is the following story in which the writer acknowledged that "soldiering" was the cause of his downfall:

"Soldiering cost me my job. I had been with a big hardware firm for nine years, beginning as office boy and working my way up from salesman to traveling salesman, to foreman of the stock rooms, to head buyer, and finally to general manager. Of course, I was hampered as general manager, because the two members of the firm still were active and insisted upon running their own business, but I was the biggest man in the firm except them, and felt it.

"I had worked hard for years, usually at a small salary, and when I reached the place I had worked so hard to reach, I did not know that it was up to me to work harder than ever, but drew a sigh of relief and figured I had arrived at a spot in my career where I could take things a little easier.

"I would have begun to take things easy the first day I acted as manager, but there was no chance with the two members right over me with their eyes open all the time. For nearly two years I hustled and made good as manager. Then the senior member fell sick and decided to retire from active business. It was hinted broadly to me that in the course of time, I would be a member of the firm. Instead of feeling thankful I was a bit sore because I hadn't been taken into the firm already. I felt that I had earned it.

"The idea of taking things easy possessed me and my wife encouraged me in it. She always felt that I was being imposed upon. I did not see then, but I do now, that the junior member jumped in and worked harder than ever when his old superior retired. I had a private office, my own stenographer, and I felt important. I started soldiering right then, but not enough to make it noticeable. I often went home at night feeling guilty and conscious that I was not giving my best time and attention to the work—and certain that I could have attained better results and I buckled into the work as I always had done. I wasn't lazy—I simply felt that I had earned a rest.

"The habit of soldiering grew upon me. I did not seek work, and contented myself with doing what was at hand. The climax came when the junior partner took a six weeks' vacation. Instead of realizing that it was time to dig in and make a record for myself I simply figured out that, as I was in charge, the others should do the work.

"For about four weeks I soldiered; I came late and left early. I spent two hours at lunch. Then, one morning I waked up to the fact that things were going to pieces. For the next two weeks I did enough work to earn four salaries, but I could not catch up. The entire business was demoralized, and it was weeks before it was straightened up. I saw the error of my ways before the junior partner spoke of it.

"He was cold when he returned. He was colder when he spoke to me. He told me plainly that I had thrown away the chance of my lifetime. I think even now that had I confessed everything and promised to heed the lesson I had learned he would have passed the whole matter over, but instead I got angry—lost my temper and my job.

"I deserved it. It has taken me four years to get back half what I lost, and probably I never will recover it all."

PACKING SARDINES.

Monterey.—The sardine pack this year will be the largest ever put in Monterey, being more than twice that of any former year. Both the Booth cannery and the one at New Monterey are running to their full capacity. During the past year the capacity of both were increased. As high as 20 tons of sardines have been packed at the Booth cannery in one day. There are plenty of sardines in the bay, and it is expected the canneries will run until about the first of November.

The continued circulation of sensational rumors that the city is in danger of an epidemic of bubonic plague has called forth a postive denial from the Federal and municipal health officers Although several cases of the disease have appeared in the city since May 27th, they say there is absolutely no danger of its spread or the necessity of a general quarantine.

Watsonville is preparing for the celebration of a great apple and strawberry festival, to be opened on October 14 and continue one week.

Window Dressing.

THE ART OF WINDOW DRESSING.

By S. W. Roth.

Now this is just exactly what good window display is doing everry day all over the country. It is getting people to come into the store. The merchant is given the chance to show a new customer what he can do in the way of selling goods. No good merchant asks for more. The poor merchant is not worth considering.

It is somewhat strange how slow some retail merchants have been to wake up to the value of good windows. They have appeared to feel that people knew where they were and if they wanted anything they could come and get it without being coaxed by a show window. They seemed to forget that people's minds are usually engrossed with other things than their immediate necessities. Men and women remember the things they need and forget about it. There are many things they would find they needed if they were where they could see them as they pass along the street. There are many things they see under such circumstances today that they need and buy next week.

Twenty years ago the merchants did not know these things. He might have known them had he got to thinking about it in the right way, and the logical sequence of his thinking would have been the window display.

THE SHOW WINDOW.

The best window for a grocer in which to show his goods is one which is plain and even, with a large plate-glass front. It frequently happens that the grocer's window has neither a plate-plass front on an even interior. There may be column inside of the glass. One partition may be straight and the other may run off at an angle. All of which the window dresser must needs take account when he comes to arrange for his display.

If there are two permanent columns in the window, these should be mode use of in making the display. If there is but one column another should be made for the display to correspond with. Where one side is on an angle it should be made straight to correspond with the other side, or the other side should be made angular. As a foundation the window should be made to have its sides alike and the back should be made to parallel the glass front.

With this for a beginning the trimmer may proceed in an intelligent way to create in his mind the general design he desires to follow.

Having conceived of his plan the decorator will get all of the fixtures needed for the display ready and putting them in place will go ahead with his decorations. This done he may place his signs and goods in the window according to his preconceived plans.

It sometimes happenes that having begun his display according to the general plan already conceived, many happy suggestions come to the trimmer. These he can make without in any way marring the whole design as it was originally created. These little changes, made as the window display is being developed, are likely to prove to advantage. All good trimmers work in this way, rather than binnd themselves to the hard and fast rule of their original conception. It is like the artist who would paint a beautiful picture. He has in his mind just what he wants, but as he proceeds, new ideas come to him and he puts them into the practical effect. But this must not be carried so far as to distroy the essential features of the original design. It is largely in small matters of detail that improvements are possible and desirable to make.

The general rule of making an elaborate design, as followed by large houses that maintain a special staff of window trimmers cannot well be followed by the smaller merchants. However, it will be well or him to conceive of a general plan or decoration, even if he does not go so far as to make a sketch of his conception.

Oroville.—Through the efforts of the Oroville Chamber of Commerce a meeting was held by the directors of that body and Paul A. Kennedy and A. L. S. Gezzale of the French-American Fruit Co. of Los Angeles in an effort to bring about the erection in this city of a plant that will pack olives and manufacture olive oil. The situation was gone over carefully and it looks very much as though not only a plant to market the olives will be secured, but that a syrup works and a cannery will be included. There is a big output of olives in Butte, but the fruit is now shipped to Los Angeles, where it is packed and the ail extracted.

San Francisco.—The Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco sent communications to its members a few days ago, advising them that President C. H. Bentley has been assured by Secretary James R. Garfield of the Department of the Interior that San Francisco merchants would continue to receive their share of the Indian supply business. Blank proposals have just been received by the chamber for furnishing canned tomatoes, cornmeal, cracked wheat, dried fruit, feed, flour, hominy, oats and rolled oats for the Indian service. Bids for those articles will be received at the Indian Office, Washington, D. C., until 2 o'clock, September 26, 1907. Copies of the proposals are on file at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce for the information of members.

GROCERY CLERKS UNEASY.

Talk of Striking Because of Various Grievances.

The Daily News of Sept. 3d says: "The Grocery Clerks of this city and Oakland, who are affiliated with the Retail Clerks' Union, have a grievance which may result in a walk-out in a few days unless remedial action is taken by their employers. They object to handling commodities produced by unfair or non-union labor. The question has been brought up repeatedly before the union councils, and the officials have tendered instructions on matter."

Another cause of complaint is the long hours of labor. Some of the men are obliged to work from 5, 6 and 7 o'clock in the morning until from 7 to 10 o'clock at night. The employes say that no limit of working hours seems to be fixed by many places. Dry goods clerks are working on an established basis of hours and have gained a permanent victory and the grocery clerks will try to gain the same point. No dissatisfaction appears to hinge on the question of wages.

It is reported that this matter will come up in a day or two at the meeting of the Labor Council, and Secretary Petry of the Oakland Labor Council has been furnished data covering the question on the other side of the bay.

Seattle, Wash.—The cider and vinegar plant of D. McCurdy at 725 Denny Way, has been sold to Higdem Bros. who will retire from the grocery business in order to devote all their time to the new business.

Compton.—Word comes from Fred Heinze, who has bee nengineering the scheme for the proposed beet-sugar factory here, that it will impossible to secure the concern this year. It is probable, however, that another attempt will be made toward securing the factory for this city at the beginning of the year. If the factory is established a year will be consumed in its erection, and in order to have it completed by the time a crop of beets is ready it will be necessary to start work some time next May. If there is any prospect of securing the needed money for its erection the promoters will begin active work after the first of January in order to have all necessary arrangements completed by spring.

Napa.—The will of the late Capt. A. W. Starr, who died in the Napa Insane Asylum several weeks ago, has been filed for probate and disposes of an estate valued at only $2500. Starr was the man who built the famous Starr mills at South Vallejo and the big sugar refinery at Crockett, but lost his fortune years ago through unfortunate investments.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

Not a better place on earth for a wholesale grocery house than Astoria, Oregon. Live wire could control Alaskan trade. Two-thirds of the people of the world live on the Pacific shores; they all make regular business of eating. Young hustler ought to start co-operative company or promote and locate it here. You would double your dollars in this business first year. Write Chamber of Commerce, room 200, Astoria, Oregon, for particulars. Remember, Astoria is only deep-water port on Columbia River and is one of only five on Pacific Coast.

AFTER DISHONEST ADVERTISERS.

Congress Planning to Take Steps to Curb Lying and Misleading Publicity.

Among the measures to be urged before the next Congress, according to announcement just made, will be one regulating advertisements and prohibiting and providing penalties for objectionable, pernicious, false, fraudulent or misleading advertisements. The bill, it is understood, which is aimed particularly at a certain class of "financial" advertising closely connected with the promotion of "mining" ventures, is also intended to extend the protection of the Federal statutes, so far as is possible, to the customers of "fake" catalogue mail-order concerns throughout the United States, and also to affect certain patent medicine concerns.

In order to "try out" the measure a bill was introduced into the General Assembly of Missouri. The bill reads as follows:

"All persons, firms, corporations and associations are hereby forbidden to print or otherwise to produce, publish, use, circulate, display or transport, or to cause to be be printed or otherwise produced, published, used, circulated, displayed or transported, any fraudulent, false, or misleading advertisement or advertisements or any advertisement or advertisements which is or are objectionable or pernicious or hereinafter defined, and each violation hereof shall constitute a misdemeanor and be punishable by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars ($100), the determination of the precise amount in each case being left to the discretion of the court: Provided, that in all cases where the violation is for the sake of direct profit as by pay for production, publicaiton, transportation, or the like, said fine shall always be of an amount not less than three times the amount of such pay, unless treble such pay should fall below the prescribed minimum fine of one hundred dollars ($100). Each day's continuance of the production, publication, use, circulation, display or transportation of an advertisement or advertisements such as prohibited by this act shall constitute a separate offence thereunder.

"Within the meaning of this act, an advertisement shall be defined to be any means of publishing or giving notice of information of certain things, and shall include oral as well as physical forms of publication intended to reach a plurality of persons. Among the kind of advertisements which, within the meaning of this act, shall be deemed either objectionable or pernicious, or both, and prohibited thereby are the following:

"Advertisements of 'damaged goods sales,' of 'fire sales,' 'bankrupt sales' and the like, where merchandise not a part of such 'damage,' 'fire damaged,' or 'bankrupt stock,' or other stock represented in the advertisement is offered, represented, or sold as a part of such stock.. Advertisements stating former selling values, or present or former worth, in excess of recognized trade standards of such selling values or worth, or where values or worth are stated and are represented as worth more than such prices at which the goods or commodity advertised were sold in the regular course of business to numbers of persons with a period of eighteen months prior to date of such advertisement. Advertisements which represent merchandise to be other than as stated upon labels or other markings upon containers or packages of such merchandise, as in the case of food labeled and sold in compliance with pure food laws of this or other States or of the United States.

"Advertisements wherein is contained any statement or statements of quantity or quality of merchandise to be sold, and containing exaggerated or false statements of quantity, or where the goods offered are seconds, inferior quality, or otherwise not of standard quality and such facts are not disclosed in the wording of the advertisement. Advertisements offering for sale any merchandise or other commodity described as of one material or substance only, when it is a combination of two or more materials or substances, especially where the undisclosed material or substance is an adulterant or material used to cheapen the merchandise or other commodity, as in instances where goods are represented as 'all wool' goods, but are 'cotton and wool.'

"Advertisements containing statements as of fact, when it is a matter of opinion, unless clearly stated as opinion, as where the words, "The best in the world,' 'finest cheviots,' etc., are used. Advertisements in which are contained so-called guarantees or promise of guarantee of future increase in value of shares, stocks, bonds, real estate, merchandise or other commodity.

"Advertisements predicting future greater values or stating present value of stocks, bonds, lands, merchandise or other commodities, and wherein is contained, as an incentive to purchase the stocks, bonds, lands, merchandise, or other commodities, a description of the procedure, success or results of any similar enterprise or process of manufacture or similar merchandise.

"Advertisements of remedies for diseases or treatment for diseases wherein symptoms of diseases are enumerated, or wherein claims of superior professional skill are made, or where offers of 'no cure, no pay,' 'money back if not cured,' or 'contract of cure,' or similar offers are published.

"Advertisements in which are contained so-called guarantees, or promise to guarantee a cure of disease, of reference, direct or indirect, to private diseases of men or women, as when the words, such as man medicine, diseases of men, irregularities of women, disordered male or female functions, or the like, are used, or fictitious testimonials as to effectvieness of any remedy or treatment for any disease.

"Advertisements of seers, clairvoyants ,fortune-tellers, mediums, or the like, wherein are contained any so-called guarantee or promise of guarantee, assurance or claims of ability to predict future events, or claims of miraculous or unusual psychic power.

"Advertisements offering employment wherein is contained a so-called guarantee of results, or where money or other equivalent is asked to be paid in advance for samples or outfits."

Writing of the measure Mr. Wagner says:

"This bill, or an improved bill, will be reintroduced at the next session of the Legislature, two years hence; a national law of the same kind will be drafted and introduced into Congress; and similar bills will be offered to the various legislatures from time to time."

YOUNG MAN WANTED.

Palo Alto, Cal., Aug. 24, 1907.

"Grocers' Advocate,"
San Francisco.

Dear Sirs:—We have a good place for a young man who understands the grocery business. Any assistance you can give us will be thankfully received. Yours truly.

Sallows & Rhodes.

N. B.—The above firm operates three stores, one in Santa Clara, one in Palo Alto and one in New Meridan. The chances for advancement for the right man are therefore obvious.—Editor.

San Luis Obicpo.—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the County Clerk of the Swiss American Supply Company of Cambria. The directors are J. P. Righetti, P. L. Maggetti, Charles Bianchi, James Guerra and J. A. Pedrotta. The capital stock is of the amount of $10,000, divided into one hundred shares of the par value of $100 each. Of the capital stock a total of $6,100 has been subscribed.

The purpose of the company is to buy and sell general merchandise, dry goods, fancy goods, staple goods of all descriptions, family supplies, wearing apparel, hardware and crockery, farm and dairy products, implements and tools and all other kinds of merchandise as are generally kept on sale in a country store. The company takes control of the P. L. Maggetti stock of goods.

Oakland.—J. A. Wheeler, a groceryman at 4954 Telegraph avenue, was fined $100 by Police Judge Samuels recently for selling liquor without a license. Wheeler acknowledged that he had sold and delivered liquor to his customers and that he kept a small stock of wines and other intoxicants on his place, but he declared that he was not aware that he had to have a liquor license in order to sell to his customers. When sentence was pronounced he notified the court that he intended to take an appeal.

Sierra City.—R. D. Phelan & Co. have sold their general merchandise store to A. Musante and E. Vedovi, two young men from San Francisco, who will conduct the business under the firm name of the Sierra County Mercantile Co. These men have had thorough business training and are well qualified for this new undertaking. The store room which is light and airy will be thoroughly overhauled. The floor will be oiled to keep down the dust, the shelving will be repainted and given two coats of white enamel and the whole salesroom put in first class condition. The building is to be enlarged and thoroughly restocked in all lines.

Santa Cruz.—The Edward Haggerty grocery store will change hands the first of September, the store having been purchased by Frank Stikeman and Henry K. Pierce. Mr. Stikeman has the past few years been a collector for the F. A. Hihn Co., but is an experienced groceryman. Mr. Pierce is at present working for Uncle Sam in the local postoffice.

San Francisco.—George J. Harris, a steamfitter, and Charles Coulter, a waiter, arrested by Detectives Conlon and McMahon, August 29th, were booked last week at the City Prison on charges of grand larceny. They are accused of entering Pistolesi's grocery store at 816 Kearny street August 28th and while one engaged the proprietor in conversation the other stole three gold watches, a nugget pin and $80 in money from the safe. These men were arrested on suspicion. Pistolesi visited the prison and positively identified both men.

GETTING BACK TO NATURE.

Retail grocers nowadays, and in somewhat less measure the wholesalers, are interested in the effect produced by the new pack goods which are coming from the factories, put up in full accordance with the Pure Food law. As might have been expected

Twenty years ago there was so little thought of good window display that our largest retail business stores were built without due regard for the value of windows. In recent years we have been tearing out these old windows and fronts at great expense, just for the sake of getting a window, in which a good display can be made. We are still tearing out these old fronts. New buildings are being put up with special reference to the value of the windows for display. Every inch of space is conserved. Permanent artistic features that take up room are left out. Plain, straight lines is the rule now. Artistic windows with huge permanent decoration are of the past. The new front and window is a plain, utility affair. The knowledge we have gained of the value of window display has wrought this great change in building.

Manufacturers have been teaching retail merchants valuable lessons in window dressing in recent years. These men have been so much alive to the advantages of window display that they have sent a lot of expert window dressers around the country trimming the windows of the retailer for nothing more than the privilege of making a handsome display of their own goods. The retailer has noticed how much the sale of goods thus displayed has been promoted, and he is wisely applying the lesson.

To those retail grocers who have not been influenced by such displays as the manufacturers have made in the windows of the retail grocers, it should only be necessary to ask why do these manufactureres spend so much time and money making window displays? It is not an especially new thing. They have at least been at it long enough to determine for themselves whether or not all this effort and expense is money wasted, and if we would seek an answer to the question, whether it pays or not, we need only note the fact that those who did a little in the way of making window displays last year are doing of the same kind of work this year, and planning to do still more next year.

If this sort of work is good for the manufacturer, why is it not equally good for the retailer?

It is not every merchant who has a modern window in which to display his goods. But no matter what the character of the window may be, it should be utilized to the best possible advantage. Any window is a good asset, provided it is made proper use of, and the value of the window depends on the merchant himself. If he does not know how to make the best possible use of it he should learn, and if he does not learn how to make a window display it will be his own fault.

PREPARING FOR BIG THINGS.

Leaders in the Grocery Business United in the Associated Grocers.

ALL WANT FAIR PROFITS.

Will Contribute to the Funds and Lend Their Influences to Secure Results.

A number of the very largest grocers of San Francisco got together last Friday evening and talked over the local situation.

They were a unit in agreeing that the methods being followed by the Associated Retail Grocers had already produced great good. To make it produce greater good, they all agreed to lend it their aid in every way.

Those present agreed that for six months, beginning October 1, 1907, they would contribute to the funds of the Associated Retail Grocers according to the following schedule:

CLASS A—Doing a business of over $10,000 monthly, $5 per month.

CLASS B—Over $5,000, $2 per month.

CLASS C—Over $1,500, $1 per month.

CLASS D—Under $1,500, 50 cts. per month.

This, they figured, would give the organization enough income so it would not have to beg of the jobbers. It will enable them to keep good headquarters down town and a staff that will enable them to accomplish the following results.

1st. Get better profits.

2d. Prevent cutting on certain staples.

3rd. Stop the selling of goods by wholesalers to people that would otherwise buy of retailers.

4th. Help collect bad bills.

5th. Inform members about people who seek to open accounts.

6th. Issue a Delinquent List.

7th. Bring about a better feeling among the grocers.

As this copy of the paper is being distributed in the post office, a meeting of the Associated Retail Grocers is being held.

Officers for the ensuing year are being elected and plans made.

These will be printed in full next week.

Profits on Beer.

Much work has been expended in securing an understanding with certain bottlers as to the retail selling-price of beer.

All the larger bottlers want to see the grocers get a price of 2 for 25c.

When this matter has been definitely decided, each grocer should devote himself to selling the beers that are being protected and refuse to handle the beers that the bottlers allow to be sold for 10c.

Laws Won.

The following laws have been secured by the efforts of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association:

1. Permitting the Attachment of the wages of public officials.

2. Making a Wife's Separate Property responsible for family bills for the necessaries of life.

3. Mutual Fire Insurance.

4. Extending life of open book account to four years instead of two.

5. Making a check "with intent to defraud" a state's prison offense.

6. A fair guaranty clause in the pure food law.

POINTS TO WATCH.

SEE PAGE ELEVEN

HOW PROFITS ARE GAINED.

Obligation of the Individual Grocers In Encouraging Manufacturers.

STATE DIRECTORS TO MEET.

Plans for the Ensuing Year to Be Decided Upon.

Grocers are getting thousands of dollars of profits on flour each month that they would not have received had it not been for the State Grocers' Association.

This profit has been secured by co-operative action on the part of the grocers.

It requires continuous co-operative action if these profits are to be permanent.

Permanency of the flour profits are the greatest aid to our being able to secure profits on other articles.

Ghiradelli Takes Action.

Every grocer in the State is profiting by the action of the D. Ghiradelli Co., in maintaining the price of his chocolates and cocoas.

Mr. Ghiradelli was encouraged to take this step by the success of the flour prices. He has found very little difficulty in having his prices upheld.

Several times there have been cuts made. Invariably, Mr. Ghiradelli has taken action and the cutting has ceased.

In doing this, Mr. Ghirardelli has antagonized certain interests. He has lost certain trade.

At the same time, he has won many staunch friends. He has secured much business that would otherwise have been diverted. Many association members who were pushing other brands have devoted their energies to advancing the sale of Ghiradelli's goods.

This is as it should be.

Several chocolate makers have sought to induce the trade to push their goods. These goods they allow to be cut.

They have found very little encouragement among the Association members, although a few have advanced the sale of these goods.

Every member must remember his friends. His friends are the men who will not allow cutters to cut away his profits. When the manufacturer who allows his goods to be cut, comes along, the dealer should let him understand that, as a business man, he does not intend to encourage any manufacturer who is trying to undermine his profits.

More Lines To Come.

The faithfulness of the members of the State Grocers' Association to their friends is the greatest force in encouraging other manufacturers to seek that friendship.

The profits are being cut out of numerous well-advertised specialties that have practically become staples because grocers have recommended and "boosted" them for years. If these men know that the grocers will boost and be faithful to other manufacturers if those manufacturers protect profits and will discourage the sale of the goods that can be cut, they will be glad to go to considerable trouble and expense to see that it is their goods that gets the boosting.

A meeting of the directors of the State Grocers' Association is to be held on Thursday, October 3rd.

At this meeting plans will be made for the ensuing year.

The action of the Sacramento convention has outlined numerous things that will unquestionably be taken up and carried out.

No more important work will be undertaken than that of preventing cutting.

Each member must help and no greater help can be accorded than of refusing to feature any goods in opposition to goods, the price of which is being maintained.

NEWS FROM OREGON.

Tillamook, Oregon.

Perhaps a note from this dairy section of the U. S. may be acceptable.

The factories of Mr. Chas. Ray of Cloverdale in this County have made this year from March 9th. to Aug. 15th. 4909 cases: 30,0514 pounds cheesed of the aggregate value of $41,836.16.

Milk, approximate, 2,930,00 lbs.

Cheese made; principally Flats a few Young Americas and Cheddars.

Prices paid as follows: for butter fat.

For March 35 c., April 35 c. May 34 c. June 34 c. July 33 c. Aug. 34 to 35c.

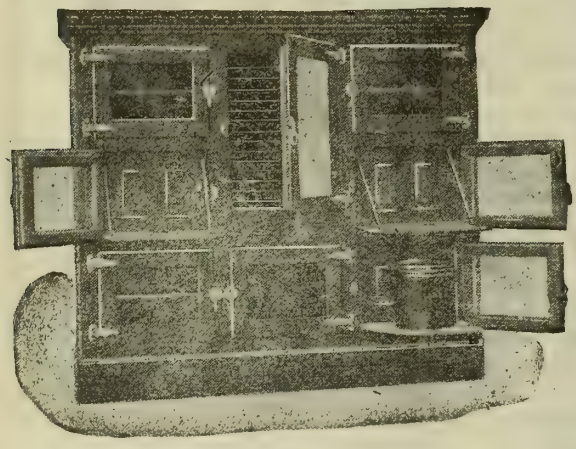
These prices are net at the factory.

Output this year 10 per cent to 15 per cent above last years..

Respectfully,

The R. Robinson Cheese Co., per W .G. Dwight.

P. S. The total output in Tillamook County this year will be about 3,250,-000 lbs. cheese.



BUCKING THE SOAP CLUBS.

The retail grocers of Chester, Pa., have resorted to a novel scheme to balk the flotation of "soap clubs" for the peddling of soaps made by premium-giving concerns, notably the Larkin Company. Such enterprises as this have long been the bane of the retail grocer's life, the employment of some of his best customers to cut his throat by offering them a few cheap trinkets or bits of gaudy furniture as premiums. The "club" element of the transaction is too gauzy to be considered.

The retail grocers have secured the passage of a city ordinance requiring any soap club to take out a license at a cost of $25 before they can engage in peddling, and they are now urging the city authorities to enforce it. If the plan succeeds Chester will likely have imitators.

Two new factories for the making of milk powder have been started in Sweden during 1906, one in Eslof and one in Helsingborg, while a third is now being built in Ystad. The Eslof factory handles about 60,000 lbs. skimmilk and the Helsingborg 16,000, while the Ystad factory is intended for 60,-000 lbs. daily. The price paid for skimmilk is now 50 per cent higher than formerly, being about 20c per 100 lbs, but this is not enough to make it advisable in the true interest of the farmers.

We are confident that many of our readers have scanned the columns of the "Advocate" very carefully in order to find out who won the Hobart Coffee Mill which was presented to the Association by Frank F. Wear.

San Francisco, California.

Gentlemen:—

We are in receipt of information to the effect that the Hobart Electric Coffee Mill donated to your association under the following conditions and plan of disposal, to-wit:

First.—That the machine will go to a member of the State Grocers Association.

Second.—That he will install and operate the mill in his store.

Third.—That under no consideration shall the mill be used for speculative purposes by the fortunate receipient." has been claimed by a man of Sebastopool. Calif. WHO IS IN THE HARNESS BUSINESS.

We regret that any confusion should have arisen in connection with the disposal of this machine, but understanding as I do that the matter is to be cared for by the directors of your association and that eventually the mill will find its home amongst some one of your members, and in accordance with the stipulations under which it was given. I am,

Very respectfully yours,
(Signed) FRANK F. WEAR.

FFW. Dict.

P. S.—The mill has been carefully crated and is in the care of the Sacramento Storage Company awaiting final shipping instructions.

Holders of tickets are requested to be patient—awaiting the outcome the meeting of the Directors referred to in the letter. It is probable that the former drawing will be declared null and void and a new one held.

NORTHERN FOOD SHOW.

The pure food show to be given under the auspices of the Spokane Grocer's association in the state armory, Nov. 4 to 18, promises to be of vital interest to dealers as well as to the consumers. E. N. Cory, secretary, of the association, said:

"This being the first pure food show ever given in Spokane, we expect it to be a good one. All the local manufacturers of the line handled by the grocers are to exhibit their wares, the idea being to educate the people to make a distinction between good and poor groceries. By so doing the grocers will be benefited, as a demand for the goods obtainable will be created.

"The purpose of the pure food show primarily is to give the manufacturers an opportunity to demonstrate their goods in such a manner that the grocers will be placed on an equal footing. The people who attend the show will be able to see the goods for themselves and form their own opinions as to their merits. A demonstration in a grocery store in this advanced age of telephones does not amount to much, as the consumer rarely goes in person to the store."

SYRUP FACTORY PROJECT.

Lodi.—Through Chris Schnaidt of the Lodi Land Co. information has been received that a leading firm of Boston, Mass. intends, in the near future, to establish a large factory for the making of fruit juices used for soda fountains. The firm has been looking over the country for a location and Lodi seems to be the favored place. They will make a specialty of berries, of which the Logan berry will be most prominent.

BOSTON CLUB LAUNCHED.

Officers Elected, Dues Arranged and Plans Discussed.

A number of the ladies and gentlemen interested in the success of the California "Boston Club" met on Tuesday evening of this week at the store of Mr. F. B. Connolly. Many of the preliminary details were discussed and arranged.

Officers Selected.

Early in the evening the following officers and committees were elected:

John W. King, President.
Frank B. Connolly, 1st Vice-President.
J. R. Newberry, 2nd Vice-President.
Joy D. Campbell, Treasurer.
Earl D. Eddy, Secretary.
Carl Harrison, Assistant Secretary.

The chair then appointed the following members on the Executive Committee: Messrs. Doyle, Sullivan, Stulz, Golder, Trask, Pierce, Paulding, Jones and West, together with the elected officers.

Messrs. Doyle, Trask and Sullivan were appointed as a Finance Committee.

The Entertainment Committee consists of the following ladies: Mrs. King, Mrs. Connolly, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Eddy, Mrs. Doyle, Mrs. Sullivan, Mrs. Stulz, Mrs. Paulding, Mrs. Golder.

Dues.

Figuring on the dues paying the fare of members, it was found necessary to make them $12.50 per month, payable in September, October, November, December, January, February, March, April and May. Added to the dues will be the various amounts secured from theater parties, etc., thereby reducing the expenses of each member proportionately.

Theatre Party.

Mr. Eddy reported his investigations of the propositions offered by the various theatres and the "Alcazar" was deemed the best of those offered. It was decided to give a Theatre Party at this house on October 29th.

By-Laws.

Messrs. Eddy, Doyle and Trask were appointed a committee on By-Laws, with full power to act. By-Laws will be printed in next week's "Advocate."

A Los Angeles report says the Santa Ana Valley Walnut Grower's Association will commence walnut shipping in a few days, and that the Association, which controls a large share of the walnuts of that county, reports the crop a heavy one.

CALIFORNIA AS A FOOD STATE.

Comparatively few people outside the grocery trade—or in it, for that matter—have any adequate conception of the enormous part California and the Pacific Coast play in the task of feeding the nation. It is forcibly expressed in the statistics of the present pack, as they are estimated by a well known authority of that region. Although the amount of the pack this year will fall short of what it should in value, it will probably outstrip the record owing to the prevailing high prices.

It is estimated that the total pack of fruits will be about 2,500,000 cases and that of vegetables 800,000 cases. That makes 3,300,00 cases for California. Add to this, say, 700,000 cases for Oregon and Washington, which, although not fruit-growing States like California, have been adding to their resources slowly but surely. This woud make for the three States a total of 4,000,000 cases, worth this year a total of $14,000,000. Then there are other products, such as catsups and sauces., etc., which would make a value of $500,000. Then to all this we may add the 2,000,000 cases of salmon packed on the Coast this year. This makes the actual number of cases of canned food not less than 6,000,000, while the number of pounds of foodstuffs will reach the grand total of 336,000,000 pounds.

SUGAR.

Sugar dropped 10 points during the week.

New York, Sept. 19.—Willett & Gray report:

The Week.—Raws: Unchanged. Refined: Unchanged. Net cash quotations this date are: Molasses, 3.09c.; Centrifugals, 3.95c; Granulated, 4.65c

Raws.—During the week under review the raw sugar market, has been steady and firm in the United States. Offerings have been limited and have found ready buyers at full quotations.

Growing crop reports for the week were favorable for beets and slightly unfavorable for the Cuba cane crop, the latter needing more rain. It is too early yet, however, to give correct crop data.

orable, and American beet crop reports are improving.

Refined.—During the week no change of quotations has been made by any refiner. Refined beet sugar will be offered generally for sale next month.

The outlook is for a steady refined market, with contracts safe from decline.

MAPLE SUGAR.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Sept. 13.—There is very little maple sugar left in either Vermont or Canada and prices rule high. While the crop this year was a very good one the demand has ben unprecedented. It is likely that before the first of January there will not be a pound of sugar for sale.

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co., say under date of Sept. 24.;

"The market on New Crop Fancy Heads is very firm. Prices have been maintained owing to the fact that all markets in the U. S. were practically bare of supply which created such a demand among the mills that they have not been able to turn out enough fancy Heads to meet the demand.

The market remains the same on Domestic Japans but the prices are so high that the trade has taken to Imported Japan and Hawaiian Japan which is grown from Imported Seed in the Islands. While it is unattractive to the eye, it cooks up well and has found favor with the trade who have used same in place of Domestic Japans.

New York, Sept. 17th.—Dan Talmage's Son's Co., report:

Active conditions have prevailed during the week. Prices are well-sustained in accord with strong tone at Southern points of supply. Offerings consist mainly of the higher and lower styles of excellent color, there being a notable lack of medium grades.

Advices from the South note quiet market on the Atlantic Coast. No New Crop has been received, although some is expected this week. At New Orleans market is tsrong and active. Out-turn of Mills sold daily and receipts of Rough very light and sharply contested for by Mills. In the Interior Southwest Louisiana and Texas mills are getting to work slowly, out-put sold promptly at full prices.

DRIED PEACHES.

The movement in this line is not particularly heavy. The fruit not having recovered from the sulphur agitation. According to the "Cal. Fruit Grower," the raising of this latter question has shown itself in the quality of some of the deliveries from growers. Some of the growers have been overcareful and have not used sufficient sulphur to properly cure their fruit, hence, an undue proportion of low grade peaches offered to packers and these will doubtless be picked up at varying low prices, depending on the condition of the goods.

NECTARINES.

Because of the scarcity of apricots this year, nectarines have become quite popular, since their resemblance to the appricot is very close. Quotations are advancing in this line.

According to a mail report from Fresno, last year the farmers were digging up their nectarines trees as not worth the ground they were growing on. This year nectarines are bringing from 10c to 14c per pound, and a big nectarine orchard is a fortune in itself. Apricots have been so plentifull in past years that the nectarines went begging, as they are closely allied in flavor and eating qualities when dried, and the nectarine is a less generally known food. However, apricots were a very short crop this season, and the demand was not nearly supplied. As a result the demand for the nectarines went up with a rush and they became very profitable.

EVAPORATED APPLES.

This fruit is extremely high with prices advancing.

PRUNES.

The market is stronger in all degrees. The crop thus far picked, demonstrates the truth of the statement with regard to the falling off from the early estimates. It looks now as thuogh this season's prune crop will be close to that of the very short 1905 crop. This feature, combined with the high prices ruling in all other lines of cured fruits, puts prunes in a very good position and the prices will no doubt continue to advance. Small prunes will be scarce.

RAISINS.

The past week has shown no change.

The fruit is now being delivered to the packing houses in Fresno, and scenes of great activity are the result. Raisins will run to larger sizes this year than usual, and a good proportion of three crown is expected. The layer crop will be good. From all present indications, the crop now harvested is the largest one ever produced. The bare consuming markets tend to keep values steady regardless of this condition and prices are not apt to fluctuate very much on this account.

DRIED FIGS.

Fresno.—Offers of 3¼c per pound for figs are being refused by some of the growers who have unsold crops. It is reliably estimated that not more than 200 tons are yet in the hands of the grower, and these are nearly all in small lots.The largest block is said to be not over 15 or 20 tons. Observation of the way that figs are moving has led some of the growers to believe that 3½c will be obtained without great difficulty if the goods are stored for a few weeks. Orders are coming in fast and the packing houses are keeping their stocks well cleaned up.

Fresno.—The cool weather which has been experienced for some time past, ceased to benefit the fig crop in the last cool week experienced, and began to turn it sour. So much so is this the case that the estimate of 3500 tons formerly put on the 1907 crop has been reduced to some figure between 2500 and 3000 tons, according to the extent of the damaged to be done the fruit. Estimates of the loss due to securing run as high as 25 per cent of the total amount of figs.

WALNUTS.

Prices on new crop have been named and are as follows:

15c per lb for No. 1 softshell and 12c for No. 2 do; 14½c for No. 1 hardshell and 11½c for No. 2 do. These prices are for round lots. Jobbing prices are 1½c per lb higher.

Ventura.—Walnut harvesting in this vicinity began last Monday, the weather for such work is all that could be wished for. The walnuts are filling and dropping nicely and the quality is good.

HONEY.

Honey is in light supply and very firm, with the bee men holding for high prices. Almost all the candied old and amber grades have been cleaned up for expert.

CANNED GOODS.

The heat of the packing season is passed and quite a few of the canneries have closed so far as fruit is concerned. Many of them are operating on tomatoes at the present time. The eastern pack of peaches is reported to be very short.

CANNED CORN.

In eastern centers, corn is booming. Crop reports indicate that the quality of the corn which will be packed, is not good and that there will be a greater proportion of low grades than usual. Stocks everywhere have been greatly depleted during the past year and the corn packed will come to a market which is more nearly bare than for several years.

The estimates of the 1907 corn pack are all low as compared with the output in the last three seasons, according to the Chicago "Canner," which says: "There isn't more than 1,000,000 cases differences between the highest and the lowest estimates, which doesnt indicate such wide dissimilarity of view as the uninitiated might suppose. The lowest estimate we have heard so far is for a pack of about 6,500,000 cases and the highest, 7,500,000. These figures loom anything but large, when the pack of 1906 was 8,739,908 cases, that of 1905, 13,939,683 cases, and the 1904 pack 11,462,969. Unless the guesses being made are far wide of the mark, the 1907 pack will not only be considerably less than last year's production, but not materially more than half as large as the packs of either 195 or 1904, which combined were approximately 25,000,000 cases."

PEAS.

Not many packers of peas in the West had a surplus when their packing season ended, and according to the Chicago "Canner" it appears that a majority of those who succeeded in putting up a surplus after filling contracts have since disposed of their 1907 pack, the prices named by one averaging about 5 per cent over this canner's opening quotations on his 1907 pack. The new prices of the other average about 10 per cent higher. Several Wisconsin packers have within the last few days expressed themselve as unwilling to make prices on the 1908 pack of peas earlier than December.

PROVISIONS.

Price cutting on hams, bacons and lard is reported, which gives the market a less appearance of firmness than has prevailed for a long time.

CATSUP.

California packers are busily engaged in getting their product into shape and unless early frosts interfere, an excellent pack will be made.

ROLLED OATS AND MEALS.

According to eastern advices, it looks as though there might be a famine in rolled oats and other kindred products, manufactured in that section of the country.

An exceptionately late and excessive demand is what caused this shortage, which is said to come dangerously near being a famine. In speaking of the situation, a well known factor in the trade located at St. Louis, made the following statement:

"Oatmeal as a breakfast food is getting to be a very serious problem with the manufacturer as well as the jobber and retailer.

"We seem to be unable to get all the goods at any price in sufficient quantities to meet the demands. The crop this year will undoubtedly be small and the few threshed oats we are getting are not weighing nearly as much to the bushel as they ordinarily do.

"The season is fully a month late and what few oats that are coming to the mills find that they are coming on a bare market.

"The price of oats from the farmer has nearly doubled in the past few years, and we find we are unable to supply the demand for rolled oats in bulk at $6.50 to jobbers in car-lots where we were glad to get $2 less a comparatively short time ago.

"The margin of the manufacturer would be entirely wiped out even at the advanced prices were it not for the fact that by products are bringing many times as much as they did a year or so ago.

"On package goods the price to consumer has not advanced, and the retailer has not been compelled to pay the advance which is really justified by conditions.

"Oatmeal breakfast foods which have been retailing for ten cents should be placed in the list of two for a-quarter goods on the basis of what they cost the manufacturer and tthe retailer, but the makers of well-advertised brands are afraid to advance their prices to an extent where it will cause the consumer to pay a higher price.

"It looks very much to me as though practically every brand of rolled oats will be entitled to sell at an advance of at least 25 per cent to the consumer if there is not a change within the next month.

"We cannot get the raw goods to manufacture, and under these circumstances it looks as though the scramble for the finished product will cause a most decided advance all along the line unless a change in crop conditions comes very soon."

BEANS.

Spot Limas are extremely scarce. having been pretty well cleaned up. The harvest is now on in the southern part of the State and new crop goods will be available very shortly. The market in general is steady. both buyers and sellers awaiting new goods. It is believed that Pinks will bring high prices throughout the year.

FRENCH SARDINES.

"Owing to the almost entire failure of the seasons pack in France, " Wieland Bros. say "prices have jumped about $1.50 to $2.00 per case. Stocks everywhere are light and firmly held."

PACIFIS CODFISH.

This variety of fish is very firm in price with advances pending.

NORWAY MACKEREL.

The catch this far is very light. the market therefore continues very firm.

IMPORTED FISH.

With reference to Holland herring the Strohmeyer & Arpe Co.. of N. Y. under date of Sept. 19. say:" Shipments of late have been quite large. Demand, owing to the extremely hot weather. being only limited and ice-house facilities here being taxed to their utmost. importers were obliged to reduce prices to force sales. Consequently the market shows quite a demoralized condition at this present moment. Holland cables to-day that catch is poor now and that prices are rising. Quotations to-day show an advance of about 2½c per keg and 25c per barrel, over last week's figures."

One of their shippers of Norway mackerel cables that catch so far is very poor and abnormally high prices are being paid to the fishermen again this season. The fish as a rule runs small, so that large size of Norway mackerel are likely to be scarce.

"The catch of oil sardines in France, the company above quoted say, "continues failure and the season being so far advanced ther is no likelihood of many more sardines being packed this season. French sardines are almost unobtainable. Portugal has had no small fish suitable for Dingley ¼s for some time, and some of the best known brands have been out of the market for several months. Norway reports very poor catch of sardines and, of course, are unable to cope with the large demand. Owing to the scarcity of French and Portuguese sardines there has been a largely increased demand for Norway smoked sardines. Prices for good and well-known brands are held very firmly. The catch of sprats will not begin before the end of the year. Stocks here are very small and firmly held.

HAY.

Somers & Co., say under date of Sept. 24th.:

Hay arrivals for the week ending to-day show practically the same total as that of last week, 4430 tons in comparison with 4520 tons. Rail arrivals have been rather light until Monday. when the exceedingly large number of 151 cars were reported. Boats and barges are still very largely in evidence. and many of the Bay Landings are being well cleared of the large amounts of Hay that has been awaiting shipment for some time past. At railroad points the situation is very different for there are still thousands of tons of baled Hay awaiting cars, with no protection from the weather.

The local situation shows no change, for although previous to Monday there was some indication of an advance, yet now the old state of affairs obtains again. Local trade is a bit quiet, although it is generally conceded that a fairly active Winter demand will be noted. It is readily conceded that transportation will control prices during the winter, and from the present outlook we anticipate a short car supply with a corresponding advance in the price of Hay as soon as the rains begin.

Although occasional sales are made at both above and below quotations, yet as a general statement prices continue unchanged.

We give them today as follows:

Choice Wheat Hay	$18.00 to $20.00
Good Wheat Hay	16.00 to 17.50
Other grades same	11.00 to 15.00

AMERICAN SARDINES IN FRANCE.

Situation So Serious That Easport Goods Are Demanded Abroad.

It may seem a good deal like the proverbial transportation of coals to Newcastle, but the sardine situation in France has become so strenuous that American exporters are making considerable shipments of American sardines, packed at Eastport, to the French market. The French sardine catch is a flat failure and the French market is as bare of goods as the American. The situation forced the suggestion on the minds of American packers that there might be some chance for the long despised herring, and within the past few weeks several hundred cases have been sent to French dealers as an experiment. It is also said that exporters in France and Portugal, who have been supplying the Chinese trade, have lately made considerable purchases of American sardines to ship to China. With Portuguese sardines quoted at $8 or $9 and American at $3.30, there is little question about their ability to compete.

CLOSE JAM FACTORY.

Los Angeles.—The canning and preserving factory of the Stevens Manufacturing Co., 405-07 San Pedro st. was closed Tuesday by order of the District Attorney for flagrant violation of the McCartney pure-food law. State Senator H. G. S. NOTES.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The name of the Del Monte Mining Company has been changed to the Excelsior Cereal Milling Company. This concern will hereafter be a separate and distinct concern, not a branch of the Del Monte Milling Co., of San Francisco as heretofore. The officers of the company are F. A. Brown, president and manager, and A. B. Fish, secretary and treasurer, both of whom are Los Angeles men.

Spokane, Wash.—The Spokane Relish and Catsup Company, which suspended operations on the disappearance of the former manager, N. O Harvey, on July 13, and a week later of the secretary, J. H. WHAT THE COMMITTEE DOES.

Grocers Are Directly Benefited by Results of Efforts of Promotion Committee, Therefore Should Aid.

The State of California is becoming so well known all over the world through the continued and persistent efforts of The California Promotion Committee that the demand for descriptive literature of the various localities and industries of the State has assumed unprecedented proportions.

Through its Eastern Bureau in New York, and its various agencies over the world the Committee is distributing an enormous amount of California literature, and the demand has been so great that the supply at command of the Committee is constantly depleted.

The work of the Committee along this line has borne good fruit, and no county can afford to let its supply of literature fall short of the demand.

The Committee does its work of distribution without charge to the local organizations or to the localities furnishing the literature, and the best feature of its work is the fact that no literature is sent out in a haphazard manner. Every piece that is distributed is sent in response to an inquiry from some person who is interested in the State, consequently no literature sent to The California Promotion Committee is thrown away.

The Committee desires that every locality in California be represented on its literature counters at headquarters in San Francisco and at its Eastern Bureau, and there is no question that there can be no better method of distributing the literature of the locality. The system of the Committee is so perfect in this respect that it keeps close account of every piece of literature received and distributed, and when it notices that any locality is falling behind it sends a letter asking for more. These requests should be promptly complied with, and it is hoped that the commercial organizations of the State will see to it that there be no call for literature that can not be filled.

LOBSTERS FOR PACIFIC COAST.

Consul L. E. Dudley, writing from Vancouver, tells of the establishment of the lobster industry on the Pacific coast:

A few years ago the Canadian fisheries department planted a few lobsters at different points in the waters of British Columbia. Professor Prince who is at the head of the Canadian Fisheries Commission, is now on the coast making an examination of the beds where lobsters were planted to see what increases they have made, and he will investigate a number of different places with a view to a large planting of lobsters, if it is found those already planted have done well. It is said that Professor Prince will look into the temperature of the water, the character of the bottom, and other particulars, before any decision is reached regarding planting more lobsters. If conditions are found favorable it is intended to plant extensive beds of lobsters, so that in the course of four or five years the lobster-taking industry will be established on a large scale.

IF A CUSTOMER

asks for

and you can not supply it, will he not consider you behind the times?

HAND SAPOLIO is a special toilet soap—superior to any other in countless ways—delicate enough for the baby's skin, and capable of removing any stain.

Costs the dealer the same as regular SAPOLIO, but should be sold at 10 cents per cake.

THAT QUALITY TALK.

Quality in merchandise does not necessarily mean high-priced merchandise.

Quality is a relative term.

Low-priced goods can be quality goods. Many of them are.

When quality is talked in many stores a price is named which goes over the heads of many customers. In fact it is quite likely to be over the heads of most of the people living in that community.

The masses who furnish your store with most of its trade regard many goods as goods of quality which you and some of your customers might look down upon.

Your store should be a market where all kinds of pocket-books can find satisfaction.

Low-priced goods which have merit are an absolute necessity to any store. They suit the income and pocket-books of three-fourths of the people of your town and vicinity.

When you get the idea that quality means only goods which exclusive trade can buy, and that to run a quality store means to largely cater to that trade, then you are wandering towards trouble.

Everyone in your community would like to buy the high-priced lines. But very few of them can do it. Most of them are looking for quality on the lower rounds of the price ladder. There is where your knowledge and ability as a buyer must come to your assistance and theirs.

BIG VIEWS OF SMALL THINGS.

Andrew Carnegie some time ago declared that if all his wealth were swept away, and he had to start in at a dollar per day, he would fix his habits of life so that he would save a certain amount of money each day. Nobody doubts this of the little man of iron resolution and tremendous breadth of views. If society only paid Andrew Carnegie $1 per day for his work, he would have the moral courage to live well within his meager income. He would let it be known that until he was in receipt of a bigger income, comforts and luxuries would have to go by the board. He would let certain laws and fixed principles govern his life. There was a time in Carnegie's life when he only did receive $1 per day, and he acted then as he states he would act again were he placed on the same salary once more. Most young men of ordinary self respect could make the following statement:

"I do not want to work for a salary all my life.

"I do not want to remain unmarried because I have no money accumulated and therefore dare not risk wedding a woman I could love.

"I have a desire to make my name stand for something honored in the world of commerce before I die.

"In common with numberless others I stand the risk of dismissal through the firm's failure or passing into other hands. I stand a chance of being put in a most unenviable fix at any time through scores of emergencies."

The desire to answer these problems satisfactorily generally represents the minimum of most worker's secret ambitions. How are they to attain their wishes? The answer lies with themselves, says W. Bright in a recent article. It calls for the undoubted exercise of much moral courage. If the worker really desires to rise above the common level he will have to plan his life so that he will not be to blame if the object in view is not accomplished.

Many workers in large establishments object to having to sign for pencils and stationery dealt out to them. Hundreds of salesmen and saleswomen never dream of attempting to practice small, legitimate economies for their employers. They consider such things beneath them. In reality the reverse is true. They are unable to get up to them—to see the possibilities in little things. If there are 3000 employes in a concern and 2000 of them waste but ten cents a day, which amount could be saved by a little thoughtfulness, it means the corporation is out a trifle of $1,200 per week, or over $62,000 per year. Yet this only means a waste of a little over one cent an hour for each employe. No wonder, when the managers of big firms and heads of departments figure these things out, the attempt is made to install stringent rules which will prevent needless waste.

It is, however, in private life that the worker generally utterly fails to see what the principles of economy, if continually practised, would do for him in the course of a few years. It often spells the difference between success and failure. When many men could get into business, provided they produce a few hundred dollars, not seldom they are without the money. It is doubtless hard to practice self denial, and occasionally draw down ugly epithets on one's head because it is not convenient to indulge in a "little friendly game of poker" or a night out with the boys. But if a man force himself to think along broad lines and look at what sums of money can be accumulated if systematically saved, the taunts of the thoughtless and improvident will be more easily borne.

There is no disgrace in a man attempting to save when he is only getting a small salary. Society and circumstances have decreed that as yet he is not a favored one, and he, as it were, is dared to rise above the position into which conditions have forced him. If he rises by the employment of legitimate means, all honor to him. "We think it mean and miserly," remarked one writer, "to look after the little things." And for that reason, more than any other, human life is cursed with poverty and pauperism.

It is the easiest thing in the world for the spendthrifts and ne'er-do-wells to say that before they would go without a drink, or a good cigar, or refuse to take in a good show occasionally, they would die. This latter class of people often will waste enough inside a few years to enable them to go into a small business for themselves and be independent. And the outcome generally is that the man of small economies often rules the man of so-called generous impulses. And when the man of spendthrift habits is under the rule of the man who was hard put to it to save his dollars and cents, he not seldom curses loud and long because of the meaness of the man on top. He really is wrong in doing so. To most men of average ability the same paths to success lie open. And if many men choose the bypaths of pleasure and self indulgence, and like to sell their heritage for a wretched mess of pottage, instead of walking in the broad path of self restraint and wise economy which not seldom leads to independence, they should not blame their brethren for having exercised a greater measure of wisdom than they themselves have shown.—Journal of Commerce.

Window Dressing.

ART AND SCIENCE OF WINDOW DRESSING.

By S. W. Roth

EXPRESSIONS OF GENIUS.

It will not do to chuck a lot of stuff in a window and call it a window display. Most people are offended at any sense of disorder, and all people have a more or less liking for order, and that which is artistic. The window when completed must show an expression of genius.

There is a method in window dressing, just as there is a method in anything else that is worth doing, and the more thought the merchant gives to his window the greater are his chances of making an attractive display.

Some men are born with that peculiar sense of the fitness of things which makes them in a large sense artistic. They have a real genius for such work as designing window displays. Others have this genius to a small degree only. But genious of all kinds does not amount to much unless it is cultivated. Any man with the least bit of artistic temperament may, by application, make himself something of a genius in particular lines. Those with the natural fitness for the work in hand reach a high degree of excellence with comparative ease, while others have to work hard to acquire a fair amount of skill. In any event, genius is largely the result of hard work, and those who would be proficient in the art and technique of window dressing must work. If they have some natural gift for the work so much the better, but a genius for it may be acquired by study. What has been created by others all may know. They may know all the conventionalities at a small cost and to these may add their own inventions, so that at a very small cost of study almost any one may get up window displays that will be very good expressions of genius.

The small merchant cannot hope to compete with the larger merchants in the matter of window displays, but he may learn all the details of the work, and after he has become skillful in a small way he can profit by the work of others.

The large merchants spend several hundreds of dollars each year on their windows. They keep a staff of from ten to fifteen experts who do nothing else the year around but trim windows. The average merchant, once he understands the details of the work, can borrow much from the expressions of these geniuses who trim the windows for the larger merchants.

Most of these concerns have their work relating to their windows so thoroughly systematised that it moves right along month in and month out with the same regularity and smoothness as the rest of their departments. Nothing, however, is subordinated to the window display department. As soon as a buyer has made new purchases of particular consequence, the head of the window dressing department is consulted. This man is the designer. He takes notes of the character of the goods to be shown and then creates his window design. All the accessories calculated to emphasize the quality of the goods are made ready under his direction. Then the window is made up after his design. Perhaps the first design he makes is unsuited to the purpose. He changes his whole plan and makes a new design in which the defects of the first one are done away with.

These handsome windows, we may see every day, are real expressions of genius and cost the creators a great deal of thought and physical energy. There is a purpose in these windows, and that purpose is to make the best showing possible of the goods on exhibition. The merchant desires to attract trade, and to do that he finds it essential to present his goods in the best manner possible.

As far as it lies within his power to do so, the merchant who does his own window trimming should copy the merchant who finds it profitable to keep a large force of men to exercise their genius in displaying his goods.

No business is so safe and substantial as that founded on satisfied customers. Advise customers to buy goods that will give them the full worth of their money.

From Germany we bought in 1907 something over $26,000,000 in excess of what we bought in 1906. The exact figures are, for 1907, $161,544,552; for 1906, $135,142,996.

In 1890 the banking resources of the world were estimated to be $15,895,000,000. In 1907 the banking resources of the United States alone are estimated to be $15,000,000,000.

During the nine months ended September, 1906, 4,184,181 dozen eggs, valued at $865,437, were exported from the United States, against 2,160,339 dozen exported during the same period in 1905.

Without the best system the most solid commercial structures will fail. No system is safe unless it gets for a merchant all of his just profits, and expansion without such a system spells failure.

The national banks have returned to the treasury $30,000,000 of government money. When the call was made June 12 for July 10 the banks held $171,000,000 government money; now they hold $141,000,000.

One thing, at least, the United States has done in the Phillippines with which it will be hard for any one to find fault: it has wrought a physical housecleaning. Manila, for the first time in its history, has been six months without a single case of infectious disease.

Advertising is often a waste of money, for space or printing costs. Whenever you advertise be sure that you fill the space with matter that will count. Never leave out the argument, and always quote prices. It isn't enough to merely say an article is cheap.

In the reduction by the government of expenses for transportation of mails the Santa Fe already suffers an annual loss of $20,000 by the taking off of one car. The Harriman lines are similarly affected. It is estimated that the total saving for the year to the government will be $200,000.

The fellow who loafs on his employer's time just because he isn't watched is in all essential aspects as dishonest as if he filched his money outright, for he is very plainly getting money under false pretenses—for labor which he does not perform. Why does hay become heated and sweat? The cells in hay continue to live and breathe for some time after it is cut, and they alone, in a close mow heat the hay to a temperature of 132 degrees Fahrenheit. Added to this is the heat from the microscopic spores of fungi which continue to grow on the blades of hay during its fermentation, the heat created by the development of the hay seeds and the heat of the sun upon the roof.

ADVERTISING HELPS.

Make Your Heading Pithy and Snappy: Also Your Reading Matter

An advertising man is called upon to advise on all questions, says Louis Deuble in the Cincinnati Jobber. Recently a wealthy family in my home city gave me an order for an epitaph on a costly granite shaft, to be placed over the grave of a favored son who died in a foreign country. Of course I said something nice, which pleased them immensely.

Advertising for a grocer is not out of my line, but is most interesting to me. What should be the selling points or argument in a grocer's ad.? First create a desire by describing quality, constituents, careful production, strength, flavor or purity of what you offer for sale.

The selling points are lasting taste, lowness in price considering quality, and the satisfaction which is evidenced by people generally in purchasing. Economy and price should clinch the sale. So make your advertisements accordingly. Give prominence to the name of the article as a catch-line for your advertisement.

What size advertisement should a grocer use? This depends on his business and what he wants to spend. The more he advertises the larger grows his business every time. I will say, without the least fear of equivocation, that the grocer has a better opportunity for making money and increasing his business through advertising means than any other dealer. He carries staples or commodities which people must use. A man will put off buying a suit and a woman a dress or other wearable from time to time, but people must buy coffee, sugar, tea, soap, butter, molasses, and what not.

What's to prevent one grocer getting the most of the town trade? He only needs to advertise—ask, invite, insist on people trying his store for quality and price, and sticking to this preaching and coaxing. A three-inch advertisement is fairly good, a five-inch single column better. A small ad. could be run Monday, a double space ad. Tuesday, a small ad. Wednesday and Thursday, and a large ad. Friday for Saturady's trade. A small ad., say three or four inches, should advertise only one article and have but one catch-line in a good gothic or Devinne of large point. A six-inch or larger ad. should have a main catch-line at the top and a medium-point line in the center, with the address in smaller type.

Let your advertisements talk to women. They buy practically everything. Don't advertise anything but good quality. Maintain a certain dignity as to quality in your advertisements. Prices should be displayed fairly large, for they sell your products. Some women (and men, as well) will walk three blocks out of their way to buy a pound of coffee at three cents off regular price. A grocer should advertise every day, whether large or small ads. He should change his reading matter every day.

Write your catch-line and make your heading pithy, snappy and let your reading matter follow in the same style. Don't be humorous or witty—you are selling groceries, not jokes. Better write a story book on humor if you want circulation—but keep it apart from your advertising.

A local grocer for whom I prepared a series of advertisements on coffee some time ago recalls my attention to the increased demand for this article, and I will relate his experience in one line only. He made a specialty of coffee and advertised it with his other goods, but did not experience specially attractive results. He requested my advice. I read up on coffee and learned that good coffee is beneficial to the human body and contains a nerve stimulant—caffein. I also learned that certain coffees were injurious if not properly blended.

I prepared a series of advertisements for him, starting with the story as to the growing of the coffee plant, how carefully the berry was cultivated and how cleanly it was cared for when ready to market The series of ads. simply educated the people as to good coffee and why it should be preferred to inferior brands. The ads. were coffee and nothing but coffee. These ads. were run one each week and nicely displayed. He told me a week ago when I visited his store that he was selling coffee to more than one hundred families more than he ever did before and that only that brand of coffee was used by these families, and that he was building up a separate business on coffee and high-grade teas. This simply shows what can be accomplished when you do not scatter your shot. Purity, fair price, liberal assortment and freshness of products or staples are essential in selling groceries, and they should receive attention in your advertisements.

THE NEW COMERS.

The new people in town are among the easiest to make your customers. They are entirely unprejudiced. They want to buy some of your kind of goods and they don't know who runs the best grocery store. You can get them to come into your store if you set about it, and then if they don't come again it's nobody's fault but your own. The best scheme for systematic working of that sort of trade is to have a little folder printed and kept on hand ready to mail to new families as soon as they arrive in town. Make it plain and attractive, well printed, and simply an announcement of your desire to serve them, expressing your appreciation of the favor of their patronage Such a simple invitation to your store will usually be accepted.

T. H. Elliott, manager of the Selma Fruit Company, has invented a new raisin seeder that he says is not an infrigment in any way upon any other patent in existence and does not resemble any seeder now in use. Mr. Elliott it is reported expects to install several of his machines for this season's work.

It is bound to surprise the prudent housewife when she orders ketchup that has always shown a delicious red color, to find it strongly tinged with green, but when she realizes that it is tomatoes and not dye that is being served her, perhaps she will be willing to accept it. Peas in their natural state may not look as attractive as when nicely greened with copper sulphate, but they have all the flavor and for more nutrition than formerly. Corn may be yellow rather than delicate white, yet it has the flavor of the field and the sweet juices nature gave it rather than the bleach of commerce and the artificial sweetening added by the packer. Getting back to nature may seem strange for a while, but it is decidedly invigorating to the palate and to the trade alike.

President Charles A. Sweigert of the Board of Police Commissioners, says: "Saloonmen can now live as American citizens; they can conduct their places as such; they may buy their liquor and their cigars from whom they please while the present commission is in power. Men who conduct 'straight' saloons will not be affected by the change of administration."

Items of Interests To the Trade.

Hollister.—Carpenters were at work on Tuesday removing the building staging from the Granger's Union store, just sixteen months from the date of the big cuckoo earthquake. As the good sister said at the camp-meeting, "thank God for that." This building which now covers a whole half block of land is now receiving the final touches at the hands of the carpenters and painters and in a few days not a scar or mark will remain to remind anybody of the great shake that left the former building a huge pile of bricks and mortar. The building is planned generally on the lines of the old building but not so high and has a frontage of seventy additional feet. The structure is solidly braced with wood and iron pillars. The main front walls are of braced timbers veneered with buff pressed brick, ornamented with galvanized iron cornice.

The entire lower floor is occupied by the Grangers Union for business purposes. The show windows extend from the depth of the lot on Sixth st. around San Benito to Brown alley, there being one hundred and seventy-five feet of plate glass, for display purposes. On Sixth street a large brick addition has been added for the display of buggies and wagons. The office occupies a commanding position in the center of the lower floor, and is equipped with every convenience for the proper transaction of business.

The building as it stands today represents an outlay of forty thousand dollars, which taken into connection with the immense loss caused by the shake, shows what energy and business spirit can accomplish, even when under a tremendous handicap.

Madera.—The Madera Rochdale store has installed a new slicing machine which makes the slicing of meats for sandwiches, chipped beef, in fact any thing that you want to slice, far less difficult than by the use of a carving knife, no matter how keen the knife may be, and the meats are all cut in slices of uniform thickness. Must have been an "Enterprise."

Berkeley.—Fire in the grocery of H. Howe at 2936 Ellsworth street damaged the stock and building to the amount of $500.

Acampo.—A. H. Bull, has purchased the business of J. H. Rhodes. The name of the new firm will be J. H. Rhodes & Co. They will carry on a general merchandise business.

Ukiah.—Always up with the times, the C. Hofman Company department store has added another modern feature to its already up-to-date equipment. The south front of the grocery department has been furnished with new shelving and patent containers for cakes, sugar, coffee, rice, etc, have been put in. These, while protecting the groceries from dust and moisure, have glass fronts which allow a handsome display to be made. Louis Hofman, the genial head of the grocery department, is very proud of the new arrangement and his many patrons appreciate its conveniences.

Truckee.—Last week a deal was consummated in which the Sassarini Bros. purchased two lots from Mr. Guisti, located on River street, west of Bridge. The deal has been pending for several days.

The Sassarini Brothers purchased these lots for the purpose of erecting a one-story building to be used for a retail and wholesale grocery store. They entered into the grocery business some six months ago, and they have prospered to such an extent that they are forced to erect a building exclusively for this purpose.

All this week they have had men at work excavating for the basement. The building will made entirely of stone and will be fire proof. The new place will be just one story high. They hope to have the building completed and ready for occupancy by the middle of October. They expect to have one of the largest stores, conducted exclusively for groceries in Nevada county.

Santa Cruz.—C. E. Hoffman and family, formerly of Fresno, have taken up their residence in this city. Mr. Hoffman will start a tea and coffee emporium and is only awaiting a suitable location to commence business operations.

Mill Valley.--The Tamalpais grocery Company is out in a card announcing that its Mill Valley store is not for sale. The sale of the stores belonging to the company at Larkspur and Corte Madera gave rise to the rumor that the Mill Valley establishment was also to pass into other hands, but that is now authoritatively denied.

Hollister.—Edward H. Butts, has purchased an interest in the Nolte Company Grocery. The young men composing this firm are all hustlers and are rapidly building up a good business.

South San Francisco.—H. Gaerdes, proprietor of the Baden Cash Store, has been kept very busy during the past two weeks in moving the merchandise from his old store on Grand Avenue to the new, spacious and modern storeroom next door. Mr. Gaerdes says there is nothing in his line too good for South City people, and has endeavored to make his new establishment first class in every respect. The store room is 50x80 feet in dimensions, and is fronted with three large plate glass window show-windows. At the two front entrances the floor is finished with beautiful inlaid mosaic work. A new cement side walk is to be laid along the front of Mr. Gaerde's property in the near future. A modern awning will also be put up. A large store-room is compactly filled with all kinds of general household goods, such as groceries, canned goods, wines and liquors, cooking utensils, garden tools, candies and nuts, in fact, everything pertaining to a modern grocery establishment.

Mr. Gaerdes deserves great credit for this extensive improvements, which shows that he has faith in the future prospects of South City.

Clovis:—Two weeks ago fire put J. E. Goode in the road with a small part of his fine stock of general merchandise—his buildings a pile of ashes. The following morning John had lumber on the old site and a number of men at work building a temporary shelter for his goods, and he was serving customers with the same careful attention. Immediately the building was finished he got busy on a larger building, this he now occupies, it is 24x45 and will be used until his new brick is built on the corner lot.

Boulder Creek.—The marriage of Lee C. Hayes, the popular groceryman with O. M. Williams, and Mrs. Agnes Wright a former teacher in our public school and now principal of the San Vicente school is to take place at the Presbyterian parsonage this Sunday afternoon.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW ALCAZAR.

The New Alcazar stock company has scored a great success all of this week in Augustus Thomas' great comedy "The Other Girl." Next week the bill is "Genessee of the Mills," which is a dramatization of Marah Ellis Ryan's great novel "Told in the Hils."

IDORA PARK.

(Oakland)

The brightest and funniest of Comic Operas, "Ship Ahoy" with a company of sixty people is now playing at this house. The caste includes Ferris Hartman, Edith Mason, Wallace Brownlow, Tom Persee and a number of others, with Paul Steindorf as musical director. The Alameda County Exposition and Carnival is also a source of great attraction at the present time. To reach this popular amusement center from this city, take the Berkeley Key Route, via 55th st.

CHUTES THEATRE.

The Milan Opera Co. is now the attraction and during the current week "Traviata," "La Boheme," "La Tosca," "Cavalleria" and "Pagliacci" have been played to well filled houses. It is unfortunate that such a splendid company should be forced to play at such a distance from the center of things.

CENTRAL.

This great home of melodrama has held big houses all this week with the spectacular Owen Davis play "The Gamblers' Daughter." Next week the splendid melodrama "Ruled Off The Turf" will be the bill.

NOVELTY THEATRE.

"The Three of Us" has been the bill for this week. The houses have been very good and the play takes well. Beginning Sunday night, Louis James is billed to appear in the "Merry Wives of Windsow," as "Falstaff."

PRINCESS THEATRE.

This new home of vaudeville is meeting with much success, owing to the high class of performances offered the amusement seeking public. The house is class A in every particular and is well worth a visit.

VAN NESS THEATRE.

"Salomy Jane" is the bill for this week and next. Olga Nethersole is billed to follow in "The Awakening," "Carmen," "Second Mrs. Tanqueray," and "Camille."

COLISEUM.

This great rink has been open to the public for several weeks, after a thorough renovation, and the fact that the society skaters have arranged to meet there during the winter season, instead of elsewhere as previously, is evidence that the excellence of this rink is recognized by all concerned.

The Western Skating Association is now holding a series of races for the championship of the world. The first races were held on Tuesday evening of this week and other heats will follow in rapid succession.

A GROWING FIRM.

The success which has attended the efforts of Messrs S. M. Phillips & Co., of Sacramento, who are becoming very important factors in the wholesale rice trade throughout the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys, has encouraged them to such a degree, that they are now completing arrangements to build a warehouse in Los Angeles, and establish there a branch of their large and lucrative business.

The progress of this young jobbing house has been brought about through hard work, combined with square dealing and th effort to please customers. Mr. Phillips arrived in Sacramento several years ago, totally unknown and has built up in a few short years a business which is the envy of many of his old competitors.

DIAMOND MATCH PROJECT.

The Diamond Match Co., of Chico, will in the very near future undertake one of the biggest fire protection projects ever attempted in this part of the West. The company has 178,000 acres of choice timber in Butte County. and it proposes to run fire lines around the entire wooded district, and then subdivide the holding by lines laid out in checkerboard fashion. A patrol system will then be established. A slight conception of the magnitude of the job may be gained when it is understood the fire lines will be 150 feet wide. The company will take no chances. The timber possessions of the match company are exceedingly valuable, and it would entail a loss of millions if a disastrous conflagration should occur.

The illustration shows our double mill, No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only. Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

Bottlers Now Help.

Confer With Retailers and Then Send Out Committees.

ADMIT JUSTICE OF CLAIMS.

Beer Men Will Help Grocers Get a Profit on Their Product.

Six weeks of continuous effort have almost brought the time when the grocers can be sure of having their profits on beer protected.

On Monday evening, Sept. 30th, at the request of the Associted Retail Grocers, 18 of the leading bottlers of San Francisco gathered at 522 Gough street near Hayes. They were called together and met as individulas and not as an Association.

Among the representatives of the Associated Retail Grocers present were John W. King, Geo. B. Doyle, Frank W. Connolly, Jesse M Trask, H. Wolking, J. M. Meyer, James S. Irvine and A. H. Powers.

The conference that ensued was full of interest. Mr. Powers explained that when the chairman of the bottlers spoke of the "demands" of the grocers, he was in error. The grocers had not demanded anything. They merely came to tell the Bottlers that they had to be sure of a profit if they were to keep in business and pay their bills.

Mr. Powers pointed out that if any bottlers put a 2 for 25c. price on their beer, the grocers would gladly pay the prevailing prices—which would insure good profits for the bottlers—and could not afford to handle a 10c. beer even of it were offered them at 75c. The reason they would not afford to handle the 10c beer at 75c was that the profit would be only 45c per dozen and that as soon as the movement for better profits was disrupted

Grocers' Theatre Party

The Boston Club Preparing for a Big Time on October 29th.

The Boston Club, which has been organized by men who intend to attend the National Grocers Convention at Boston in May, 1908, has decided to give a theatre party at the Alcazar Theatre on Oct. 29th, having leased the entire house for that occasion. This will be the first function by which they propose to raise funds that will enable the San Francisco delegation to maintain proper headquarters and carry on the campaign towards making the matter of having manufacturers maintain prices, a national policy.

Prepare a Souvenir Program.

Jesse M. Trask, Vice-President of the Associated Retail Grocers, and Frank B. Connolly, Secretary of both the local and state associations, are members of the club and have been appointed a committee to prepare a souvenir programme of the occasion. Already they have secured considerable advertising from firms who are always pleased to assist in anything that they feel is of benefit and advantage to the grocery trade.

There will be a very large issue of this programme, since it is the entention of the projectors of the club to mail the programme to all grocers both in San Francisco and on the other side of the bay, whom they think would be interested in the theatre party.

The play for the benefit night has not yet been decided upon. The committee has several different plays under consideration. Their decision will be announced later.

George B. Doyle, Haight and Cole.
Gus Lehrke, 627 Tennessee Sts.
Antone Zeitich, 1995 Union St.

The above officers were elected at the general meeting of the Associated Retail Grocers of S. F. held on Thursday evening, Sept. 26th. at Veteran's Hall, 431 Duboce Ave.

Never before, in the history of local grocery association work have so many large factors been drawn together in one Common purpose, that is: the welfare of the grocery trade.

The active co-operation of such men as those named above means that many of the abuses now interfering with the profitable conduct of the grocery business will be eliminated and a vastly more friendly spirit engendered among competitors.

The meeting was called to order at 8:45 o'clock.

Secretary Connolly read the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved as read.

Secretary Connolly Reports.

Then came the Secretary's annual report:

Secretary Connolly reported 88 members secured since the first of the year. He reported four laws having been secured at the last session of the legislature, the most important being those to extend the time in which an open book account becomes outlawed to four years instead of two, and a paragraph in the pure food law which makes the manufacturer responsible for the purity of goods rather than the retail dealer. He further stated that at the recent state convention of grocers held at Sacramento the San Francisco organization was honored by having its president, George B. Doyle, made president of the State Grocer's association, and that San Francisco was chosen as the place for the next convention to be held in September, 1908.

Field Secretary Advises.

Field Secretary Powers then made his annual report, told of progress made and what could be accomplished during the ensuing year.

Assistant Secretary Harrison Talks.

Assistant Secretary Carl Harrison told of his efforts during the post few weeks and of the splendid results he had secured by simply showing the grocers the right road for them to travel.

Reports of Delegates.

Many of the delegates to the State Grocers Convention at Sacramento made reports among them being Messrs Trask, Young, Harrison and King.

Tells of New York Grocers.

Wm. M. Bartsch, the well known Pan Handle grocer, who had just returned from a two months Eastern trip, told of the meagre profits the Eastern grocers work for. He promised to give the Association a detailed statement of condition as he found them, when next the organization meets.

By-law Amendments.

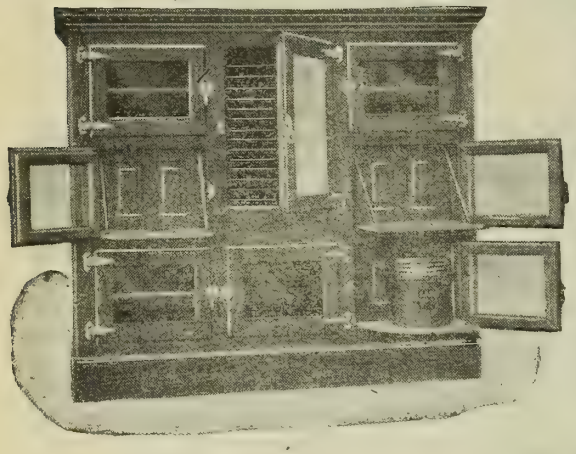
Mr. King gave notice that at the next regular meeting of the Associated Retail Grocers he would move to amend the By-Laws so as make the Board of Directors fifteen instead of nine as at present.

Big Merchant Shows Interest.

Mr. Artter of the L. D. McLean Co. received very flattering recognition of his standing as a grocer. Mr. Doyle, Mr. Connolly and several other members spoke with much enthusiasm of Mr. Artter's business ability and capacity and urged Mr. Artter to allow his name to be submitted for the Board of Directors. Mr. Artter explained that the exigencies of establishing a new business would require all his spare time but promised to get into the harness actively when the time for the next election arrived.

J. M. Hanley Speaks.

J. M. Hanley of Sutter and Pierce was warmly welcomed, Though not a member, Mr. Hanley had done valuable work among his neighbors in the movement to secure better profits on bottled beer. President Doyle, from the chair, spoke in appreciation of this and assured Mr. Hanley that he would always welcome and that the Associated Retail Grocers would be glad to have him as a member when he should decide to join.



New Officers Seated.

After all the excitement of nominations and election had subsided, Mr. Geo. B. Doyle the retiring President made a few well chosen remarks; congratulating the organization upon the splendid men chosen to guide the destinies of the organization during, the ensuing year. Mr. Doyle thanked the membership for their kindly treatment of himself and the other officers who had served with him during the strenuous past 12 months. Mr. Doyle then appointed Messrs Burmester and Deitrich to escort the new President Mr. John W. King to the chair.

Mr. King Tells Plans.

..After the applause had subsided Mr. King arose and thanked the grocers for their evidence of faith in himself and then said: "Gentlemen, this is not a time for talk—rather it is a time for action. The new Board of Directors together with myself propose to do, less talking and more acting, and suiting the action to the word I will say no more at this time." Mr. King made good on his promise, because, regardless of the lateness, of the hour, as soon as the general meeting adjoined he called the new Board of Directors together and they got right down to work immediately. It was well after eleven o'clock when the meeting broke up.

FAKE THEIR WEIGHTS.

Arizona Dealers Tell of the Tricks of a Pretended Wholesale House Located in This City.

That the operations of Messrs Parks Bros., of 372 5th St. this city, are extremely widespread, was evidenced by the receipt of a letter by the "Advocate" this week, sent by Messrs Birchett Bros. of Tempe Arizona. Their Mr. Jos. T. Birchett in the course of his letter says:

"I have been reading about the operations of Parks Bros. recently, and wish to state that they have been operating throughout this country for the last two or three years and have been selling to the retail trade.

"As far as I know they do not attempt to sell dealers, but confine their operations principally to the farmers.

"I had an opportunity to test their weights in two instances, and found them short two pounds on a twenty five pound sack of rice and two pounds on a small drum of coffee. They sell principally light stuff on which there is a good margin of profit and also a good opportunity to fake the purchaser—such goods as bulk tea, coffee, spices, extracts. etc., being their principal articles.

"We naturally feel that they do us an injustice as they get cash and furnish the goods on which there is a good profit and we furnished the staple articles on credit!

It will be noted that these people do not sell to dealers, but nevertheless, their address in the San Francisco telephone directory, reads as below:

Temporary 3536—Parks Bros., Wholesale grocers, 372 5th St.

In addition to this there are conspicuous signs on the building, calling attention to the fact that the firm doing business at this address is in the wholesale grocery business.

The charge of short weights, which is very plainly stated, shows the unscrupulous methods adopted by this firm in order to get the best of the retail dealer, who is always ready and willing to help the farmers over the periods between crops when money is scarce. We have now heard of the operations of this firm in the states of Oregon, Washington, California and Arizona, and it seems as though some action should be taken to bring about a correction of the conditions as they exist.

We invite correspondence in this matter, and hope that other readers of the "Advocate" who have suffered from the unfair competition of the firm under discussion, will write and tell us about. The more merchants who complain, the more likely it is that we will be able to do something. In union there is strength. The various state associations are now waiting developments in this Parks Bros. matter.

Let us hear from all interested parties.

A NEW DEPARTMENT.

We are now perfecting arrangements with several of the Commercial Travelers organizations, whereby several columns of each week's issue will be devoted to the doings of the "Knights of the Grip."

Since the fire, these organizations have not received their proper attention from the "Advocate" and we now hasten to make up for lost time. We believe that this department will be of great interest to our readers, since it will keep them posted as to the movement of their friends—the jobber's salesmen.

BOTTLERS NOW HELP.

the 75c price would be withdrawn and the price would return to 95c and $1. again.

Bottler's Profits Endangered.

He further pointed out that of the bottlers refused to fix a 2 for 25c price, that the grocers would have to unite in selling beers that cost 90c or less. This would take the profits away from the bottlers who were now getting 95c and $1 for their goods but would have to lower their prices to keep their trade.

John W. King, president of the Association, said that he would not sell beer for 10c. and was getting 2 for 25c for what he sold but that he had lost 60 per cent of his beer business. He felt that it was hurting his grocery sales to have people go away believing he was charging more than his neighbors for beer. He would throw out any beer that the bottlers allowed to be sold for 10c and substitute any brand of 2 for 25c beer.

J. S. Irvine of Irvine Bros. agreed in all that Mr. King had said. He was going to handle the beer that paid a profit.

Geo. B. Doyle the recently retired president spoke at length of the necessity for a proper margin. He insisted that the grocers were entitled to consideration from the bottlers both because of the money the Retailers invested in beer and for their work in distributing it and demanded that the bottlers take prompt action.

Local Beers Lose Business.

Jesse M. Trask of Schmidt & Trask made a very logical, quiet but forceful address. His firm he explained, had once sold considerable local beer. They had cut it out and were handling only Northern beers at 2 for 25. because the local beers were being sold for 10c on all sides and Mr. Trask did not consider it good business to jeopardise his trade and profits on Northern beers by handling the local beers at 10c or to hurt his standing with his customers by asking 2 for 25c for local beers that they could buy in other places for less.

Mr. Trask called on the bottlers for an expression of opinion.

Several of the bottlers expressed themselves vigerously. Among the speakers were John Rapp the 'Rainer" man, Geo. Alpers, "Tacoma", E. Remensberger "Yosemite" and A. Lang, "Frederickburg." These gentlemen all expressed the belief that the grocers should be protected in a 2 for 25c price. They all stated however, that they were afraid it would cause too much trouble if it were done.

Trouble In The Aair.

The discussion that followed showed that it would cause even more trouble if it were not done.

The grocers retired at this juncture.

The bottlers then began a discussion among themselves

It was not until nearly midnight that they quit.

It was then found that every man present had become convinced that it would be profitable to protect a 2 for 25c price. Various men agreed to see the bottlers not represented at the meeting and show them the necessity of taking the step, too.

When the bottlers have been thoroughly canvassed again, another meeting will be held.

It had been the intention of the Associated Retail Grocers to call a mass meeting for Sunday to take definite action. Owing to the steps taken by the bottlers to help secure the ends desired it was decided to postpone this meeting till a later date.

INSURANCE RATES REDUCED.

The Board of Fire Underwriters of the Pacific has extended its reduction for the use of coinsurance to a number of additional towns which have been found to justify the change. The reduction is 15 per cent on brick buildings for 80 per cent coinsurance and 20 per cent for 90 per cent. On contents the reduction is 10 per cent for 80 and 15 per cent for 90. On frame buildings and stocks other than special hazards or public warehouses the reduction is 10 per cent for 90 per cent coinsurance. This applies to Anaconda and Great Falls, Mont.; Provo, Utah Santa Barbara, Pasadena, San Diego, San Bernardino, Chico, Santa Rosa and Watsonville, in California, and Reno, Nev.

SUGAR.

The local market is in a state of demoralization and there is no telling which way it will go. There was a decline of 10 points on the 28th, as noted in our price list column.

Conditions are such that grocers had best buy only from hand to mouth. The refineries are obviously fighting between themselves once more.

view the raw sugar market has remained unchanged.

It is now sufficiently evident that the Cuba crop will mature later than usual this season and amount to less than las tyear's crop, but is it too early yet for valuable estimates. More rain is wanted constantly at this than Cuba is receiving thus for.

At the close sugars are offered more freely and buyers are inclined to hold off.

Refined.—Steadness has characterized the local market for refined sugars throughout the week.

The close is rather less active without special indications of immediate change in prices.

COFFEE.

New York, Sept. 26.—Willett-Gray report:

The consuming trade is buying as little Coffee as possible, but this policy insures a very sound market and this. together with continued unfavorable conditions for the growing crop, will likely bring a change of views concerning the market, with interior dealers so sparingly supplied.

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co., say under date of Sept. 30.

The market on all grades shows no change since our last report. Mills are still holding firm for full prices on Fancy Heads and cannot book orders for immediate shipment.

Stocks of Domestic Japan are practically exhausted; the trade will therefore have to use the unpolished rice growned and milled in the Hawaiian Islands in place of Domestic Japans. This rice, while unattractive to the eye, cooks up well and has given satisfaction to all of our trade who have used same. We look for a large quantity of this rice to be sold within the next six weeks as price on this grade will be about 50c a bag lower than Imported. We do not look for any New Crop Japan before the 15th of November, probably later.

New York, Sept. 24th, 1907.—Dan Talmage's Son's report:

A good demand prevails. Prices are well sustained in sympathy with reports from primary points.

At New Orleans, market is strong with business restricted account of light offerings. Rains have interfered with the harvest and receipts of Rough Rice have been so scanty that several mills have had to shut down for want of supplies. In the Interior Southwest Louisiana and Texas demand has been active and offerings sold readily at full prices. Rough Rice is coming in slowly account of delayed harvest by rain.

DRIED FRUITS.

The principal activity in the general list of cured fruits during the week has been in apples. California evaporated apples are the firmest thing on the list at the moment and quotations have been going up at a startling rate. There are very few to be had at any price at the moment we understand and heavy sales have been made. This year's output of evaporated apples in California is estimated by one handler at 2,000 tons. The past two seasons have been in the neighborhood of 2,500 tons. Eastern evaporated apples are firm and high, and an un-heard-of condition prevails in California apples this year in that shipments have been made to various points in the middle west and even as far as the Atlantic seaboard. California evaporated apples usually are taken for local and enarby consumption. Quotations have been advanced to the basis of 10¼@10½ for choice.

Peaches are slightly weaker with very little new business passing. The fancy grade hold about as before, but choice and extra choice are a fraction off. There are very few standards to be had, hence values for this grade rule a little better than the usual differential. Low grades of pears are not held quite so firmly and are a fraction lower. Figs remain steady so far as actual quotations are concerned some packers having nominal quotations, however, above figures we give, which are, we understand, subject to shading to about the market generally is quiet so far as ne w business is concerned. Shipping is under way, and with eastern markets bare of fruit of all kinds, it would seem as if all that California has to offer should go into consumption at good values within the next few months.

FIGS.

Fresno.—Figs are the most active article on the local dried fruit list. They are very firm, and the market is considered as very stiff, throughout the East as well as here. Between three and five cars of the packed article are going out every day now from Fresno, and many more could be handled on the market if they could be packed more rapidly. The three to five cars goining out represent from 60 to 100 tons per day, which is not a very inconsiderable amount.

WALNUTS.

Los Angeles.—Wholesale dealers and jobbers are confirming their orders on the walnut growers of this State for their crops at the increased price of 15c a pound. This also confirms the fact that the retail consumer will have to pay at least 25c a pound for them. J. C. Richardson of the firm of Richardson & Holmes, in speaking of the increase declared that it is a fair one. "According to the reports received from the foreign producing fields," he says, "the California growers will have the entire field to themselves during the Thanksgiving season, and even perhaps throughout the holiday period, because of the lateness of the French and Italian crops. Besides this there is a crop shortage in this State, which would have put up the price a trifle."

CANNED GOODS.

Packing is hardly yet completed on all fruit lines and it is not possible for the larger packers to state definitely just where they stand, but most have a pretty good idea now. Packing will be over shortly, however. The Association has shaken up its price list somewhat and finds a few lines to quote which had been previously withdrawn. As to deliveries, the Association expects to deliver in full practically all special extras and No. 3 extras, extra lemon clings and extra standard lemon clings, but will be short on standard fruit. It is hard to say as to the lower grades as yet, but gallon table fruits look like a full delivery.

The Central California Canneries has just issued a statement of deliveries and will make 100 per cent delivery on all apricots except 2½ extras, standards, seconds, water and No. 8 pie, which will be 75 to 80 per cent, and 100 per cent on all grades of blackberries, Royal Ann, black and white cherries, Bartlett pears, sliced White Heath peaches, raspberries and strawberries, and probably grapes. On Yellow Free peaches 2½ and special extras will be 65 per cent delivery, No. 8 extras 80 per cent, No. 8 extra standards 90 per cent, 2½ extra standards and standards, No. 8 standards, No. 2½ seconds, and No. 8 pie, unpeeled, 75 per cent; other grades 100 per cent. Lemon cling and White Heath peaches will be 100 per cent except 2½ extra standards and standards, which will be 75 to 85 per cent, and 2½ second Fhite Heath 75 per cent. Plums, 100 per cent on all grades and varieties except 2½ seconds, 85 per cent, and 2½ standards, 75 per cent. The Central has also issued a revised price list on such goods as it has left to offer which shows some advances over previous quoations The items advanced, which are on 2½s mostly from 10c@15c are as follows: 2½ standard Royal Ann cherries, $2.65 2½ second Bartlett pears, $1.65 and 2½ pie, peeled, $1.35; Lemon cling peaches, No. 3 extras, $3.15; 2½ special extras, $2.90; 2½ seconds, $1.80; 2½ water, $1.65; No. 8 pie, peeled, $4.50; sliced Lemon clings, No. 8 extras, $7.50; No. 8 pie blackberries, $4.50; strawberries, No. 2½ extra standards, $2.85; No. 2½ standards, $2.75; 2½ seconds, $2.50. Other lines left to offer are the same as opening prices except grapes, which are 15 cents a dozen advance.

The total pack of fruits for California this year will, beyond a doubt, be somewhat in excess of last year's pack but not so large as would have been the case had the fruit not ripened so largely at one time. One large packer expects as much as 25 per cent over last season's pack of fruits for his company, but this will not be the average for all packers. Tomatoes have not been coming in to the canneries as liberally as canners have wished, and it looks as if the season might be late and short. If this is the case values will go up with those who have any to offer. The eastern tomato market retains about the same position as for the past some time, packers not being active sellers.

CANNED CORN.

New York, Sept. 27.—The certainty that deliveries out of the Maine and New York State packs will be decidedly shrot and the unfavorable advices from the South and West have revived buying interest in spot corn. Frost is reported in some sections of this State and in Maine, which will further curtail the output. In the South, it is said, the pack will be light at best. The West, which was counted upon to offset to an extent the shortage elsewhere, now reports less promising prospects. Up to the end of last week the outlook for a large pack in that part of the country was bright, but the subsequent rain, followed by cold weather, is said to have materially changed conditions there.

ASPARAGUS.

Sacramento.—It is evident that the high water in the down river island districts did not, as had been feared, kill the asparagus beds. Those that have emerged from the water are showing decided signs of life and most of the asparagus planted year before last is expected to "come through" although that planted last season is dead secure all possible of this year's crop. Their going into the field early, even before the beans had been cut, and offering as high as $3.50 per 100 to start, was what has caused the remarkable boom. The price quickly jumped to $3.75, then to $4, to $4.50 to $4.75; finally one Cahmarillo rancher let his crop go at $4.90, and still another got $4.95, which is ranging pretty near the $5 mark. When it is considered that limas can be grown and sold at a good profit for $3 per 100, it will be readily seen that everything is this year going the way of the grower. Six cents per pound at the thresher is fully expected by some, and many will not doubt hold out for this pretty figure. The threshers in the county have withdrawn temporarily from most fields, as the vines are not drying fast enough for threshing, and there has as yet been no east wind to aid in the dryin. In another week every machine in the county will be humming on beans, with a prospect of a yield of well over $500.000 bags. Last year there were nearly 700,000 bags, and some estimates are as high as that figure for this year.

ROLLED OATS.

Philadelphia.—Since rolled oats have reopened the market has advanced to a point far ahead of any basis ruling for many years. All millers withdrew prices several weeks ago, as reported at the time, and reopened again about September 15th with a price of $6.85 per barrel. This price held only for a day or two, and then an advance was made to $7.10, which is the highest price in many years. The oat crop bids fair to be exceedingly short, promising but slightly over half a crop. If this is the case the market will in all probability go higher.

The advertised brands have not yet advanced, and are decidedly below the bulk basis. The brands referred to as "advertised brands" stand in a class by themselves, in that they are not affected by advances or declines, being priced at a figure calculated to allow for both. The advance in bulk oats, however, has this time been so exceedingly great that the advertised brands, such as "Quaker" oats, will have to be advanced also, and an advance is expected at any time.

OLIVE OIL.

Oroville.—The olive companies are preparing for the season's run on olive oil and the pickling of olives. The olive crop this season is a very large one and the fruit is of an excellent quality and size.

FARINACEOUS GOODS.

Attention is directed to this department in our price list. Many changes, chiefly advances, having been made in the price of the cereals manufactured by the local mills.

IMPORTED FISH.

New York, Sept. 27—Strohmeyer & Arpe Co. report:

Holland Herrings are in good demand and prices slightly higher.

Scotch Herrings.—In fair demand.

Norway Mackerel.—Are scarce. Catch so far is very poor and prices higher than last season. Demand is very good in spite of the high prices. The fish is running rather small this season.

Irish Mackerel.—Are in fair demand and nice fat fish are rather scarce.

Imported Oil Sardines.—There is no change in the situation. They are scarce as gold and almost unobtainable. In Norway the catch has proved a big failure and prices for good brands of smoked Sardines are sure to go higher, and packers will be unable to make full deliveries on their contracts.

Stockfish.—For the Italian trade shows particularly fine quality this season, and demand is very good. Prices are about the same as last season.

MACKEREL.

Reports from Norway are to the effect that the fishing season is very late with prospects bad and every indication of higher prices.

PACIFIC HERRING.

This fish packed in half barrels is at present out of the local market. About 30 days hence, new pack will be available.

MARTIN'S CHEESE, ETC.

The local market is very firm on this make and advances are predicted. Fancy limberger is on the advance.

LINSEED OIL.

The market in this line is reported to be very firm with a tendency to advance.

Attracting Trade.

Selecting Right Leaders.

A well posted dealer in the grocery line when interviewed recently on the subject of "leaders in the grocery business," commented upon the fact that poor judgment is frequently used by the retail merchant in selecting the article upon which he will make his special prices.

"At the present time," said this merchant, "many retail grocers will be found who are selling canned tomatoes very low, in spite of the fact that they have very little of this commodity on hand, and as soon as this is exhausted they will find it impossible to secure any more at anywhere near the price which they paid for the goods which they now have paid for goods which they now have on hand. Instead of taking advantage of the advanced prices in tomatoes which have occured through the operation of a syndicate which claims to control the visible supply of this commodity, the goods are being offered in some cases at retail at extremely low prices.

If these merchants were to use corn as a leader at the present time they could derive just as much advertising and at the same time would be protected on future sales, for on account of the large pack of corn this year, the price on desirable goods is still low, and when present stocks are exhausted they can be replaced at prices which will enable the dealer to continue to make this article a leader without involving any monetary loss.

The point brought out by this merchant is well taken. There are times in the grocery business when the merchant unfortunately buys canned goods only to find later that the wholesale price has declined and it behooves him therefore when an opportunity such as is offered by the present tomato situation presents itself, to take advantage of the extra profit which he could make by basing his selling price upon the present prices instead of on the prices he paid for the goods.

Courtesy as an Asset.

The cheapest asset a dealer can have is courtesy. It is non-assessable, non-depreciable, and takes up no room. His clerks can add to the capital stock and the profits are infinite. If you haven't got a good supply on hand lay in a stock at once and grow. It's the greatest business fertilizer on the market.

Don't Talk Hard Times.

A large part of prosperity or adversity is purely due to public opinion, and, therefore, the dealer who is known, by word or action, to lead people to believe that times are hard, is the one who is really making times hard by encouraging the thought in the minds of the public, and is, therefore, not only injuring business men in general but himself in particular.

Leaving aside the question of future ill-effects resulting from this habit, there is another feature that this class of tradesmen fail to appreciate, it becomes, or rather growns on a person and they soon fall into the way of complaining, be the trade good or bad.

Attractive Effect in Show Cards.

Some show card writers produce handsome cards by putting a soft, vignetted background behind the lettering in some contrasting color.

This background is irregular or cloud-like in form, the color being heaviest in the central part and gradualy diminishing in intensity to the edges, which fade almost imperceptibly away.

To produce this effect the card maker takes his sheet of card, lays it flat, and places upon it, where the center of the background is to be, a small quantity of "dry color" — red, blue, green or yelow.

Then he takes a small wad of cotton covered with chamois skin and rubs the color into the card, working away from the center with a circular motion, until he has the background shaded to suit him.

The lettering will be best made in black over either of the colors named, and no shading is required.

If the writer is skillful, however, a shading of the letters with the same color as the background, but deeper in tone, will produce a fine appearance.

A petition requesting that the United Railroads start immediately on the work of reconstructing the Pacific-ave. line is being circulated.

Clerk's Corner.

THE WELL-INFORMED SALESMAN.

Men and books are the great educators. The influence begins for most of us after the work of the schoolmaster is done. It is then that the mind is best fitted to absorb knowledge, and he that is receptive to it can easily become what we term a well-informed man. If you have this keen thirst for knowledge it will aid in your success as well.

In salesmanship it is an investment that makes large return. There is not another calling by which men earn bread so full of educational opportunities as this. The work that lies in your path is always and everywhere an educational process. If you had, only an ounce of brains and the faintest desire to use them, you could scarcely help developing through your daily experience into a refined and cultured gentleman. Are you disposed to grasp or neglect these advantages?

As a saleman much is given to you and much will be expected of you. Let us consider, says the American Jeweler. You are in daily contact with all manner of people and have a direct interest in studying their characters. You talk with them and hear their opinions and frequently have occasion to "draw them out" on business matters or on topics relating to art, literature or the home. Many of these persons are apt to be scholarly or accomplished; all are more or less friendly and communicative. Assuredly, it will be your own fault if you do not learn much from them and add to your store of knowledge every day.

To Better Your Condition.

Earn more than your salary.

Don't wait for a raise in salary before working harder. If you do you will never get it.

A clerk has to do more than he is paid for before he can attract attention. Then the increase of wages should come.

Get customers in the habit of asking for you to wait upon them. Many a clerk has gotten enough trade of his own that way to start a business.

Don't expect a vacation in the quiet season if you are not willing to work over time in the busy season.

Every clerk should study his business with the intention of some day becoming a proprietor and managing a business of his own. Of course, if every man did become a proprietor there would presently be no clerks.

Window Dressing.

ART AND SCIENCE OF WINDOW DRESSING.

What the designer aims at in his work of art is to carry out the commercial intent to the fullest possible ex tent. He is not content to make a design that is the expression of art. Something more than a pretty picture is required. He must make a design, which when copied for the display will sell goods.

This idea that the house for which he labors is a mercantile establishment must never be lost sight of. The house wants to sell the news goods they have ordered, and they expect the designer to help them do so with his designs. It matters not to the firm how beautiful a picture the designer may draw the question always comes up, Will it help sell goods."

What the merchant says, in effect to his designer is this: Here is a new line of goods. Make me a design for a window display that will help sell them.

ART AND ETHICS.

Apart from the technique of window dressing, there is an art pure and simple. There is a question of ethics to be considered. Of itself, art has to do with the creation of a beautiful picture in the window display. Any beautiful window display will be attractive. But that is not sufficient. The beauty must be the ispiration of the real purpose for which the window is made beautiful. In the designer creates a beautiful design and makes a beautiful window after that design, he will have an attractive window. But he has lost more than half his opportunity, if he does not give emphatic expression in that window to an underlying purpose and that is calling attention to the particular line of goods offered for sale.

To create a beautiful picture and put the goods for sale in that picture is not good ethics. The true artist, alive to the ethical side of his picture, considers the merchandise first. He lays the foundation of his picture in the goods to be displayed. All the artistic developments of his design starts from the merchandise to be exhibited. The size, form, color and all qualities are given due weight with the artist. The season of the year is not forgotten, either. With all this in his mind the artist proceeds to work out his design. All contracts of form and color, made for art's sake, will be found in his design subordinated to the merchandise itself. Each item in the design is carefully weighed as to its relation to the goods on exhibition. If an illusion is created whereby the goods exhibited are made to appear unnecessarily large, all those accesories which tend to create that effect are changed so as to produce an illusion of an entirely opposite character. It may be that the artist desires to give breadth or length to his exhibit. He strives for that illusion in his design. Or perhaps he wishes to create an effect of ruggedness or delicacy in his exhibit. This he does by the development of his accessories. To heighten or lessen an effect in this way is the work of an artist pure and simple. And a genius in this work can do wonders in the way of creating illusions.

Usually the artist adds to the effect of his picture by taking advantage of the relation of the merchandise shown to the seasons, the time of day, to sentiment, to philosophy, to poetry, to science or any other matter. Thus a man showing coal in his window might have a winter scene for a background. A show of spring hats would look well in a spring setting. Overcoats would show to advantage in a scene suggesting cold weather. Breakfast foods would find in a morning scene an appropriate setting. Candles, coal oil or lamps would need a night scene. And so on through the list of goods that are properly shown in a window.

The effect of this appropriate setting is suggestive. If we see a farm scene, a wheat field, or a mill back of a stack of flour on exhibition the accessary, instead of taking our mind from the merchandise shown, has the contrary effect. It serves to fix it more securely on the flour.

All this belongs to the ethical side of the design. Anything among the accessories to the merchandise on exhibition that is in any way related to it comes within the ethical class of the design.

The novice in window dressing should get this well fixed in his mind so that when he comes to making conceptions for his designs he will have all parts of his picture clearly separted in his mind. He may know in this way wherein lies some minor fault that may easily be remedied, whereas were he not able to separate the artistic from the ethical, he would have a jumble of art in his mind that would give him no end of trouble.

In a mixed window where it is desired to display several varieties of goods, the merchant should select for his display, so far as it is possible to do so, such goods as do not conflict violently so far as their ethical accessories are concerned. At least the goods shown should have some accessories in common. Where the related accessories show a tendency to conflict ethically, those accessories should be avoided and those used liberally that show some relationship in common.

When the window dresser has got the artistic side of his picture well fixed in his mind he should carefully examine all the accessories to see if they are ethically as well as artistically correct. He may find that some of these are artistic so far as color and form go, but they may be remotely related, if related at all to the central idea he wishes to convey. In which case having located the fault, the correction may be easily made.

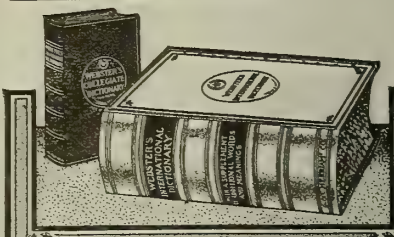
Grocery Notes.

Oroville.—A new firm will open a grocery and fruit store in the McGee building at the corner of Lincoln and Montgomery streets. The members of the firm will be J. R. Westwood and William A. Westwood. The latter will be manager of the business.

Petaluma.—J. W. Hamilton of the local grocer sold his grocery store at cor. of Main and Washington Sts. to Wilson & Smith, who some time ago bought the Neuert & Staats grocery store. They will close the old store and move their stock and fixtures to the store now occupied by Mr. Hamilton.

Hartford.—The announcement by the Horlock-Clow Co., states that the grocery department so long a feature of the store fronting on both Irwin and 7th. Sts., has been discontinued, and that the same has been sold to W. H. Brown & L. G. Nieson, who will open a grocery store in the Vendome bldg. No. 219 and 221 N. Irwin St.



Santa Cruz.—Thomas Flannery has leased the store now occupied by Mr. Wolf, corner Pacific Av. and Elm St., and will move his grocery thereto when the necessary alterations in the building are made. A new front, octagon corner, door being on corner, and glass on Elm St., will be put in Truckee.—The Sassarini grocery building on the south side of the Southern Pacific company's track is nearing completion. The building is of stone and there will be no openings except at the ends. This is the first instance of Italians embarking in the grocery business in Truckee. Several are owners of saloons and one is in the dry goods business.. Sassarini kept a modest stock of groceries on hand last winter, but now feels that the business he carries justifies a building of this kind.

Lincoln.—It is stated or good authority that C. E. Finney has consummated the sale of his grocery business to Clarence Kier and Julius Tofft, two of Lincoln's most trustworthy young men. They will rent the store formerly occupied by the Rochdale company. Mr. Finney will continue in business, but will handle gents furnishing goods, dry goods and boots and shoes exclusively, a branch of the mercantile business that he thoroughly understands.

Modesto.—Modesto is to have a new grocery store—a fancy grocery. It will be conducted in Mrs. Minnie Evan's building on Tenth street, by H. C. Thompson, the Pasadena gentleman who recently purchased the old Mose May place west of Modesto on the river. He is a man of means and is an old-timer in the fancy grocery line.

Redding, Cal.—W. W. Morris is lost to Burney Valley for some time. Saturday Mr. Morris sold out his share of the business of the firm of Gale & Morris, general merchandise dealers, to George J. Grinnell. Mr. Morris was in Redding yesterday on his way to San Francisco. He enters the Dental College today, and when he next returns to Shasta county for a permanent stay it will be as a full-fledged dentist. The price for which Mr. Morris sold out his business was stated by him Sunday to be $5000.

THE CASH BUYER PAYS BILLS OF DEADBEATS.

Those who imagine the would like to be the grocer man and get rich quick are not familiar with the grocery business. Dun's mercantile agency reports show there are 250,000 grocers in the United States and 12,000 on the Pacific Coast. Seventy-five per cent of the whole number fail every year, 22 per cent make a fair living and only 3 per cent are ranked as prosperous business men. How would you like to be the grocer man, after digesting these figures?

The bane of the grocer's life is the deadbeat. The beats are the bane of every business, for that matter. But groceries are sold on so small a margin of profit and there is so much incidental loss, the grocer can ill afford to lose on bad bills. In fact, he cannot afford to lose on that score and he does not, as a rule, for what he loses on bad customers he makes up on good customers—those who pay cash or whose credit is gilt-edged. The grocer may plead "the first law of nature"— self preservation— in thus mulcting his good customers to cover the delinquencies of the deadbeats. There is no other way to make it up, so long as the grocer has bad bills. He must soak the ready-payers with higher prices in order to recoup what he loses through the never-payers. Else he will make shipwreck of business.

The California Retail Grocer's and Merchant's Association, in session at Sacramento, took steps to protect each other against deadbeats. The deadbeats will be blacklisted. They will be refused credit. Where they are responsible and are already owing, they will be sued. There is to be vigorous war against the beats all along the line. This should help the cash buyer and the man who always pays his bills promptly.

The deadbeat is a pest. Every community has him. He manages to keep out of jail, although morally worse than many of those who go to jail. When he buys groceries and merchandise with the deliberate purposes of never paying for them, although he is able to do so, he is a thief, despit the fact that the law does not quite hold him so. If he should enter store and steal the same quantity of goods while the proprieor's back is turned, he would commit no worse crime than when he runs up the bill that he never intends to pay.

The California grocers are doing well to protect the honest public against these dishonest debt-jumpers. The grocers and business men generally should work for the enactment of a state law defining the deliberate refusal to pay a store debt when the debtor is able to pay, as obtaining goods under false pretenses, and providing for the punishment of the guilty accordingly.

Evasion of store debts is an evil not monopolized by poor men by any means. Many rich people are the worst offenders along this line.

The tin can is rightly called American. The first canning process dates back to the United States patent granted to Augustus De Heine in 1810. His method was not successful, but it led to the perfection of that which is in widest use today, by which fruits, vegetables, meats, fish, etc., are sealed in cans, leaving two tiny holes through which the air escapes when the can is heated. They are sealed in turn and the trick is done. Successful canning by this process was accomplished in this country as early as 1825. Soon the tin can was being utilized in important movements. When Dr. Kane's Arctic expedition set out in 1849 it carried canned goods put up in Newark, N. J., and with the gold rush to California these goods began to become staple and necessary. In 1856 a New York milkman perfected the first successful process for condensing and canning milk, and five years later, when the civil war broke out, this product became so popular in the army that his fortune was made. From that time forth the American has left a trail of tin cans in all his marches, whether peaceful or warlike.

These three causes acting together may heat hay that is well packed in a close mow so that there is no circulation of air to carry off the heat, to a temperature of 212 degrees Fahrenheit that at which water boils. Then the hay begins to char; the charcoal so formed absorbs oxygen and the mass grows still hotter. The heat reaches 265 degrees; then the mass blazes. Bran, grain, and silo material may ignite spontaneously if placed under similar conditions. Many barn fires from this cause are reported "cause unknown, the whole barn seemed ablaze at once."—D. S. Mutual Fire Insurance.

Reasons For Such Companies And Advantages Accruing.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA PROGRESS

(Written expressly for the "Advocate" by J. F. Paulding of Los Angeles.)

There are many reasons why we should have a merchants mutual fire insurance company in the State of California. The risks in this State are not subject to the same exposures as they are in the east. There is practically no lightning, little wind, and much less fire used in our buildings. The one feature of lightning which amounts to nothing in this State, is the cause of many losses throughout the eastern states. In a report of an Ohio mutual company giving losses for the year 1906, at least one third of the losses were caused by lightning. This being entirely eliminated, with little or no fire in the summer time, much less in the winter than in the east, coupled with the class of risks to be taken makes the inducements for a merchants mutual very attractive. There is little doubt, but what a merchants mutual can be run on present rates of insurance with only 25 per cent of the amount collected in premiums required to pay losses.

Fire Insurance Commissioners Report.

The report of our State Fire Insurance Commissioner shows that it requires about ⅓ of the premiums collected to meet the fire losses. This leaves ⅔ to meet expenses, provide reserve funds and dividends. There is no business that pays such a profit to my knowledge and when the profits are great it means a well conducted co-operative movement will succeed. The reason for so many failurs in the co-operative store movement are that the profits in the mercantile line are so small that a co-operative movement is not necessary to get goods at what they should be sold for. If a dealer was making 200 per cent in gross profits, the co-operative movements would have succeeded beyond the most fond expectation of the promoters. If the old line companies can meet their losses with ⅓ of their premiums, a mutual company can meet their losses with 25 per cent of their premiums, by refusing the extra hazardous risks. It is therefore safe to say that a mutual company with proper supervision will be able to write insurance at least 25 per cent cheaper than the stock companies. In the first place there will be less money in reserve funds, which will have to lay at times without drawing interest and the management will be more economical, and the business will be gotten for a less expense.

Southern California Merchants Mutual.

The Retail Merchants of Southern California have already organized and incorporated a Merchants Mutual Fre Insurance Company and the State Association should organize the Merchants Mutual Fire Insurance Company of California. There were a few who wished the Southern California Mutual called the Merchants Mutual of California, inasmuch as we were first in the field; but others believed it would be an encreachment of the rights of the State Association, which organization fathered the bill and passed it through the legislature. The State Association should take steps at once to form a State company and exchange business with the Southern California Mutual and a risk somewhat in keeping with the demands of the merchants could be taken. If the Northern merchants are not going to organize a company they should boost the Southern California Mutual and help carry it along until it got on its feet and then Southern California would help the north organize a company when the time comes.

The Southern California Mutual is organized on a broad principle and is backed by thorough business men. A board of directors of 21 men have been chosen, among which are several big business men of Los Angeles. Sixteen of the board come from outside towns, one from each place, and five from Los Angeles. An executive committee of five members will have charge of matters that do not require a full meeting of the board of directors and board meetings will be held only when necessary. A subscription lists for bonds which will pay 7 per cent has been started and several bonds have already been sold. The bonds are in denominations of $25.00 each and can be purchased in any amounts up to the $50.000. The bonds are to be retired on or before 20 years at will of the board of directors when sufficient funds have accumulated. By-laws have been adopted and permanent officers chosen. We expect to be ready for business about January or February, and will give 20 per cent discount off board rates.

RETAIL PRICES TOO LOW.

Wise Conclusions of Southern Contemporary Meet One Approval.

One good friend, "The Commercial Bulletin," of Los Angeles recently published a rattling good editorial—so good that we could but feel that to fail to reprint it would be doing our readers an injustice. Brother McKinney says:

"Unless the retail grocers of the country get up enough courage to raise prices on their goods, there is likely to be much work for the sheriff this winter in the grocery business.

"It takes courage to raise prices and maintain them. The thought of doing so suggests a loss of trade. And when the grocer is working hard to increase his business it strikes him as poor policy to inaugrated a system that will be certain to decrease the volume of his output. However is is better to do a small business and make a living than it is to handle a large volume of goods and money at a loss.

"A great many retail grocers today are handling certain lines of goods on which the profit does not amount to as much as the cost of handling. They reason that having sold these goods for a long time at a particular price it will be a risky matter to change Rather than take the chance of losing trade they prefer to go along handling these goods at a loss, hoping to make it up on other lines.

"There are so many goods that have changed in cost that the retailer cannot afford to handle them at present price. One or two small lines might not make much difference to him, but there are so many lines up that he must need work a good part of his time for nothing.

"It will not do for the retail grocer to argue himself into the belief that he is making ten cents a dozen on tomatoes when he pays $1.10 for them and sells them for $1.20. It looks like a ten-cent profit on paper. But it is in fact a loss. If a man sold one hundred dozen cans a day his profit would only figure $10. It would keep two men and a cashier pretty busy to handle that many tomatoes, in ten-cent lots, in a day. They would all have to work nights and Sundays taking care of the store. If they dealt in nothing but tomatoes and paid rent and other expenses there would be nothing left for the laborers.

"It is always convenient for the grocer to reason that he has his help and must pay certain other expenses, anyway, therefore it is not necessary to reckon any cost on a weak line of goods. This is a fatal business error The cost of doing business in fixed. and the percentage of cost should be added to the first cost of all goods. If it costs 15 per cent to do business that 15 per cent should be added to the cost.

"No concern can live and lose. There must be some profit or else business must cease. The small loss on certain lines does not amount to much, but there is not only the actual loss but a lost opportunity to make a profit.

At the present time it is not a matter of small loss. There has been an advance in a very long list of goods. These goods have heretofore been sold at such convenient prices as five ten and fifteen cents per package. On live goods the same general rule has obtained. For that reason it is diffiicult to raise prices, and use the smaller denominations of our currency. The odd pennies must be brought into use. for it is from the accumulation of these pennies that the retail grocers must get their profit. It will make a big difference to him at the end of the month whether he scorns an accumulated profit of pennies or a loss of the same amount.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Fire destroyed our main factory July 4th., last.

It was seemingly a distastrous way of celebrating a grand day.

But a little thing like a fire could not hinder so great a success as the genuine Toasted Corn Flakes.

It was annoying at the time. We were behind orders—there was no let up to the demand. ,

So we were compelled to crowd our two remaining mills to the limit. We were forced to find temporary quarters to make good as far as possible the shortage which the destroyed factory had caused. But the final outcome of the fire will overcome any inconvenience that it may have caused the public, the trade or ourselves.

. Our immense new fire-proof factory is now being pushed to the most speedy conclusion.

Over 150 workmen are rushing the work. all possible.

This factory will be the largest and best equipped of its kind in the world. New machinery and every convenience to facilitate the manufacture and handling of this delicious food will be installed.

Unless the demand is simply unprecedented—unheard of—we will in a very short time be able to catch up on orders and supply all calls.

If you are having any trouble in getting your regular allotment of the genuine Toasted Corn Flakes, please be patient just a little longer. Don't be mislead into stocking up on an imitation. And remember that a concern that urges you to put in a substitute under such circumstances is not entitled to any consideration from fair-minded members of the grocery trade.

ASK $750,000 FROM "GRAPE NUTS" MAKER.

Owners of Weekly Magazine Ask Fortune As Balm For Injured Feelings When Cereal Food Manufacturer Calls Them Many Kinds of Liars.

There is a feud on between C. W. Post, of "Postum" fame and the owners and the editor of Collier's Weekly, all because the magazine printed something about Mr. Post's Grape Nuts which he did not like and which was replied to by Mr. Post in newspaper advertisements where the word "liar" appeared so many times that the publishers thought their character had been damaged to the extent of $750,000.

The plaintiffs in the suit are Peter F. Collier and Robert Collier, publishers of Collier's Weekly and Norman F. Hapgood, editor of that publication.

It all came about through the publication in Collier's Weekly, when the following was printed in connection with a crusade which that publication is making on advertisers which the paper claims is printing statements which are not borne out by facts:

"One widely-circulated paragraph labors to include the impression that Grape-Nutes will obviate the necessity of an operation for appendicitis. This is lying and potentially deadly lying. Similarly Postum continually makes reference to the endorsement of a distinguished doctor or a prominent health official, persons as mythical, doubtless, as they are mysterious."

Immediately after reading what Collier's had to say about this company, Mr. Post threw down the sword he had been using to push post check currency and other measures which he has been agitating and took up the pen as being the mightier weapon and his invective against Collier's is a wonder in the line of "calling down" for the weekly magazine.

In a newspaper advertisement whicvh was widely published in different parts of the country, the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., most severely scores the Collier people and comes so near calling its management liars that the proprietors and editor brought suit for $250,000 each, the aggregate being $750,000.

The basis of the articles seems to be in reference to Grape Nuts in connection with appendicitis, and Mr. Post offers to bet money, marbles, chalk or cold cash that he can prove all the claims he has made regarding his breakfast food.

According to press reports Mr. Post has admitted the authorship of the rhetorical outburst in the papers hammering Collier's Weekly and hence the suit.

The trade in general is waiting the outcome of the suit and the testimony is expected to be interesting.

G. W Post, as the leading light in the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd. has been long known as a man who has certain convictions and follows up those convictions regardless of what others have to say. He is the originator of be in the interest of the mail order which has been generally supposed to post check currency, a movement houses and his attitude against organized labor has caused much hard feeling on the part of the labor organizations.

Lippman Sachs has sold his large lot on the north side of Post street, west of Leavenworth, to Goldberg, Bowen & Company, for approximately $45,000. The sale was made through the real estate office of Abrahamson Bros. & Co.

Sachs had made all preparations to erect a hotel costing $125,000. When this offer was made him, however, he abandoned the project, though the plans were already drawn. The lot measures 76x37 feet, and Goldberg, Bowen & Company will erect a large manufacturing plant on it, costing $60,000.

NEW CARTONS NECESSARY.

Fresno.—The pure food law in regard to labels to be placed on canned goods, cartons, bottles, etc., has not affected canners here materially, but it has caused a big difference to the raisin men, putting them to expense which cannot now be estimated, and to endless trouble in order to secure perfect compliance with the law. Twenty millions of raisin cartons are said to be in this city which will have to be either reprinted or restamped, at a cost equal to half the original value of the cartons. The situation is aggravated also by the fact that many cartons are using in daily from the East, all of which have to be worked over when they arrive here, so as not to infringe on the new law.

Bottlers In Line.

Numerous Concerns Realize the Necessity of Helping Their Customers Secure Fair Profits.

The bottlers of Olympia, Tacoma and Rainier beers have decided to establish a two for 25c price on their beer. Many of the local bottlers have the matter under consideration. Before this week is out the decision will be reached.

The grocers cannot afford to sell beer for 10c at its present cost.

All the bottlers recognize this fact.

A few of them are hesitating to fix the two for 25c price because they fear to lose some of their 10c business if they take this step. When these men find that the dealers who are business men will refuse to handle their beer as long as it cannot be sold with a proper margin, they will unquestionably adapt their methods to the needs of their customers.

Grocers to Have the Belasco Masterpiece For Their Theatre Party.

All who buy tickets to the Grocers' Theatre Party for Tuesday, Oct. 29th, will have a treat. The play is to be "The Heart of Maryland," Belasco's great masterpiece.

This theatre party is being managed by the Boston Club, made up of California grocers, who propose to attend the National Grocers' Convention at Boston in May, 1908.

A souvenir program is being arranged. This is in charge specially of Messrs. Connolly, Trask, Doyle and Pierce, who report that, already, many large firms have asked the privilege of being represented in its pages, so that the program will be a source of profit.

The program will be of special value to the advertiser since it will be mail-

State Directors Accept Proposition That Will Help Its Members.

ADVOCATE TURNS OVER MONEY

Active Campaign of Organization Will Soon Be In Operation.

Grocers all over California will profit by the plans decided upon by the directors of the California Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association, at their meeting in San Francisco on Thursday evening, October 3rd.

President Doyle presided at the meeting. There were also in attendance Messrs. Jost and Kilgore of Sacramento, Duncan of Oakland, Warnke of Alameda, Limpinsel of Placerville, Jones of San Jose and Secretary Connolly.

Campaign Against Debtors.

President Doyle was empowered to accept a propositon made to the organization by the American Collection Agency, by which all merchants of any district that may organize may have a delinquent list printed, the cost to be borne by the American Collection Agency. This firm also agreed to contribute to the funds of the organization in proportion to the amount of business turned over and to assist the association secretary with all data possible and to report upon whether people paid their bills or not.

The American Collection Agency requires that the Association secretary should secure from the members who may have bills to collect, the same agreement that it required from its individual subscribers. This agreement is that the subscriber is to pay 50 per cent on the first $50.00 collected and 10 per cent on the balance, and that there be no misrepresentation in regard to bills turned over to the American Collection Agency for collection.

HERE IS THE REAL FOOD TRUST

—From "Interstate Grocer"

Collects Outlawed Bills.

Mr. Aubry of Stockton spoke warmly in favor of accepting the proposition of the American Collection Agency. He said that this agency had collected bills for him that had passed through the hands of numerous other collectors without results and that the most remarkable part of the work was that most of the bills collected, were outlawed.

Field Secretary Powers also spoke in favor of accepting the proposition, explaining that while it would add very materially to the effectiveness of the organization and its value to members the arrangement would be a source of income rather tha na source of expense, and would enable the organization to build district organizations and thus render it possible for the merchants to maintain permanently a secretary in districts where no single town was large enough to make a separate organization possible.

Advocate Makes Money.

Mr. J. W. King, chairman of the Advocate committee, was absent at a convention (being nominated for supervisor), and was not able to make his report in person. Mr. Eddy, manager of the Advocate, presented Mr. King's report, in the shape of a report from the bookkeeping expert hired by the committee, which showed a balance of $1,800.00 as the gross earnings of the paper the first twelve months it was in the hands of the State Grocers' Association and a check for $200.

President Doyle was empowered to close the contract with Mr. Powers by which the control of the State Grocers' Association should be continued.

President Doyle announced the following committees:

Finance—Jost, chairman; Jones, Duncan.

Advocate—King, chairman; Longstreth, Duncan.

Maintaining Prices—Aubry, chairman; Kilgore, Limpinsel.

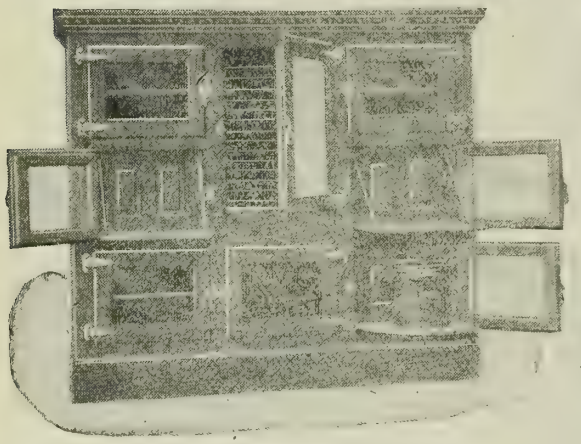
Organization—Warnke, chairman; Mottaz, Pearson, Eccleston, Hughes.

Jost Urges Concentration.

The question of organization was then taken up.

Mr. Jost of Sacramento suggested that is was essential to see San Francisco strongly organized. He thought that the officers should not jeopardize results by jumping from one place to another and leaving the work unfinished. He advised that the efforts of the organizer be concentrated on San Francisco at first if that city needed it, and later the organizing force should turn its attention to San Jose and other cities that needed help.

Field Secretary Powers stated that this was exactly in line with what he hoped the directors would decide upon. He looked upon the contract with the American Collection Agency as of great value since it would add materially to the income of the organization and at the same time enable the organizer to assure the new members that a delinquent list would be printed for them containing the names of people who owed bills the grocers were unable to collect theraselves and that these grocers would also be able to locate many debtors who had moved and from whom they had lost money and also get money on bills which they had looked upon as being without value.



He thought that the grocers in San Francisco should be organized strongly first. Then branch associations be organized in San Jose, Santa Clara, Los Gatos and the towns between there and San Francisco. This group of cities on the west side of San Francisco bay, could then be united under one head with a delinquent list in common. The income would be sufficient to warrant paying salaries to the men necessary to maintain the organization and at the same time the membership would be bound together in such a way as to enable the members to act as a unit in co-operating to induce manufacturers to protect the retail selling price on their product.

Help for Other Cities.

Mr. Powers suggested that after this field had been covered, that the State organizer should go to Alameda county and help their secretary there to bring the grocers in the outside communities of that conuty together to work with the grocers of Oakland and assist in maintaining that organization. A separate deliquent list could be printed for that dstrict.

He suggested that the Field Secretary could later be sent to Sacramento to co-operate with the secretary of that organization in securing the affiliation of all the grocers in the towns around Sacramento with the Sacramento Association and in establishing a mutual delinquent list for that city. Stockton, Fresno and other cities could then be visited and the Field Secretary could then be sent to Southern California to follow out the same line of work under the direction of Secretary Paulding. Thus he would help make each individual association stronger and bringing the members in closer touch. The power of the organization for accomplishing results quickly would in this way be very largely increased.

The directors decided to continue the arrangement made with Mr. Powers on the same basis as before for the time being.

Hobart Electric Mill.

The matter of the Hobart Electric Coffee Mill was then taken up. The settlement of the matter was left in the hands of Secretary Connolly. It was the concensus of opinion that since the winning ticket was sold to a harness man that the drawing was void and that a new set of tickets should be printed.

Quite a number of the first tickets issued were sold to parties not members of the association. The money paid for these tickets will be refunded to them should they not desire to join the State Grocers' Association and to members of the State Association holding tickets, new tickets will be issued. The drawing will be held at a meeting of the directors to be held in San Jose on January 9th.

Quite a mass of routine business was gone through with and it was nearly midnight when the directors adjourned.

Study Your Business.

Having decided to strive in a certain field of enterprise, learn all there is to know about it—all that your mental faculties can grasp; do all that your hands can do. Resolve at the start-off to be no second or third rater, no "piker;" resolve that you will be the best in the craft, whatever it is. Don't envy those above you or those that have succeeded but study them calmly and see how they have done it; then do likewise. But the main point is to never relax your grip, once having setled the question of what to do. Stick to it, do it well. Be honest with yourself; pause and seriously consider once in a while if you are doing best, then tighten your belt notch and do more earnestly.

There is never an earnest worker in any subordinate position whose efforts are lost. Industry, integrity, earnestness and application bring their rewards. They may not have been noticed yesterday, may not today, but tomorrow they will be, and then come the joy and exultation of promotion and the renewed enthusiasm that inspires to better results. However, there never was a man working with a serious, earnest purpose who did not find ample reward in the consciousness that he had done the things well.

The failures in life are those who linger and waver, vacillate let go and take hold again; the successes never let go, but push on with a pertinacity that must conquer. They win. Anyone can who does that.

Attractiveness in Advertising

The idea than any kind of an advertisement will serve a good purpose is no longer true. There must be some attractive features in it to engage the attention of the people.

It must present good goods and set them forward in good language. When we say good language we do not mean literary finish, but plain words, whose meanings are clear and which are not capable of different constructions.

If a man makes his advertisement mere invoice bills he will have little use for language, but if he wants to present his goods in a way that the public will take an interest inthem he wants to make his advertisement talk, and to talk there must be words and to be understood correctly these words must present the ideas the dealer has in his mind.

There is as much competition in methods of advertising as in general business, and if one is to gain an advantage over a compeitior's methods one must study one's work and seek to do the best possible advertising.

Advertisements made up of the right sort of matter can never be two good, but when matter is sacrificed, embellishment may be overdone, and the effectiveness destroyed. The central idea of all advertisements is to present the goods in their most favorable light.

It is said the managers of the Chutes are anxious to secure the old Sutro home property, and, in connection with a new Cliff House, to make it one of the most attractive resorts in the country.

PETALUMA DOINGS.

Merchants of Sonoma Valley Center Gain Many Advantages From Association.

W. H. Early, secretary of the Merchants' Association of Petaluma writes under date of October 4th:

"The last regular meeting of the Merchants' Association of Petaluma was well attended and nearly every line of business in the city was represented, as well as some of the professions. The members were very enthusiastic over the reports of the officers. It was shown that the Association is in good financial standing and its membership is increasing.

Early Closing.

"The Association has thus far proven very beneficial to the merchants in many ways. Heretofore it has been impossible for the grocers to agree on the hours of closing; many of them were in the habit of keeping open until 8 o'clock at night. But every grocer in Petaluma closes promptly at 6 o'clock now, something which has probably never been known before in Petaluma.

Price Maintenance.

"The grocers have always been unable to agree on prices of certain articles and the result has been that many of them have been doing business, as to those certain articles, for nothing as they have been selling at cost or in some cases, at a loss. Now the Merchants' Association, through a grocers' committee and the general secretary, has been able to get an arrangement from many of the manufacturers as to prices and it is no trouble to maintain a price which will allow a reasonable profit.

High Freight Rates.

"The matter of freight rates and transportation has always been a matter of annoyance in Petaluma, but the Association has appointed committees, representing the different lines of trade, and these committees are accomplishing good results for the mercants by interviewing the local carriers, both rail and water. The idea of a united action on any matter seems to accomplish the thing every time.

Mutual Fire Insurance.

"At the last meeting considerable interest was shown as the result of a speech made by one of the merchants about local fire insurance rates. The speaker declared that the fire insurance rates had been increased in Petaluma by one-half and all without any apparent reason. Many of those present took up the discussion and the matter was debated for over two hours. As a result a committee of seven members was appointed to make thorough investigations in the rate matter and to report at the next meeting. The committee was instructed to take the matter up with the attorney for the Association and secure an opinion on the matter of forming a local fire insurance company. The committee will probably recommend that such a company be formed unless the rates are at once reduced."

ELECTRIC COFFEE MILLS.

The attention of our readers is especially called to the advertisement of the Enterprise Electric Mills, in this issue.

These mills are now equipped with Wagner motors, made in St. Louis, and are guaranteed against any mechanical or electrical defects. The Wagner motor is considered by many experts superior to those of any other manufacturer.

Prior to the introduction of the Enterprise Electric mills it was an impossibility to get a coffee mill that would grind coffee perfectly, also pulverize coffee—by power — at a cost that would not appear excessive to a grocer. Some power mills using the same set of grinders for granulating and pulverizing would choke if the grinders were set too tight, or else friction on the grinders would be so great as to cause heating of the coffee and impairment of its flavor.

The San Francisco agency of these mills is located at 438 Market street.

Bids for the removal of the Larkin st. wing of the City Hall, for that part of the hall between this wing and the dome, and for the shattered shell of the dome, were called for by the Board of Public Works recently, and will be opened on Sept. 18th.

It always gives the greatest satisfaction to customers, and in the end yields the larger profit to the grocer.

BUSINESS MEN NOMINATED.

Every grocer in San Francisco will be interested in three of the nominations made last week by the various parties.

John W. King, president of the Associated Retail Grocers was nominated for supervisor by the Republicans

Jos. A. Stulz, for several years local president and also State President, was re-nominated for Public Administrator on the Union Labor ticket.

F. L. Matthes, president and manager of the Pacific Vinegar and Pickle Works, was nominated for Supervisor by the Union Labor party.

All of these gentleman are well and favorably known by the grocery trade and their election would be of great value to the dealers generally, since a friend in power is always a good thing to have.

FOREWORD. The advancing markets all over the United States are bringing about a condition unprecedented and one which is constantly growing more serious.

Some interests feel that the era of high prices has about reached its limit but this is questionable. It is generally admitted that prices are now at a record mark and it is also acknowledged that if the advances continue, the consumer will halt and refuse to take the goods. A forerunner of this condition may have been noted in the disposition displayed by consumers to accept substitutes—goods which are cheaper than the lines discriminating buyers might usually demand.

Probably one reason why the consumers have not shown their feeling in the premises yet, is because of the fact that both jobbers and retailers have been hoping that prices would decline somewhat, and have accordingly withheld advances of price to consumer as long as they possibly could. The limit to such a course of procedure has now come and the jobbers are at last being forced to take cognizance of the situation and the retailer in his turn has awakened to the fact that he cannot safely do business without a profit, and hence his advance in prices to the consumer. Some authorities believe that this will shortly result in a reaction—that is to say—the consumer will not take the goods and the retailer will be left with them on his hands.

That this theory is felt to be a correct one, is shown in the conservative policy in purchases now being followed by both jobbers and retailers. Heavy stocks of any one line are avoided. The great trouble is, however, that almost every line is on the same inflated basis. In the east to-day the packers and manufacturers are the kings, but the balance of power will soon swing back to the jobbers. When that time comes it will be a case of jobbers buying from jobbers at even greater prices than are now charged by first hands. Each subdivision of available stock will enforce another increase till spring may find a schedule of prices almost approaching famine proportions. This, coupled with the "go without" policy of the consumer, is causing serious thought among the retailers of the trade throughout the country.

The "Journal of Commerce" of New York in making a statement similar to the above says:

"With the bulk of the new pack crops in hand or so nearly in hand as to be safely reckoned, it is evident that the staple luxuries, as canned vegetables, canned fruits, dried fruits, canned and boxed fish, canned and smoked meats, preserves, etc., will all have to be reckoned as delicacies. In this situation, the bulk of the demand will be thrown to the cereals and their secondary products. Owing to a clever campaign manufacturers of patent cereal foods have gradually secured practical control of even the bulk supply of cereals and by their own large purchases have forced a market for bulk goods which are almost as high as the same quantities of the patented package goods. Deliveries of both these lines of cereals are already three to four weeks behind and prices are at record height. Wherefore, it looks as though everything in the grocery line, bulk or package, fancy or staple, necessary or a luxury, will be remarkably short during the winter."

Some of our readers may feel that this statement of conditions comes from a territory so far removed, that the trade here need not consider such reports. In coming to such a conclusion, they will make a great mistake. The pinch is being felt all over the United States and must be reckoned with.

SUGAR.

Contrary to the expectation of some, the market in this line shows an advance of 20 points during the past week.

New York, Oct. 3.—Willett & Gray report:

The week.—Raws: Unchanged. Refined: Unchanged. Net cash quotations this date are: Molasses, 3.09c; Centrifugals, 3.95c; Granulated, 4.65c.

Raws.—The moderate business of the week has been on the previous basis of 3.95c. per lb. duty paid for 96 degrees test Centrifugals.

Unsold stocks of Cuba and Porto Rico sugars are very small, and are firmly held.

The notable feature of the week is the completion of the Cuba crop, and the final outturn of same given by Messrs. Guma & Mejer as 1,427,673 tons, against 1,178,749 tons in preceding year.

The unusually favorable conditions for grinding (of the season just over) have left in the fields no surplus cane for early grinding of the coming crop, which will be a later crop than usual, and this absence of surplus cane, in connection with several other disadvantageous conditions, will result in less production than last season. The decrease cannot be closely estimated now.

Refined.—A slight falling off in the demand is noticable.

COFFEE.

C. E. Bickford reports under date of Oct. 3:

Small stocks in second hands and a further hardening tendency in all markets resulted in a continuation during September of the unusually active demand noted in our August and September circulars. The deliveries from first hands for the past three months have aggregated 93,000 bags, which has reduced importers holdings to less than 40,000 bags and requirements will doubtless absorb these prior to the arrival in quantity of new crop. This liberal buying and reduction of stock has caused an advance in prices of from ½c to ¾c during the month, current unwashed Salvador, with fair roasting merit selling at 8½c and superior unwashed at 9c to 9¼c. The advance applies to all grades with the exception of the lowest classes. These have not participated in the advance and have been neglected, even at former selling values, due in measure to the lower offerings from Brazil and competitive value of these offerings, together with a lack of interest on the part of local dealers in them.

New York quotations are ⅛c higher on No. 7 Rio and ⅜c higher on No. 4 Santos than prices ruling a month ago. The receipts at Rio and Santos to date are smaller than generally anticipated and are now 3½ millions of bags as against 5½ millions received up to the corresponding period of a year ago. Trading is reported as being light, and listless buyers persisting in their hand to mouth policy pending further developements and crop reports.

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co. reports under date of Oct. 8:

The market on fancy heads shows no change since our last report. Prices are still firm and the mills do not show any sign of weakening.

"As advised, domestic grades of Japan rice are about cleaned out. Unpolished, Japan, grown from Imported seed in the Hawaiian Islands will take the place of these grades until new crop can be procured. This should find favor with the trade as it can be bought for 50c per bag less than imported Japan. Prices on new crop Japans have opened up on a basis nearly equal to the cost of imported rice. Offerings up to the present time are limited and we do not look for any shipment to arrive before Nov. 15th."

New York, October 1.—Dan Talmage's Sons' Co. report:

Demand for the week has been active. All grades are in request, although offerings have not shown very wide assortment. There is an improvement in this respect, however,, as medium styles appear occasionally. Prices are firm in sympathy with conditions at primary sources of supply.

Advices from the South note good demand on the Atlantic Coast, with light offerings account of storms which have interfered with harvest. At New Orleans, market is strong with good demand. Receipts of Rough Rice have been light, not sufficient to meet daily requirements of Mills, hence majority are closed. The limited daily output is readily placed.

In the interior—Southwest Louisiana and Texas—more mills have started but are running on scanty supply of rough. Rains almost every day have delayed harvest and threshing, and such parcels as planters have secured are sharply competed for by the mills, and the out-turn of cleaned is quickly absorbed by waiting demand. The constant rains in the rice belt are becoming a serious menace to both quantity and quality of the crop.

Cables and correspondence from abroad note quiet markets for all deliveries.

FLOUR.

The advance in flour which was predicted several weeks ago in our "Points to Watch" column, made its appearance several days ago, the market advancing 20c per barrel. This advance was brought about through the rapidly advancing wheat market and the end is not yet.

BREAD.

A. W. J. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the Master Bakers' Association, says that the bakers are facing a crisis. They must either go out of business or make the consumers pay more. There is a shortage of wheat throughout this country and Canada, and even in Europe. In Canada they expected to harvest 80,000,000 bushels of wheat. They will be fortunate if they harvest 35,000,000 bushels. In our own country the wheat situation is not much better. The millman has paid the increased price to the grower, and the baker has paid it to the millman. Now it is the time of the consumer to pay the baker. I am calling a meeting of the executive committee of the Master Bakers' Association for next Thursday. At that meeting it will be determinated whether the association shall be asked to increase the cost of bread to the consumer.

DRIED FRUIT.

This line is without particular feature at this time. All varieties of fruit remain steady with strong markets, most of the stock being held by packers.

RAISINS.

This line is very weak and dull at the present writing.

HONEY.

Honey is very firm with stocks in light supply. Advances are extremely likely.

NUTS.

The market in this line is in a splendid condition from the standpoint of the sellers.

BEANS.

There is an active demand all along the line in this commodity. Limas are slightly lower, while Pinks, Reds and large and small Whites are higher with an unusually good demand for whites.

CANNED CORN.

Corn is getting very much firmer every day. According to advices from the east the pack will be late and a great deal of packing will have to be done in a very short space of time.

CONDENSED MILK.

We hear that most of the standard brands are again programmed to advance.

PROVISIONS.

We learn that considerable trading is being indulged in by the various interested parties. No special decline is to be noted at the present time.

IMPORTED FISH.

New York, October 4.—Strodtmeyer & Arpe Co. report:

Herrings—Market for Holland and Scotch is unchanged, with considerable better demand.

Norwegian herrings—Prices declining.

Irish Mackerel—Scarce and in great demand. Prices higher.

Norway Mackerel—Very scarce. Salting seems to be a failure; arrivals rather small and prices considerably higher than last week. Quality very fine.

Imported oil sardines—No change; catch still a total failure.

Sprats—Very scarce. Stocks are being bought up rapidly and prices advancing.

Norway smoked sardines—Catch a failure; very scarce; prices advancing.

HAY.

Somers & Co. say under date of Oct. 8:—

In spite of the fact that hay arrivals have been increasing a bit during the week ending to-day. there is no denying that the market is materially stronger, arrivals showing a total of 3740 tons in comparison with 3150 last week and 4430 for the week preceding that. Apparently we are readily absorbing an average of 4000 tons per week so that when we fall below this range the difference is immediately noted on the market. It is true that several large consumers have facilities for storing away their Winter's supply and practically all of these are now out of the market. The fact remains, however, that in spite of the general complaint of dull times that there is a fairly healthy demand for hay here and a market with a decided sensitiveness to any under-supply. The Sante Fe R. R. is figuring more prominently in the freighting of hay to this market but in spite of the fact that both this line and the S. P. are doing their best to furnish cars, yet they fall short of giving us what we need to properly supply out wants. All R. R. lines are reporting shortage in cars. although when complaint is made on the part of the hay men some officials reply with the old excuse that the hay dealers do not unload the cars here when they receive them. This report is absolutely without foundation, except in occasional individual cases when on a particular day one dealer might receive a large number of cars. all of which could not be unloaded within the specified time.

Although the situation is strong, we cannot at the moment report any advance over the quotations given a week ago which we report as follows:

GREEN REACHES HOME.

Secretary of National Organization Much Gratified at Results of Trip West.

Mr. John A. Green, Secretary of the National Association of Retail Grocers, in writing of his trip after leaving our State Convention at Sacramento, states that he found the best of conditions prevailing in the Retail Grocers Association of Portland. He spoke of the wonderfully representative gathering, both in number and influence, at the Hotel Portland at the banquet held there. The Convention at Seattle was extremely interesting and very satisfactory from every point of view. On his way back, Mr. Green stopped at Minneapolis and St. Paul, where he met and addressed both of the associations in those cities.

Mr. Green considers his trip to be the most successful of any he has ever undertaken and believes that the interest arroused will be worth many times the cost. The work of organization has been largely helped through out the territory visited by him.

NEW FLOUR MILL.

The mill will have a capacity of 250 barrels of floor a day, and will cost in the neighborhood of $150,000. Work will be commenced at once on the construction of the plant.

GROCERS CONSOLIDATE

Wilkes & Pearson and Thomas Knutzen Join Forces in Stockton.

The "Stockton Record" of Sept. 28 says: A deal of much importance in commercial circles was effected this week in the consolidation of the two large grocery firms of Wilkes & Pearson and Thomes F. Knutzen.

The new firm is under the firm name of Wilkes, Pearson Co., and it occupies the handsome and commodious pressed brick building which Mr. Knutzen recently erected at the northeast corner of Weber avenue and Stanislaus street.

Wilkes & Pearson have enjoyed an enviable prosperity since they opened their grocery store on El Dorado street some years ago. Their business increased so rapidly that for several months they have been seriously handicapped by a lack of room and have been looking about for more commodious quarters.

In the meantime Mr. Knutzen's grocery business had been growing steadily and he had erected a modern business block on Weber avenue as a home for his grocery business. He found himself with room to spare and a desire to associate with him a partner or partners so that he could divide the work and responsibility.

The result was that Wilkes & Peason could supply what Mr. Knutzen desired, and he could provide just what they were looking for. Hence the consolidation of the firms.

The new firm will have the most modern and sanitary fixtures, ample room and accommodation for carrying on the large business. It will be a live and creditable addition to the new Weber avenue.

(Mr. Pearson is Treasurer of the State Grocers Association.)

NEW FACTORY TOWN.

Down in Santa Clara Valley there is another town coming into prominence as a manufacturing center. This is Sunnyvale, 38 miles from San Francisco and on the main line of the Southern Pacific. Within a few years after its founding Sunnyvale was selected by the Goldy Machine Co. for a location for its plant and $125,000 was spent by this Jubilee Incubator Co. Madison & Bonner have also built a packing house here and give employment of 150 men and women. The next to select Sunnyvale was the Joshua Hendy Iron Works, with a salary list of 400 to 500 employes. Then there is the Century Paint and Roofing Co., several canneries, Libby, McNeil and Libby among them, the Hydro-Carbon companies, Johnson Traction Engine Co. and other business concerns.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS.

An Expert Tells Ways and Means of Handling Them.

(Written Expressly for the Advocate by J. F. Paulding.)

The questions of credits and collections has caused perhaps more failures in the mercantile line, for want of proper knowledge, than any one branch of the bushiness. So important is this particular branch of the mercantile business, that many of our merchants are employing special credit men, and wherever possible, experienced collectors.

Small Dealers Unfortunate.

The small dealers are especially unfortunate, inasmuch as they have to act as buyer, seller, collector, as well as credit men. Where the business justifies any special man for any particular department, it should be a credit man first. Lack of attention to this one feature of the business causes many direct failures, also many indirect, because they are apt to adopt a cash plan after they have made a failure of the credit plan, only to go down to defeat in 95 cases out of a hundred.

Don't "Swap Horses, Etc."

The merchant who begins business on a credit plan and fails to make good, as the saying is, had better sell out than to change the credit to cash plan. There are a greater percentage of wrecks from the credit to cash plan than any other cause and almost invariably the man who fails to make a success of the credit business lacks the essential knowledge necessary to make a success of a cash trade.

Difference Two Per Cent.

The chief reason of non-success of a cash store after making the change is that the dealer does not take into consideration the real difference between the percentage necessary to conduct a credit store over the cash store. The real difference is approximately 2 per cent and many times a dealer in making the change will cut a ten-cent article to three for 25 cents, which makes a 20 per cent difference, which no business will stand, especially the grocery line.

Cash Plan a Science.

A cut of the real difference in percentage would make no object for the public and would go unnoticed, therefore the cash plan is a science which few have successfully fathomed and one that the credit man had better let alone. When a business is sick a study of the weak parts should be made and a system inaugurated that would tend to strengthen the weakened parts and not adopt one at complete variance with the past method of conducting the business, such as changing to cash. A careful study should be made as to why so much is being lost or why collections are slow and the best solution adopted, and nine times out of ten success would be achieved.

Careful Study Essential.

If success lies entirely with the credit end of the business and the dealer is unable to decide what to do, a more successful merchant should be questioned and perhaps he will know just what remedy to apply. If a proper study is given a credit business and the proper attention is given to the detail, the chances of success are much greater than a cash business. This is evidenced every day by the numerous stores who are making a success of this plan.

More Capital Required.

To properly conduct a credit business requires from one-half to two-thirds more capital than a cash business of the same proportions. The cash man gets his money every day and receives the same length of credit as does the cash man, therefore the credit man is compelled to have the amount he has on his books all the time, more than the cash merchant who does a like amount of business. It is safe to say that a merchant who does a credit business has on the average of $2,500 on his books all the time if he is doing say a $3,000 business per month. If he is doing a $3,00 business he muct carry at least a $4,000 stock of goods, and it is therfore necessary to have $6,500 where the cash man can along with $4,000 in trade transact the business properly (as, the interest on this additional amount should be taken into consideration as well as the losses incured in conducting the business.

An Illustration.

I do not believe a better plan of how to handle credits could be presented than to give an illustration of two dealers who were the extremes in this line. I will call them "Smith" and "Jones" for example, for there are so many of them engaged in the business they will not know which one I mean, therefore cannot get offended.

Mr. Jones was extremely careful, while Mr. Smith was extremely careless.

Mr. Jones profited by experience; Mr. Smith scarcely noticed an example.

They began business in the same neighborhood, on the same day, about six blocks apart. I will not give the name of the city in which they engaged in their calling, so as to farther mystify you as to which Smith or Jones I refer to. The consumers of that neighborhood averaged about the same, being made up mostly of working people, a few real estate men, attorneys, and a considerable sprinkling of ne-er do wells, etc.

Mr. Jones being a very careful man, bought his goods right, figured every bill himself, marked his discounts, and received full weight or knew the reason why. His motto was to pay and get paid promptly as agreed. He was always firm in his decision after he had once made up his mind, but ever pleasant and accommodating.

Soon after opening his store he went to the bank to open an account and made out his deposit slip, went to the window and asked to be allowed to take a deposit and check book, but found it was necessary to give a rrerence before he could open an account. Of course he was not compelled to tell his family history, but the teller simply asked "if he had an account there before," or "if he had an account at any other bank in the city," "what was the nature of his business," etc.

Now this was a surprise to Mr. Jones and he profited by it.

He thought that if a bank would not take a deposit without investigation, it made it all the more necessary tao get a line on your customers before you loaned them goods.

He was still more surprised after he had done business with that particular bank for about six months and wanted to borrow a couple of hundred dollars to pay for his futures. He was asked to give his family history, asked if he had ever borrowed money there before, when he wanted to pay, what he wanted to do with the money and a whole string of questions too numerous to mention.

He, of course, understood that a bank should be careful, but to question a man who had the standing he had, he thought it a very forcible lesson and again profited by it.

After that it was especially hard for an unknown party to get credit from Mr. Jones. He was always very courteous to a new applicant for credit.

Everyone who asked a time accommodation was asked the following questions:

First—"What is your name (with initials)?"

Second—"Occupation?"

Third—"Where employed?"

Fourth—"When do you wish to pay?"

Fifth—"Your address?"

Sixth—"Have you been dealing in the neighborhood?"

Seventh—"With whom?"

After receiving the replies he would immediately go to his delinquent list and see if the name was there, and if not he would take a chance on the first order and telephone to the Association office (for he was a member of the Association) to see if the new applicant was on the secretary's books. If not, he requested the secretary to call up the previous creditor and find out the standing of the party. If the reference was not as expected the debtor was asked for further reference and if he refused to give them, credit was stopped there and then.

Another feature of Mr. Jones' credit business was to have it thoroughly understood that all bills must be paid when agreed and that he could not afford to carry balances.

Of course, there were exceptions, which were allowed; but they were very few and Mr. Jones' losses averaged at the end of the year less than one-half of one per cent.

He was a prompt collector and if a debtor agreed to pay on a certain day he was there or had a clerk call and did not wait for two or three days.

He did a business of $24,000 the first year and his losses were only a little over a hundred dollars. When he was convinced that it would not pay him to run after a dead-beat, he turned the claim over to the Association collector before it got whiskers on it, well knowing that whatever he received was like finding it, and he did not worry the life out of the collector if he failed to collect the bill.

Now Mr. Smith was directly opposite to Mr. Jones in everything he undertook. He had the same class of trade but did not handle it right.

He went to the bank and was asked the same questions as was Mr. Jones and answered them honestly, but forgot all about the object lesson before he got back to his store.

He went to borrow money and was asked the same questions and answered them and received the loan, but he never took a second thought that it would apply to his business.

He went back to business and when a party would apply for credit maybe he would ask for the initials or perhaps not.

If he was told that the applicant's name was Hill at such a number it mattered little else to him whether any farther information was secured or not.

The clerks seeing his dilatory methods fell into the same rut, and when Mr. Hill with no initials nor occupation known moved away he would leave the bill around for six or eight months and send it in to the Association and ask to have it looked up and collected, and he would get ten times as mad, ten times as quick, if the bill was not collected as did Mr. Jones who had all the details.

He never once thought that crediting to the amount of $50.00 was like loaning two twenty dollar gold pieces without security and to people little known to him.

He did $24,000 worth of business also the first year, but his losses were more than $500.00 and he was fortunate that they were not more.

He seldom looked to his delinquent list or asked for a report from the secretary until after the debtor was gone or had beaten him out of a bill.

Window Dressing.

EFFECTIVE DISPLAYS.

The most effective window displays are those which show a single line of merchandise.

There are several reasons why this is so. First, it may be mentioned that when showing a single line the whole window breathes of such goods. Everywhere in the window the eye rests on something in some way related to these goods. If it is package goods they will be shown in different sized packages. Attention is called to the quality of the goods by means of placards. The impression made is marked. The spectator goes away with that impression and it lasts.

With a single line the merchant can be more thorough in his display than he could if he attempted to show a number of varieties of goods at the same time.

Moreover, it is easier to dress a window well with a single line than it is to make a mixed display. In making single line displays another thing is of importance and that is when the merchant changes his display the contrast is so marked that the mere change of itself, regardless of the merit of the display, attracts attention.

Merchants who make displays of single lines must change them often. After showing a number of single lines it is well to show a mixed window just for sake of variety. It is variety that attracts. After the mixed window the merchant should return to the single line displays.

Where most merchants fail in their window displays is in the placards they put up.

The placard should be small, neat and so worded as to make an impression on those who read it. Some short sentences are attractive and easily remembered. In fact an epigrammatic line will cling to those who read it in spite of themselves. The merchant must not try to be funny when writing these lines, but he should make them emphatic and smooth to read.

There is no end to small notices of this kind that may be put in the window. However, the merchant should be warned against overdoing it. A few well worded neat signs will attract more attention and produce a more lasting effect than a great number will.

It often happens that a grocer is not selling as much tea and coffee as he feels he should sell. As these articles furnish a good profit he should see to it that something is done in the way of display to increase this trade. A good coffee display may be made one week to be followed by a tea display. Then the merchant may make a display of some other goods and get back to his tea and coffee displays again, being careful to vary them each time a new display is made.

It should appear unnecessary to caution the grocer against making a neat display back of an unclean window, but it happens very often that such neglect is shown in respect to this feature of window displays. When the display is put in, the window should be thoroughly washed both inside and out, and the outside should get an extra washing whenever it is needed. Clean windows are absolutely essential to effective displays.

It frequently happens that the grocer has several odd lines of goods that are a little worn out, or for other reasons he may desire to clean them all out. To make a display of these goods requires a great deal of business tact, for the high class grocer desires to avoid giving the impression that he carries cheap goods. Still he must get rid of these broken lines.

His best plan is to dump them into the window, rather in a cheap, than with the idea of any special arrangement.

Now let him put a few attractive cards in the window, telling the simple truth about these goods. He might say:

"These are all first class goods. But they are broken lots and are marked down for that reason."

Retail Grocers' Advocate 1714 Webster St. San Francisco

He seldom went to a meeting or helped secure better laws.

He is about read to change to a cash baiss now and does not believe the credit business pays, while you seldom hear a complaint from Mr. Jones regarding the credit business.

Know Your Man.

To handle credits I would say always know to whom you are trusting. A $25.00 grocery bill is like lending a $20.00 gold piece without security and you stand the cost of doing the business.

Never credit anyone without getting the name, with initials, and first name in full if possible. Always get the occupation, the address, and one or more previous creditors.

The honest man will not fear you will look up his record, but will be glad of it, while the dead-beat will stand and sputter and pretend to be offended, and tell you he can get credit where and when he wants it. Tell such a person just what your bank would tell you if you tried the same game on them, "Go get it."

I do not mean for any man to be abrupt in such matters, but use business judgment and horse sense and you will have less cause to complain about the credit business.

Collections.

The question of colelctions is an important one, and is closely allied to credits. If proper judgment is used in extending credit it is three times as easy to collect the bills.

First, never let a bill run longer than agreed upon without knowing the reason why.

Second, never let a customer put you off too long without trying to shorten the length of time they wish to pay in.

Many times a customer will ask for three months to make a payment when pinned down will agree to pay the same amount within thirty or forty days. If you find a customer buying houses on the installment plan, and putting off paying your bill, tell them you will not stand for it.

Then is a good time to threaten suit.

Do not run your legs off on a ten-dollar bill to save the commission of $2.00 you might pay a collector, but after you see the customer is too long-winded, put the account in the collector's hands before it gets rusty.

A bill three months old is twice as easy collected as one six or eight months old and one, one year old is twice as easy collected as one two years old.

Never let a large account outlaw as long as the debtor is strong and healthy.

Never let a bill stand on your books and allow the debtor to run a bill at some other store: put the name in the hands of the secretary, if not for collection, at least for a guide for some other poor victim who has been beaten by others of a like kind.

Be friendly with your neighbor and if a party beats you tell him, and he will reciprocate the first opportunity; and last but not least:

Join your Association and stay with it.

Every collection law on our statute books was put there by your organization or one of a like kind.

Never belittle the efforts of your collection agency for those who get rich at this calling are fewer even than the grocers who make a sum to retire on.

Remember you had the first trial and failed and if you judge the collector, the second party, a failure, what must he think of you who had the first chance?

Be prompt in everything you do, and all try to be Jones in action if not in name and help educate and uplift the Smiths.

WILL ORGANIZE TRADE BUREAU.

A movement is well under way by the commercial houses in San Francisco, including virtually all of the leading wholesale concerns and representing the manufacturing and shipping interests of the city to establish a traffic bureau for the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco.

President Bentley says: "This will not be any half hearted experiment. The movement has all of the substantial interests of San Francisco back of it. A bureau will be established and maintained on a scale commensurate with the needs and growing importance of San Francisco. There is sufficient financial backing already in sight to place it in a position when the organization is completed and the proper officials are in charge to take up all controversies relating to land and sea transportation lines and to bring cases before the Interstate Commerce Commission in behalf of the community. From this it is evident that the bureau will have a large and important work to preform.

It will be unlike the old traffic association which was in existence some years ago, in that it is not formed primarily to establish competitive lines of transportation. There is need for immediate action. Chicago and St. Louis and other Eastern points are pushing farther and farther into the trade territory of San Francisco by means of favoring rates. Portland and Seattle and doing the same.

A tariff had been formulated to go into effect at once that would give Los Angeles a chance to trade as far north as Goshen, Visalia and Hanford in the San Joaquin Valley. This tariff was based on mileage and ignored the barrier of the Tehachapi Mountains The Chamber of Commerce has telegraphed to Luce and Chambers, representing the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific lines, and has obtained from them delay in putting the new traiff into force.

"The encroachment of the outside trade centers in the trade area of San Francisco has been growing more menacing ever since the disaster of 1906. The business men have seen the necessity of a strong and concerted pull together in their own interests, and they will act as soon as the plans are perfected."

THE VALUE OF TACT

Salesman Who Strive to Please Win Place and Fortune

Heads of departments in large retail stores say that the most common fault with their sales-people is a marked want of tact. This, combined with an evident carelessness as to whether the customer buys or not, is said to explain why so many individulas employed in stores earn so little. "Retail salesmanship," says one man well up in a big Western establishment, "is a world in itself.

"To the man or woman who will study retail salesmanship thoroughly, find out what makes the public buy, and how to infuse enthusiasm into the public buy, and how to infuse enthusiasm into the mind of the prospective customer, there is every chance for advancement. Too many clerks get ideas about it being impossible to make progress. Those who make good selling behind the counter are the ones who take a correct view of retail salesmanship and regard it as a profession."

Nearly all of the greatest retail merchants in the country have themselves been behind the counter. There is no better training ground on earth for the future owner of a store than to sell merchandise in a big retail store.

That the contention of the storekeepers and heads of departments about a lack of interest and tact in their employees is true to a large degree can be proven by the experience of most people. Who has not been sneered at— not by word of mouth but by the manner of the clerk—when a ten cent or fifty cent purchase was made when the clerk expected it to be several times that amount? Who has not waited for several minutes looking at the backs of salespeople engaged in doing everything but waiting on customers?

"I want my clerks to be gentlemen," says one merchant who employs men. "When they can't be classified under that title they can't sell gods for me twenty-four hours. Every man, woman and child remembers the store where they have been kindly treated. I aim to make my clerks feel that everybody's call is important.

"A customer also gets grouchy if he does not get prompt attention. It's a big mistake for any store to attempt to get more people into it than can be properly waited on. Enthusiasm in the clerk begets enthusiasm in the customer. Courtesy, tact, civility and a pleasant demeanor sell goods as well as cut prices. I find men especially are keen of remembrance as to how they were treated in a certain store."

The head of a large department in one of the biggest State Street stores in Chicago vouches for the truth of the following, as told by George Brett in the Worker's Magazine: " A young man came to us three years ago and asked for a position as salesman in a certain department in this store. We asked him what his qualifications were, and he said: 'My stock in trade consists in knowing the faults of ordinary salespeople through having had to put up with them during many years of shopping.'

"He was in earnest and a man of decided intelligence. We gave him a start. It may seem incredible, but the first day he started working he sold more goods than any other clerk in the Department. He seemed to have the knack of putting customers into a good humor by laying himself out to please. He studied the customer's first remarks intently. If a man asked for a cheap article and evidently couldn't afford to pay more, he never aimed to force him into paying a higher price than his purse could afford.

"Maybe he was a good reader of human nature. Anyhow we knew him to be a star salesman. He had not been with us more than a year when a young man came in accompanied by an elderly one. The old man was the most cross-grained, obstinate and surly customer that ever walked into our store.

"But our salesman was not discouraged. He pulled down box after box, showed him one article after another with the greatest of urbanity, and ignored his rude remarks for nearly an hour. Eventually the old man seemed to get a little ashamed of his brutal speech and overbearing manner, and finally bought several articles of wearing apparel.

"While the old man was walking to another department, the young man stepped up to the counter and entered into an animated conversion with our salesman. 'Any man who can keep his temper with an individual like I brought here to-day certainly is a marvel,' was his comment to our employee.

"I've never seen anything like it. I don't care what your salary is behind that counter; I need you in my business, and whatever you're receiving here I'll give you twice as much. Put your hat and coat on and consider yourself engaged.' Our salesman told him he didn't do business that way.

"The business man then threw down his card and said: 'Well, think it over. There's no particular hurry. Look me up if you think you'd like a position at the terms named.' The upshot of the matter was that our star salesman made investigations, and being satisfied went into the young man's employ. He was getting $25 per week with us, which of course meant $50 that his new employer had to pay. I heard he made a salesman out of him. Maybe that expression is wrong.

"He may have had a few things to learn about the articles he had to sell, but on the art of salesmanship I never saw a man who seemed so thoroughly gifted by nature as the man who was with us but one short year. I understand one clerk asked him one day how he accounted for his remarkable ability to effect sales, and the crack salesman answered that the great majority of salespeople lacked tact and sympathy with customers."

THE IMPORTANCE OF SYSTEM

No Grocery Business Can Thrive For Any Time Without It.

It makes no difference who you are—you need system in your business. You may be an importer, a broker, a jobber, a wholesaler, a dealer, a salesman or clerk—without system you will be a failure.

Some people are born with system ingrained in their constitutions, but the majority have to achieve it.

System is synonymous with success. Observe the stream, whose constant dropping wears away the stone. Go study the ant or the honey bee; all nature is full of object lessons in system.

But the mere reading of the success stories of the captains of industry in the success magazines will not make of you a success if you do not learn to apply the lesson.

Briefly stated, system means getting the thing done—and quickly. Don't fritter away your time. Learn how to best conserve your energies. Study the needs of your business, and then put into it an intelligent system.

Don't start in to do a thing and then suddenly jump into something else. Make up your mind not to let anything interfere with your doing the thing that you have in hand. One thing at a time and that done thoroughly and well—that's system.

I once knew a man who could write beautiful poetry in a hall bedroom which overlooked a boiler factory There is no denying the fact that this boiler factory made noise enough to so distract the attention that nine people out of ten would have been quite unable (amid its din) to have composed a business letter—let alone poetry. And yet this poet continued to grind out verses and get good money for them. He was a success, in his way, because he had acquired the art of concentration, which is the keynote of every well organized system.

Here are some features of system which it will be well for you to bear in mind.

First. Don't be afraid of hard work. There is no royal road to success in this trade.

Second. Be honest—because it pays. There is no such thing as success in a bad business. Let your word be as good as your bond. Don't fake. Don't substitute.

Third. Learn to concentrate. The best way to achieve success is to do ONE thing.

Fourth. Cultivate cheerfulness. Look pleasant. You will catch more business with a honeyed smile than you will with a vinegary disposition. Nothing is so cheap as politeness.

Fifth. Look after the details. This does not mean that you are to let them interfere with your business. System simply makes sure that every labor and time saving device is on hand. If you are a $50 a week man, don't waste time doing things you can get a $15 a week assistant to do for you. System is helpful.

System really includes all the other business virtues, and you have got to systematize yourself before your begin to systematize your business. This means that you have got to get the right mental attitude and look after your health: and this means early to bed and early to rise. It also means allopathic doses of good light, fresh air, pure water, proper food. When you get yourself adjusted along these lines, you cannot help but be cheerful and sunshiny, and this means that you will attract others instead of repelling them. It will also get you down to your business early and give you a good foundation to start with.

Next you will proceed to systematize the place in which you work along the same lines. If you have an office, supply it with good light and fresh air, and it too will become cheerful. If you work at desk or a counter, put them in order and keep them orderly. If you are a salesman on the road, you may have already noticed that it is the neat-appearing, healthy, cheerful and well-ordered salesman who gets the order. If your are the head of a business and inculcate lessons of system in your business life, you will achieve success. If you do not, you will sooner or later achieve failure.

In conclusion, it might be well for you to bear in mind this truth: You have got to get out or get in line. In this maelstrom of our modern business life, system is of paramount importance. You have got to get out or get in line.(W. G. in "Tea and Coffee Trade Journal.)

COLD STORAGE PLANT.

It is announced that within sixty days ground will be broken at Eighth and Townsend sts. for one of the largest cold-storage and ice-making plants in the country, at a cost of $800,000. The plant will have a daily ice making capacity of 80 tons, and will contain many spacious chill rooms for the storage of perishable products. The plant will contain a total storage capacity of 1,249,200 cubic feet. The building will be constructed of concrete and is to be six stories high, with separate building for engines, boilers, ice plant, etc. The machinery will consist of an 80-ton ice plant and 270 tons refrigeration and to be operated by Corliss compound condensing engines, and to be in units so that the compressors can be operated independent of each other. C. E. Paige, with T. G. Walker, will have personal supervision of the construction of the plant. Evarts I. Blake and W. A. Cavanagh are the financial agents of the corporation.

TO SHIP OATS EAST.

Portland.—Dealers in oats are figuring on the possibility of making large shipments from Oregon and Washington to the Eastern markets this fall. Oats prices in the East are soaring, because of a partial crop failure, and values have practically reached the point now where shipments can be made across the Rockies with profit. When the new railroad rate goes into effect next month, the movement will probably begin. The new rate, which will be effective Oct. 15th, will be equivalent to a reduction of $2 per ton. The local demand for oats for general feed and milling purposes, is very strong now and prices have had a further advance, white being quoted at $26 and gray at $25 per ton. Farmers are not ready sellers and this adds to the firmness of the market. The crop in the Northwest is now figured by some dealers to be less than that of last year.

THE SKYSCRAPPER MENACE.

Does it threaten New York with a greater disaster than San Francisco?

A CATASTROPHE that will eclipse the destruction of San Francisco is the cheering prospect offered for the contemplation of New York by the president of the Board of Fire Underwriters. And it is not New York alone that is threatened, but every great city that permits the construction of skyscrappers. The underwriters think that there is not only a possibility but a very strong probability of a blaze starting in the top stories of a nest of these aerial hives and leaping across the canyons that separate them, raging aloft like a fire in the upper branches of a forest, and sweeping unchecked out of reach of the helpless firemen in the street. When office-buildings go higher than the Washington Monument all the ordinary methods of protection become obsolete. No hose can carry a stream half-way to their roofs. No street mains can furnish pressure enough to send water up in standpipes. Of course there are satisfactory methods of supplying the upper floors in ordinary times, but they would count for nothing in a conflagration. The experience of San Francisco has shown in the opinion of President Babb, that "so-called 'fireproof' buildings can not withstand the attack of a wave of flame. If a fire should sweep the financial district of New York it would cause a loss of from one to two billion dollars; the insurance companies would be hard pressed to pay twenty or twenty-five cents on the dollar, title guaranty companies, mortgage concerns, savings banks, and all other financial institutions would suffer, and the city would feel at once the loss of revenue from the destruction of taxable values.

Another menace that hangs over the skyscrapper districts of great cities is the danger of panic. It is said that if a sudden shock should send the swarming cliff-dwellers all surging to the streets at once the highways would not hold the human flood. The streets of our older cities were designed to match buildings three or four stories high. When ten such buildings are piled one on top of another, and the same thoroughfares are expected to accommodate the people from all of them, the results are likely to be startling.

BELIEVES IN EXPANSION.

Palo Alto Merchants Make Many Changes in Their Store and Give an Optimistic Report.

This office was favored with a call from the proprietor of the Compton Tea and Coffee Store of Palo Alto, during the week. During the course of the conversation we learned that business has picked up so much with Mr. Compton during the past few months, that he has been compelled to remodel his entire plant, putting in an entirely new front and doubling the width of the doorway, so that the large number of customers could come in and out without too much inconvenience. The partition between the store door and the original location was knocked down, doubling the floor space, and the rear partition was moved back 20 feet. When the store opened, it measured 25x12. It now measures 32x50, or the difference between 300 square feet and 1700 square feet. This certainly speaks well for Palo Alto and the enterprise of Mr. Compton and his employees.

WAGES AND FOOD.

Labor could buy a little more to eat last year than before

For the past ten years the incomes and expenses of the masses of the American people have been running a race. As a rule the expenses have had the best of it. Wages have increased since 1896, but by no means in proportion with the increase in the cost of living. In effect, therefore, wage-earners have been in a worse condition on the crest of a wave of prosperity than they were in the depths of hard times. But in the important item of food there has been a pretty steady gain for income over outgo, and a report just issued by the Bureau of Labor shows that this gain continued at a slackened rate last year. The average weekly earnings of each employee in the country increased by 3.9 per cent, while the cost of food used in representative workingmen's families increased by only 2.9 per cent. There was a margin of one per cent, therefore, as compared with 1905, for saving or for purchase of more comforts. As compared with the average for the cheap ten-year period, 1890-1899, wages per week were 18.5 per cent higher in 1906 and food 15.7 per cent higher.

Unfortunately man does not live by bread alone, and the increases in the cost of rent, clothing, and other necessaries have swallowed up much more than the little gains on food. And even on food the report discloses the disquieting fact that the cost was rapidly increasing through 1906, so that while the average for the whole year was less than the gain in wages the increased cost in the closing months of the year was much greater. In December, 1906, for instance, the price of food was higher by 5.1 per cent than in the same month of 1905. And is is a matter of common knowledge that prices are higher in 1907 than they were in 1906.

Out of the forty-one industries investigated by the bureau, there was only one that did not show some increase of wages in 1906. That was the manufacture of paper and wood pulp, where there was a decrease of 1.1 per cent —a decline not reflected, so far as consumers of paper are aware, in any corresponding decline in the price of the products.

TEN CENT GOODS.

The present era of high prices is likely to bring certain striking reflections in the retail trade, which as yet are not apparent to the average retailer. Both the consumer and the retailer might as well wake up to the fact that the so-called "ten-cent goods" will virtually disappear from the market until prices are lower. Goods which retail for 10 cents are as a rule sold by the jobber at from 70 to 85 cent sa dozen. They are now respectively sold at from 90 cents to a dollar. It is manifestly impossible for the retailer to market them at $1.20, paw his own expenses, and get a new dollar for an old one. Retailers who are trying are treading on dangerous ground. If they continue, their only hope is in inferior goods or bankruptcy.

The demand for 10-cent goods has forced a form of deception in the salt fish trade which the average retail grocer has not yet detected, but which is causing considerable annoyance to the jobbers. The usual multiple in which retailers buy Irish mackerel is the quarter-barrel. Jobbers buy the fish in full barrels and then repack, the popular demand being for fish counting 60-65 to the tub of 50 pounds. But since the price went up certain fish packers have been extra busy pushing fish, guaranteed to count the desired number to the tub, at prices the jobber cannot match. Considerable trade has been lost thereby and comparatively few retailers appear to have waked up to the fact that the fish are undersized and frequently do not weigh more than 40 pounds to the tub. The lower price for a tub doesn't always mean the equivalent in fish. And when the consumer today buys a ten-cent mackerel he gets less for his money than he formerly did.

CALIFORNIA PECANS.

Remarkable Adaptability of the Tree Promises Success.

"'It seems to be a question in the minds of many persons whether the pecan will become of value commercially to California or not," says the San Francisco "Chronicle," "doubtless due to the occasional discovery now and then of an isolated pecan tree which either has borne no nuts, or nuts of small size. The fact is that there is no more uncertainty about the success of the pecan in California than there is with the walnut. and, taking into ac- the matter of the ' bacterlosis' of the latter not so much risk.

"A Government bulletin says "the pecan is probably destined to become the leading nut of the American market." The pecan is bearing good crops in 25 States, no other nut being capable of successful cultivation over so large an area. Mr. George K. Holmes Chief of Division of Foreign Markets, says: "I regard the pecan as having a a greater future than any other nut raised in this country."

"For the encouragement of those who may contemplate planting pecans I can say that I have seen very large pecan trees bearing the finest quality of soft shell nuts in profusion from Butte County to Tulare, and no doubt they can be found just as prolific both further north and south. I remember particularly trees in Oroville, in Vacaville and in Grangeville, soil and conditions in every case being different but the trees all of immense height, and full of nuts as good as those usually seen in the markets.

"The pecan is being improved by selection like the walnut, and with the strong probability of seedings being raised in California that will be better suited to our conditions than the imported varieties.

"I have gathered pecans in rocky soils on rolling land in Missouri, the ground being covered with the nuts. It thrives still farther north, and down into Florida and through southern Texas. Surely, with a crop so adaptive as that, we need not fear for its success here. The walnut and pecan industries can never suffer by over-production; their uses for oil will always keep the market firm."

10,000 UNDER ONE ROOF.

Hudson Company's Terminal Will Equal a Small City.

New York's latest skyscrapper will hold two world's records, combining the largest office building with the greatest railroad passenger terminal. This city under one roof will have thirty-nine avenues in the shape of elevators, interesting twenty-two sts. in the shape of floors. The number of business persons who are to occupy offices and shops in the Hudson Company's Terminal will equal the total population of either Portsmouth, N. H.; Helena, Mont., or Middletown, Conn., and will be greater than the population of the largest town in four States, namely, Arizona, Idaho, New Mexico and Nevada.

It is estimated that 182,000,000 persons per year will pass through the station in entering and leaving trains. The new Grand Central Station is designed for a capacity of 100,000,000 passengers per year, the new Pennsylvania Station for 146,000,000, while the great South Station in Boston only handles 30,000,000, and the Broad Street Station in Philadelphia 20,000,000 people per year. From this terminal a man can go to any corner of the country through direct connection by subways with the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Lackawanna and Erie railroads.

Each floor offers an available area of about one acre for offices and the entire building will total over 22 acres of useful space above the curb line.

England and Scotland together are not as large as Indiana and Illinois combined. The state of Texas is of 265,780 square miles area; so much larger than Germany with 208,830 square miles, that the state of Illinois and a slice of Lake Michigan could be added to Germany before that country would equal Texas in size. Texas is more than three times larger than England and Scotland combined.

OUR DWINDLING FORESTS.

Can we make a bedstead in fifteen Years?

Mr. Wilson, the Secretary of Agriculture, sounds an alarm bell over the danger to our forests. It is literally a fire alarm, for the Secretary says that "forest fire is the one great thing to be guarded against." He predicts that if better care is not taken, and a more general propagation is not carried out, our forests will practically disappear within the next ten years. The pine timber of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, he asserts, is already substantially wiped out, and unless we do something we shall not have enough hard wood in fifteen years "to make an old-fashioned bedstead with." Possibly that may stretch strict accuracy a trifle, but the case is serious enough even if we have wood enough left for a whole bedroom set.

Secretary Wilson observes truly that President Roosevelt has done much for the preservation of our forests—"more, I might truthfully say, than all of our Presidents combined." A glance at the map of the National Forest in 1907 and at another of the forest reserves in 1901 is sufficient confirmation of this statement.

Neverthless, there is one thing which neither President Roosevelt nor Secretary Wilson has done, and which would be very decidely worth doing. It is known to all that our intelligent government offers large rewards for the destruction of our forests, coupled with fines upon all who try to check that destruction by supplying part of our timber-needs from abroad. The American people think they must use so much lumber every year. The more they can get from foreigners, the less they need to cut at home. But our enlightened tariff provides that everybody who brings a pine board into the country shall pay a heavy tax on it, and that anybody who cuts one out of our dwindling forests shall be entitled to collect a premium out of the pockets of the domestic consumer equivalent to the tax levied on the person who taps the foreign supply and saves our own. President Roosevelt and Secretary Wilson have not shown as much energy in attacking this wrong as in some crusades. Perhaps its turn may come.

MILK SUPPLY IN DANGER.

The milk situation is one which ought to be looked into by someone, else there will shortly be a real famine in that valued comodity of food. Not that eventually the supply of milk will not respond to the intensity of the demand as reflected in price, but the needs of today are sadly jeopardized.

Milk was never in so general demand, or used in so many ways, as at present. Yet at the same moment there are indications that the supply is growing rapidly less. First of all, milk is more generally drunk than ever. Take into consideration the domestic consumption at Soda fountains, the rapid multiplication of dairy lunches and lunch carts, the great demand with the immense variety of breakfast foods and the increase in its use as a factor in bar drinks. Then count in the tremendous demand for milk for condensing, in which form milk is used more generally day by day, and in that form stored up for months ahead. Factories for powdering milk are also coming into existence everywhere. In fact, milk is today in greater and more varied demand than ever before.

As against this consider the way the supply is being reduced. This particular season has been one of flat failure in the grass and hay crop throughout the Eastern States. The dry weather of the summer has made milk producing very questionable from the standpoint of the farmer. The yield of milk has been small and his expenses, especially for help, never so high. If he keeps his herds he sees ahead immense expense for hay during this winter, and in his extremity he is, in scores of instances, reducing his herds by selling to the slaughter houses Then again the recent regulation of the health authorities, however designed and jusutified they may be, impose extra expense and burdens on the milkman. In disgust he quits milking.

All in all, both the producing and the consuming phases of the milk industry need attention from some serious, broad-minded, thinking men. There is no time to be lost.

SHORT WEIGHT EVIL.

The campaign which a number of grocery trade papers are booming against the practices of putting up short-weight goods is producing interesting results all along the line. Nor is it probable that the evil is confined to the West, and grocers elsewhere will do well to pay attention to the advice: "Measure, weigh, count everything." Since the agitation commenced, shortage has been detected in about every kind of package goods shipped to the West and South. Sugar in barrels, mackerel in kegs and barrels, pickles, package groceries of all kinds, preserves and tobacco have all been found guilty. The latest, and perhaps one of the worst deceptions, appears to be on cheese. A writer in one of the Western papers, tells his experiences with a carload of cheese, which illustrates the situation. The shortage may have been small in proportion, but at present prices it was vast in the aggregate and was a disgrace to the shipper as an honorable merchant.

"I was in Little Rock last week," he says, "when a car of cheese came in. I told the consignee to weigh it. He laughed, but finally did so. Then he threw up his hands in horor. The whole car ran two and a half pounds short to the hoop. Think what that means! The car was shipped from Chicago. I know one jobbing house that sends out literature denouncing short-weight cheese. They are shipping out short weight cheese all the time."

Butter men who have been investigating the causes of the falling off of the milk supply from Western creameries are advised from some sections of the West that so discouraged are the milk producers that they have commenced selling their cattle for slaughter. Usually this thinning of the herds does not take place till later in the fall, but high prices for meat and low yield of milk have discouraged the cattlemen.

The illustration shows our double mill, No. 08712, with motor for direct current; one mill fitted with grinders for granulating, and the other for pulverizing. Each iron hopper holds six pounds of coffee. There are two speeds, fast and slow, which can be instantly changed from one to the other; at fast speed this mill granulates three pounds of coffee, or with ½ H. P. motor for alternating current. The latter for slow speed only Can be regulated while running for grinding either fine or coarse.

THE RETAIL GROCERS ADVOCATE

EARL D. EDDY, EDITOR. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., OCTOBER 18 1907. VOL. 12. NO. 41.

Earning Fair Profits.

How Every Dealer Can Help Himself By Helping His Association.

Many dealers, when a neighbor cuts on a protected article sit down and howl: "The Association is no good. My competitor is cutting!"

This is a mistake.

The Association is all right. The fault is with him. He has not used the organization.

Each dealer is a part of the Association. As soon as he knows of a cut, he should phone the Association headquarters. This is not "squealing" nor "tale bearing." It is simple common sense.

That is what his organization is for.

If he fails to report the cut promptly, he interferes with the work of the Association by just that much.

The price of flour, today, is $1.60. If a competitor is selling for less, it can't be stopped unless the Association knows about it. The only way we can know is by being told. TELL US.

No word is given as to the source the information. The cutter is seen and the cutting will be stopped.

Do your share.

Come to the Association meetings.

Talk things over with your neighbors.

GET TOGETHER. That is the secret of success. YOU can help make the Association a success. Without YOUR help the Association is a failure.

Grocers must get better margins now than ever before. Everything costs more. Many dealers are losing money who do not know it. Do not be one of the losers.

Are you in business for fun or because you want to work for your neighbors and the millionaire manufacturer for nothing?

Of course not.

Then "stand in" with your fellow dealers, as the scavengers do, as the bootblacks do, as the carpenters do, and get "a fair day's pay for a fair day's work."

BEER BOTTLERS DECIDE.

Three Concerns Take Action to Protect Retail Dealers in Their Profits.

TACOMA.
OLYMPIA.
RAINIER.

These beers cannot be sold for less than 2 for 25c. after Monday, Oct. 21st, and this price holds for Olympia beer today.

The other beer bottlers say: "If the grocers want a 2 for 25c. price, we will give it to them. We think they want a 10c price."

It is now up to you, Mr. Grocer.

There is only one way that you can show your desire to get a 2 for 25c price. It is this:

"SELL ONLY SUCH BEERS AS CAN NOT BE SOLD FOR 10c BY YOUR COMPETITORS."

Concerted action by the grocers in refusing to handle 10c. beers will show the bottlers of those beers the action the trade want them to take and they will take that action inside of 30 days. If enough of the grocers refuse to handle 10c beers.

Time for Action at Hand.

For nearly six weeks the management of the Associated Retail Grocers have sought to show the local bottlers why they should protect the selling price of their beers. With great patience and conservatism the matter has been gone over in all its phases.

The first contention of the bottlers was that as many grocers wanted a 10c price as wanted a 2 for 25c price. It took nearly a month to gather the data that showed that only one dealer in 100 wanted a 10c price, although many were selling at that price because they had to.

Then several of the bottlers said: "We want to protect the grocers in their profits, but if we do, certain bottlers will at once make a raid on our trade and take it from us by letting the dealers sell at 10c per bottle.

At last, it centered to the Wreden Brewing Co. Then Henry Wreden said: "I want to see the grocers get a profit." When Mr. Wreden was willing to maintain prices, his competitors backed down.

War Is Now On.

The local bottlers have declared that if the grocers support the men who protect them in their profits, they will cut the price of beer to a figure that will mean a loss to everybody.

It is up to the grocers now to see that the goose that lays the golden eggs is not killed.

Every dealer who is a business man knows that beer at 10c does not give the merchant a margin that leaves a profit after the store expenses are accounted for.

Why Action Is Necessary.

Every man who sells a 10c beer makes it harder to sell beer for 2 for 25c.

Every man who refuses to sell a 10c beer makes it harder for the bottlers not to put a fair price on their product.

The people most anxious for a 10c price are the Greek and Italian fish markets and fruit stands. These men keep no clerks, their places are cheap rent. The proprietors live so cheaply that their expenses are almost nothing.

The bottlers who force self-respecting American citizens to meet this competition do them a great injustice.

Do you think they treat you fairly when they consider these men before you?

There are certain other dealers who get an inside price from the bottlers. They think they can afford to sell at 10c.

Do you think the bottlers treat you fairly when they supply your competitor with the means to buy your trade away?

Certain other grocers say: "Our trade demands a 10c beer. We must sell it.

This is only true when there IS a 20c beer. If all beer sold at 2 for 25c, nearly all these people would pay the price. The extra profit on the trade that would remain would more than make up for what would be lost.

The Direct Sale Bug-a-Boo.

Some bottlers say: "We will go direct to the families."

Their success will be very limited. The great mass of families who drink 10c beer do not want a dozen bottles in the house at once. They know that if they have that quantity of beer in the house, they will drink more than they can afford to.

They buy one or two bottles at a time because that is enough for one meal. They get it cold. They don't drink too much.

What Grocers Should Do.

Every dealer should put big signs in his window naming the protected beers and with a big sign, "2 for 25c."

When customers say: "I can get beer for 10c," they can say: "We found the 10c beers were not satisfactory. Our beer is the best on the market. We only handle the best."

Every grocer should say to the 10c beer men: "When you refuse to let my competitors sell your beer for 10c, I will put it in gladly."

About the 10c. Trade.

In some neighborhoods there will be a great demand for 10c beer. The dealers there will feel that they must meet this competition to keep their customers.

Dealers who feel that they MUST keep 10c beer in stock, should keep it under the counter.

They should put only two for 25c beer in their ice chests.

To customers who ask for beer they should offer the two for 25c beer first. When the cutsomer insists on a 10c beer, they should explain that, while they have it, it is not on the ice and that the two for 25c beer is much better in quality.

They should complain to the salesmen of the 10c beer and ask him to protect the price. If enough men selling at 10c do this, they will get the results they want.

The Dealer Who Is Tied.

Some dealers are tied by circumstances to some particular local bottler. These dealers should tell that bottler that they think he ought to protect the price, for if every bottler did it—and all said they were willing once—there would be loss of trade to nobody. They should AT LEAST put the two for 25c beer in stock and push its sale.

Beware of Schemers.

The bottlers of 10c beer will be offering their product at cut prices.

BEWARE! Even at 75c per dozen, there is less profit in 10c beer than in $1.00 beer at two for 25c.

As soon as they break up the movement for a two for 25c price, beer will go back to the old 95c and $1 price again.

..Be loyal to your friends. This will gain you MORE friends.

Next week we will tell of the plans perfected at the big meeting of Thursday night.

STORE BURGLARIZED.

Eureka, Cal. — The little grocery store of W. W. Shipley at Trinidad was burglarized a few days ago and goods to the value of between $25 and $30 were taken. Entrance was gained by forcing a rear door which was fastened with an ordinary rim lock, but even in doing this the thief showed himself a novice and did a very bungling job. His plunder consisted of provisions, cigars and dry goods. The money drawer, which however contained only a few dimes and nickles, was not molested. There is no clue to the robber. Sheriff Ferrill, who went from here to investigate the case reports that "he has his suspicions but they are scattered."

A DEAD BEAT IS?

A First Class Definition of That Pest of The Retailer.

This office this week received a letter from A. D. Jordan, the clever secretary of the Retail Dealer's Association of San Diego, Cal. which reads as below:

"I find on Page 35 of the Advocate of October 4th some pertinent remarks headed "The Cash Buyer Pays Bills of Dead Beats."

"The language therein used is good and forcible but not strong enough.

"A sneak thief and petty larcenist is a gentleman in comparison with the dead beat, as the larcenist has some courage, some manhood, while the dead beat is a coward by nature and a thief at heart.

"The law does not designate him as a thief, but that is the fault of the law and not of the principle.

"The suggestion in your article contained that there should be an enactment of the legislature making the crime of obtaining goods, necessaries of life, without intent to pay therefor, come under the head of "obtaining goods under false pretenses," is good.

"I would suggest to you, and pledge myself to do all in my power to assist in the passage of a law placing "dead-beating" under the same heading as "obtaining goods under false pretenses," and the failure to pay a reasonable amount within six months after contraction of a debt for the necessaries of life prima facie evidence of obtaining goods under false pretenses, with a corresponding penalty.

"The merchant and taxpayer is called upon to support through the medium of taxation, the county farm and the poor house, but it is unjust, inequitable and an indefensible imposition to allow the cowardly dead beat to exact farther tribute from the merchant and the taxpayer to supply his artificial wants or his corrupt desires.

"I do not hesitate to say that in my opinion, (the result of many years experience), the professional dead beat is the most contemptible of all nature's creations.

"There are exceptional cases in which an honest man may become temporarily embarrassed for finances, but upon a proper showing no jury would ever find him guilty of a crime, consequently there would be no miscarriage of justice; but by placing dead-beatism in a class of legal crimes, which it really is, with a fair prospect of punishment a more healthy financial condition must prevail.

"There was in the no distant past a time in the history of San Diego when her retail financial credit was almost at low tide, to-day she is rated amongst the best on the Pacific Coast.

"This I honestly believe, (and my belief is concurred in by many responsible and practical business men of this city), is the result of eight years of tireless and relentless prosecution of dead beats, regardless of their standing in society, or of their financial responsibility, and I firmly believe that the enactment of a properly worded anti-dead-beat law would result in inestimable benefit to the State of Cailfornia.

"Such a law need not be in the nature of the ancient English anti-debtor law. Your Field Secretary, with his experience, and I with mine, can produce evidence that in the cities where the dead beat is treated as he justly should be—a common thief—the retail merchant is prosperous, and bankruptcy is the exception and not the rule as it is in cities where the dead beat is without opposition."

A. D. JORDAN.

EVERDING BUILDING.

J. Everding has bought the lot adjoining the present location on Clay street, near Drumm. He will erect a fireproof building of three stories, and also add two stories to his adjoining building and connect the two.

PAYING THE COST.

At this time of unprecendented high prices one hears a great deal of complaint, designed to indicate that everyone connected with the grocery trade is a robber or a highwayman, whose chief aim in life is evidently to extort the last possible penny out of the poor consumer. And yet people who indulge in talk of that sort are not as a rule prepared to point out just who is the chief buccaneer or to show how the "robbery" may be brought to an end.

It is eminently unjust to charge the grocer with extortion, be he jobber or retailer. As a matter of fact, both are running dangerously near the road to bankruptcy in their efforts to protect favored trade and what advances in charges they have made have been actually forced upon them by sheer self-preservation. At the recent convention of New York State retailers one of the speakers said:

> "It will not do for the retail grocer to argue himself into the belief that he is making ten cents a dozen on tomatoes when he pays $1.10 for them and sells them for $1.20. But it is in fact a loss. If a man sold one hundred dozen cans a day his profit would only figure $10. It would keep two men and a cashier pretty busy to handle that many tomatoes, in ten-cent lots, in a day. They would all have to work nights and Sundays, taking care of the store. If they dealt in nothing but tomatoes and paid rent and other expenses, there would be nothing left for the laborers."

The fact of the case is that an unprecedented combination of circumstances surrounds the grocery trade and the sooner grocers and consumers alike appreciate it the better it will be for all concerned. On the part of the retailer there is imperative need for his facing the issue squarely for him-

Schilling's Best

is at home wherever grocers are alive to their interests.

self, irrespective of what his neighbor is doing. The persistent way, for instance, in which the retailer seeks to preserve the "ten-cent" line, is vastly dangerous, not to say pathetic.

The whole truth is that every element of cost which enters into the grocery product is high. Most of the crops are this year short and that in addition to the fact that the preceding year was alike short. The packer starts the wail with a complaint of high labor, scarcity of workmen, high cost tin plate, food laws which forced him into the purchase of new labels, high cost packing cases, increased freights, high insurance rates and a shortage of cars to transport his goods, involving demurrage charges, etc. Next comes the jobber, with the complaint of high cost clerks, high rents, high storage rates, high freight charges, heavy insurance, high rates of interest on borrowed money, new labels if he owns private brands, high taxes, extra transportation charges due to his forced shipment in small, rather than large, lots, and various readjustments due to the pure food law.

These are all very real facts and no one can deny that they have added materially to the cost of the goods in the wholesaler's hands. The average jobber is wise enough to know that he cannot do business unless he makes a profit. Some, however, persist in doing business for the fun of the thing, selling certain lines—notably sugar—at cost and then expecting to come out at the end of the year with money in the bank. The average wholesaler, however, admits the truth and regretfully raises his charge to the retailer. It is the retaler who, as a rule, fails to understand the situation and cannot comprehend why goods are so high. He tries to maintain the old schedule. The fight for the "ten-cent" goods is a case in point. And the end is clear. It is sad that 95 per cent of those who start out as retail grocers fail in business eventually.

It cannot be denied that the cost of carrying on the retail grocery business has increased immensely, especially in this city, within a few years. Rents which were two or three years ago $25 a month are now $45 or $50. Clerks cost more; so do telephones. Insurance is higher and so is the cost of maintaining a delivery outfit, thanks to the added cost of grain, feed, hay, etc. This year the grocer has had less chance for making money because he has had less green fruit and vegetables to handle, usually a profitable crop In his effort to keep prices at the old level, or somewhere near it—for the retailer comes into actual contact with the frugal housewife and fears to offend her—he has either lost money or run dangerously near the cost. In either event he has neglected to count in the actual expense of doing business as a part of the cost of his goods. Then, again, being a good-natured, kind-hearted grocer, he has been lax in his collections, though the wholesaler, and especially the butcher, has had no mercy in pressing him for collections. The sum total of the retailer's lack of hard-headed, calculating business judgment is that he comes out with no money in the bank or with a balance on the wrong side, as certified by sundry 'I. O. U's."

This may appear a somewhat gloomy view of the situation, but in the eyes of the grocers who do a deal of serious thinking it is absolutely true. First look on that picture and then on that of the complaining consumer. Then take an honest view of the facts. The conclusion is inevitable If wages must be high, if money lenders will be conservative or exacting, if crops will fail and if people will demand everything the market affords, the consumer must pay the cost. And no known system of sympathetic ethics can beat it.—"N. Y. Journal of Commerce."

WORDS OF CHEER.

Southern Editor Writes Advocate Letter of Much Interest.

This office is in receipt of the following letter from the Editor of the "Memphis Journal of Commerce" published in Memphis, Tennesse, and the official organ of the Retail Grocers' and General Merchants Association of Tennessee:

"Your highly appreciated letter of September 25th was duly received along with two extra copies of the Advocate, for which we wish to thank you for your kindness. We have read much of the proceedings, besides having loaned them to Secretary George E. Dunn, of our Retail Merchants' Association, who is a close reader of trade papers and a most successful manager of the organization.

"You are due great credit for the able manner in which you handled your State Convention, both in arousing interest in the large attendance in advance of the meeting, as well as furnishing a most elaborate and comprehensive report of the three days' highly important proceedings, comprising the addresses, discussions, ideas and suggestions so thoroughly educative to the members present, as well as for the edification of all good retail grocers and retail merchants who do not fail to read trade journals, and very especially the reports of their regular, more particularly their annual meetings...Every retailer who did not get to the convention has a fine opportunity of learning of what transpired at the three days' sessions from a consistent perusal of your many pages containing the annual report of the California Convention, to their great individual information and benefit.

"We have a very interesting letter from Secretary John A. Green, written us on his and Mrs. Green's return home from your City and State meetings, which we have written him that it shows the broad scope of his thought and excellent work for the National Association, that we shall run the letter in our November issue for the stimulation of organization in the South.

"We note your reference to the article referring to the question of the manufacturer maintaining the retail selling price of his goods. We have had ths question under consideration since the Dallas convention in January, but as yet the trade papers in the South and East have not gone far in regard to the advocation of that measure owing to the rigidity of the anti-trust laws, etc. However, the question of maintaining prices is being made more thoroughly understood and guarded against by retailers in their association meetings in this country, which is practically systematizng retal trade conditions, especially in the cities and large trading points. That has very much remedied the evil of price cutting among retailers in the different lines of trade.

"Congratulating you on your successful publication in the promotion of the valuable work of your organization, hoping it will ever prove continuous and grow in power and usefulness to the retailers of the Golden West, as a sustaining arm of the National Retail Grocers' Association, we remain

Yours very truly,

W. S. HEMBY,

SUGAR.

This commodity has again advanced, showing an advance of 10c since our last report.

New York, Oct. 10.—Willett & Gray report:

The week.—Raws: Unchanged. Refined: Unchanged. Net cash quotations this date are: Molasses, 3.00c; Centrifugals, 3.95c.; Granulated, 4.65c.

Raws.—There has been no change in quotations for Centrifugals during the week.

The influence of the weather in the United States on the domestic cane and beet crops has not been quite as favorable in some sections for high results and possibly somewhat less Louisiana and domestic best sugars will be made than anticipated.

Weather reports from Cuba indicate a decided lack of the necessary rains to produce satisfactory crop results, and definite advices begin to come to hand of special difficulties on many estates.

The visible supply of sugar in the world at last available dates is 61,912 tons less than last year.

Refined.—The demand has been good throughout the week. The country is on hand to mouth basis as to carrying stocks and must constantly replenish.

All indications point to a firm steady market, with a fairly large distribution for the month of October.

The notable feature of the week in refined sugars is an advance of 20c. per 100 lbs. in San Francisco to 5.10c. for cane and 4.90c. for Beet Granulated. This is full recovery of the recent declines in the market and indicates a renewal of harmonious action on a normal basis, whic hwill prove favorable for the beet sugar industry, especially at this time of the largest movement of domestic sugars.

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co. say under date of Oct. 14:

"The market still continues firm on Fancy Heads and prices show no change. There are more new crop Japans being offered but all lots are held for stiff prices.

New York, Oct. 8th.—Dan Talmage's Son's Co., report:

"Demand for the week has been active. Assortments are not as full as might be desired, and buyers find some difficulty in filling bare spots of medium sorts. Receipts are light. As a result of light supply and brisk demand, prices are well sustained.

"Advices from the South note moderate receipts on the Atlantic Coast, and sufficient demand to take all offerings at full figures. Planters are taking great care in threshing, which so far has yielded good results both as to quantity and quolity. At New Orleans demand is active and market strong. The strike of the freight handlers has put an embargo on the shipments via the Southern PacificCo. and interfered greatly with the distribution of all products.

"In the Interior—Southwest Louisiana and Texas—demand is reported as active. Constant rains have interfered with harvesting and threshing. The strike on the Southern Pacific has held up shipments from Southwest Louisiana, and the plethora of freight from the far West (dried fruits etc.) is taxing the capacity of transportation companies to the full, and delaying shipments of rice to Northern and Eastern points.

CANNED CORN.

Corn appear to be good property. The talk about a reduced pack appears to have been founded on fact, instead of hot air. The output of the middle western corn packing states, it is said, will not exceed 75 per cent of the average pack. In New York state they only promise a delivery of 40 per cent. With regard to the Maine pack, the following dispatch explains the situation there.

Portland, Me., Oct. 9.—Corn packing is practically over in Maine, and nearly all the canners have shut down their shops. There are a few still running, but to all intents and purposes the season has ended. Packers are figuring up the percentages they will be able to deliver on their future contracts, and it is likely that only a small number will make full deliveries. Deliveries will run between 50 and 80 per cent, perhaps the average in the near neighborhood of 70 per cent.

SUCCOTASH.

For some reason or other, eastern packers have neglected this favorite vegetable combination this year. The new pack will be limited in supply and the price will go up in sympathy with that condition.

BEANS.

It now appears that the total crop of pinks, small whites and Lady Washingtons is less this year than for many seasons and prices are in accordance therewith.

EVAPORATED MILKS.

The standard brands have again advanced as predicted in our "Points to Watch" not long since. There may be still further advances, however, ere long.

CHEESE.

The various makes of cheese, both state and eastern, are advancing rapidly.

MACKEREL.

Reports from Europe are to the effect that fishing in Norway is very poor, making it certain that high prices will prevail. Similar conditions rule with respect to Irish mackerel.

CANNED SALMON.

As forecasted for several months previous to the actual knowledge of the size of the pack, it is constantly becoming more difficult to secure goods in this line. This condition, of course, applies to jobbing quantities, but the retailer must feel the effect of the exisiting conditions in advancing prices very soon.

SARDINES.

The market in this line continues to advance with no prospect, whatsoever, of any cessation in the movement. This applies to both domestic and imported goods. This week quotations on domestic sardines were advanced by the packers 15c per case for quarter oils, and 50c per case on three quarter mustards. This advance is attributed to a shortage due mainly to the scarcity of cans. While waiting for a settlement of the label and decoration question under the pure food law, packers were deterred from making their contracts for cans until such a late date that they were unable to get anywhere near what they wanted from the manufacturers. The destruction by fire of practically the only factory equipped to supply the trade with key opening cans further complicated their difficulties. Fish appear to have been as plentiful as usual, but the packers have been unable to avail themselves of the supply to anything like the extent that the demands made upon them for goods would have suggested. The situation in three-quarter mustards is said to be practically complicated not only by the can question, but by the heavy increase in demand for that grade this season. For some reason the canners have allowed the quality of mustards to depreciate and as their indifference to quality extended over a number of years it resulted in a large accumulation of stock in their hands and a corresponding slump in prices. The last of this accumulation was disposed of not very long ago and now the packers find themselves not noly without stocks, but on account of the great improvement that has been mode in the quality of the goods their popularity is restored, greatly increased in fact, and the factories are all much behind their orders.

HAY.

Somers & Co. report under date of Oct. 15:

"Only 2930 tons of Hay have been brought to market for the week ending to-day in comparison with 3740 tons for last week. This quantity was hardly sufficient to supply the demand with the result that city stocks have been called on to a considerable extent. To within the last day or two prices continued along about at the old range, although the market showed an under-current of great strength. Now, however, there is a marked advance in prices and this will continue unless it is possible to bring n more country stocks rght away. In our opinion the market will continue to advance until a range is reached that will worrant the unloading of the Bay wharehouses which will probably begin by the first of November.

Town trade is fairly active, about as much so as is ever experienced this time of the year. This would seem to indicate that in spite of the discouraging reports of conditions here that there is nevertheless something going on. At the moment we see nothing to discourage the outlook for a firm healthy market throughout the winter. Present quotations we give as follows:

Choice Wheat Hay	$19.00 to $22.00
Good Wheat Hay	17.00 to 18.00
Other grades same	12.00 to 16.00
Wheat & Oat	12.00 to 17.00
Tame Oat	11.00 to 16.50
Wild Oat	10.00 to 13.50

PROTECT THEIR PRICES.

Big Syrup People Show Their Friendlil ness For The Retailer By Action Noted Below.

Another manufacturer has become satisfied that the retail grocers who operate their stores in a businesslike manner and for an honest profit, are entitled to protection from the tactics of cutters who care not who or where they strike.

In a letter received by the Secretary of the State Grocers Association, the Pacific Coast Syrup Co., the manufacturer referred to, says:

"In view of the fact that some of the staple articles handled by the retail grocers of San Francisco have been handled without the amount of profit that the merchants are entitled to, we have taken this method of protecing them, making a uniform retail price which allows them the profit they should receive.

"It is our intention to see that these prices are maintained, on Tea Garden Dips as well as all lines we manufacture.

"Any assistance you might give us regarding anyone who does not maintain these prices would be greatly appreciated.

"If you would kindly publish this new schedule in your paper, the "Grocers' Advocate," it would undoubtedly refresh the minds of the grocers, as we will notify each and every one of them."

The card now being distributed reads as follows:

On and after October 10, 1907
TEA GARDEN DRIPS
will retail as follows:

1 GALLON TINS .....90 cts
½ GALLON TINS.....50 cts
¼ GALLON TINS.....30 cts

Pacific Coast Syrup Co.

The prices named above are effective in the Bay territory and will be put in effect throughout the State very shortly.

The action of the Pacific Coast Syrup Co. entitles that firm to the heartiest support of the retail grocery trade of California.

NATIONAL WHOLESALERS GROW.

New Members Coming in Despite Increased Dues.

That the National Association of Wholesale Grocers is steadily growing in favor is shown by the steady accessions of members received by Secretary Beckman. In June the association performed the unusual action of increasing its dues from a basis of $10 a year to a sliding scale of dues based on the member's rating in the commercial lists, running from $10 to $200. Despite this tremendous increase in dues, only eight of the 500 members have resigned and over 30 new houses have applied for membership. The association is becoming more and more national in its scope and gradually wholesalers in the South are coming to realize that the national body does not compete with or antagonize the purposes of the Southern association, which has members in sixteen States of the South. The National Association now has members in Alabama, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Maryland, some of whom are members of both organizations.

ALPINE CONDENSED MILK CO.

Gonzales.—Messrs. Patrick & Meyenburg of Hollister were here this week with Donald Davies and a survey of the land they will need for the site of the company's milk factory, which will be located on the Gonzales estate's lands across the railroad track opposite D. L. Rodriguez' place of business. The sum of $50,000 will be invested in the new enterprise.

CARDBOARD BOXES TO REPLACE WOOD.

According to the local freight agents wooden boxes for packing purposes are doomed. Cardboard cases in carload lots are arriving daily from the East consigned mostly to wholesale grocers. This substitution for wooden boxes is due to the recent advances in price and scarcity of lumber.

Of course San Francisco has troubles and some of them look pretty large in print. But as a matter of the city's business is growing larger and greater all the time. Take a week in September for instance. In a certain week the city's bank clearings aggregated $43,969,000 against $30,316,-113 of last year. The total clearings for the same period of Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Spokane, and Tacoma put together were only $41,292,000. San Francisco therefore did more business than all the other cities of the Pacific Coast combined.

POTATO PENCILS.

The fact that cedar wood suitable for making lead pencils is expensive and the supply growing rapidly less has led some German scientists to invent a process for making lead pencils and it is said that in a short time the wooden pencil will be driven out of the market. The new product is slightly heavier than the cedar wood article, but is the same in size, form and appearance, admits of sharpening more easily, and can be made at a nominal price.

A company has been founded in Berlin to manufacture the article. The cost of manufacture is estimated at $0.00928. The second quality pencil can be made at a cost of only $0.00595.

At the estimated production of 48,000 pencils a day, the yearly production would be 14,000,000 pencils. Exports of these pencils from Germany to foreign countries for a year equaled 15,166 tons, or a total of 3,033,200 pencils.

Willows.—Glenn County will have 1000 acres in rice next year. A. C. Henshaw, the pioneer rice grower came to Willows last week and leased 400 acres of land from the Sacramento Valley Land Co. and will begin at once to prepare it for next spring's planting. He also entered into a partnership with a second party, whose name has not been disclosed, and the two will put in a 600-acre field. There is great interest taken here in this crop and many more fields may be planted. The Government party which which is to experiment with rice on what is known an our "goose land" is expected to arrive within the next month, and this experiment will be watched with great interest. If it is found that rice will thrive on this land it will make Glenn the greatest county in the State.

FOREIGN POSTAGE RATE LOWER.

Weight Allowance Doubled. With Five-Cent Unit Unchanged.

A virtual reduction of the foreign rate of postage, without changing the 5-cent unit, and the establishment of a system of international "reply postage will go into effect to-day in all countries which have subscribed to the Universal Postal Convention at Rome. While the rate unit on a foreign letter remains at 5 cents, the weight is increased to twice the present allowance so that instead of being limited to half an ounce the writer may now place a full ounce of correspondence in a foreign letter, while the rate for overweight is reduced from 5 to 3 cents.

This change will do away almost entirely with the rating up of underpaid foreign letter mail and thus save time in the post-office and money to the home to which a "rated up" letter is sent.

The second change is the establishment of a "reply coupon" or "Coupon-Rosponse International." These are to be sold at all postoffices for 6 cents each. Upon presentation of such a coupon at a postoffice in any one of the countries subscribing to the convention the holder will receive, without charge, a postage stamp of that country equivalent in value to a 5-cent stamp. By this arrangement a person in the United States can furnish his correspondents in foreign countries with postage stamps with which to prepay the postage on replies to his letters.

Work With a Purpose.

Long ago some wise man evolved a maxim—"Shoemaker stick to your last!" The wisdom of it is more apparent in these strenuous days than ever before. It is defined to signify that he who changes much accomplishes but little.

A young man who believes in himself, who is confident that he has powers, that "there is something in him," should first of all select the field in which he expects to carve out his fortune. He may not be able to determine upon this at once. Experimenting may be necessary, but too much time should not be spent in experiments. Then having determined what his life work is to be he should knuckle down to it with a will and a stern determination to stick to it until he has succeeded.

The life without a strong purpose is a life wasted. Moving about from one place to another aimlessly and reconstructing other plans is a mere waste of energy. The mind is the thing that leads. Unless it has shaped the model for all the rest of the faculties—unless the mind has picked out the thing to be done—life is a mere gable: maybe "luck" will hand you a few good things; maybe it will not—the chances all are that it will not.

PANHANDLERS' ANNUAL.

On Wednesday evening, October 9th the Pan Handle Retail Grocers held their annual meeting and high jinks out at the "Gobbler Roost" on the Ocean Beach.

"The Gobblers" are a secret society, of grocers and their friends. The San Francisco lodge is known as "Roost No. 5," the other roosts being located in Denver, New York, Boston and Chicago.

A number of candidates were initiated into the mysteries of Gobblerdom.

After the ceremonies were over those present gathered about the festive board which had been bounteously laden with good things and liquids, under the supervision of Messrs. Von Isendorf Bros., the grocers.

At a late hour the gathering broke up, voting the hosts' capital good fellows.

Clerk's Corner.

HINTS FOR CLERKS.

As clerks there is one thing that we must sooner or later recognize, and that is the fact that we are living in a progressive age. We cannot expect to see the world whirling onward while we ourselves are standing still. We may seem to be as firmly intrenched in our position to-day as we were last year, but are we? We know not when the thunderbolt of retribution may fall. When it does you may be sure we deserve it. We alone are responsible for our own progress. One writer very aptly describes the fellow who is always just a little behind in the procession in the following manner: "There are some people who always fall a little short of successful achievement. They put up an offer for the corner lot the day after it is sold. They get an idea just after some one else has seized the same thing and put it to use. They finish a production just after the market is glutted; they buy goods just after the fashion has changed to something else. Even when some one gives them a good swift kick from behind with an impetus toward success they never get up enough momentum to carry them through; they stop a little short of the goal from the sheer weight of heir own inertness. This is why so many men never get beyond mediocrity in any calling. They make fairly good help for some one who can watch and keep spurring them to cover the ground in some kind of decent time; but when they have done their best and others have added to this they never amount to much. The fellow who makes his mark is the one who sees things and never lets go of the proposition until he lands somewhere."

Successful salemanship means a great many things. One might write page after page, book after book, and not exhaust the subject of salesmanship. Some say it includes in its study every drop of knowledge science has ever drained from the brains of the greatest discoverers. It includes all the mathematics ever solved since the birth of language and writing. It includes the brain and the brawn of every man since "Adam delved and Eve span." This however is open to discussion. On this point there is room for more than one honest opinion. It is not likely that any man will ever master it in its entirety. We who study it carefully can only get around its outer edge, occasionally digging deeper than usual and bringing forth a new truth.

The clerk's life can be a pleasant one if he be disposed to make it so; or, it can be a continual torment and thorn in the flesh. If he will cultivate first of all good health he can hardly find life, no matter where it is passed, other than a joyous voyage. If he will cultivate his mind he will recognize the more readily the shams and oddities he comes in contact with in every day life. He will be able to appreciate the efforts of the loud-mouthed man who wants to impress his fellow men with his richness, or the pompous old fellow, who used to work in a livery stable in his boyhood, trying to make believe he was born to the purple and was used to it from his infancy. The shams he will be able to discover to his own mind's pleasure and profit. The oddities he will commiserate and condole.

The well poised clerk is not easily vexed. He does not swear his thoughts in his face. It is always a sign of weakness when a fellow is easily provoked. Sound yourself on this point. Of course it goes without saying that the clerk must not be a machine—he must not phelmatically bear insults, be trampled upon, and what not. The clerk must be able to take care of himself but he must not be looking for hidden insults. Says the wise man, "A fools wrath is presently known," so that in his day the world has its estimate of fiery tempered individuals who are in the habit of expressing their feelings on the spot. As the shallowest lakes develop the quickest and fiercest storms so also do the shallowest brains recognize and resent the hidden and imaginary insults.

Window Dressing.

BY S. W. ROTH
(Copyrighted.)

"These fine goods must go to make room for full lines. That is why the price is cut."

"Nothing better in the market. The package or labels are damaged from handling. That's all."

One great fault that is common with inexperienced window dressers is that of overcrowding their windows. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the novice to put in a few more articles after he has in enough. There always appears to him to be yet another good place for a few more packages. This crowding is fatal to the effectiveness of the display. It is a wise window trimmer who knows just when to stop putting more goods in the window. The beginner will be almost certain to make the mistake of overcrowding his window. But with a little experience he will learn to avoid this error.

TRICK WINDOWS.

People who are fond of humor are often lead to believe that trick windows which express some humorous phase of business are very effective in drawing trade. Some ingenious men like to arrange a window so that it will, in a measure, at least, conform to some cant phrase or stereotyped trade line. For example, a man designs a soap window, and after he has his soap piled up he pushes some of it down or gets that effect by having soap lying about at the pile as though it had fallen. Then he puts in a card, "A Tumble in Soap." Or he puts a lot of goods in a balloon all ready to ascend. This he placards: "These goods are all going up. Buy now," and so on to an almost unlimited degree. Men can invent these catchy displays without hurting their brain much. But our advice to the good, substantial merchant is, "do not do it." Leave this class of window trimming to the men who put young ducks or old foxes in their windows to attract attention.

These things do attract attention, to be sure. But merely attracting attention is not good window dressing. What a merchant wants is to attract buyers, not merely a crowd of curiosity seekers. There are thousands of foolish things a merchant can do to attract attention, but the only kind of attraction that serves his purpose is the kind that sends people into his store.

The best merchants in all large cities avoid these trick or catchy displays. The cheaper houses resort to it frequently. The better class of merchants regard such window displays as tending to lower the dignity of their house. Sometimes one of them makes a mistake and is tempted to try the virtue of one of these humorous displays. It usually happens that he regrets his folly and does not try it again. For certain stores these trick windows may, and no doubt do, have a value. But generally speaking the good grocer will do well to avoid them, rather than run the risk of making his display appear cheap.

INTERIOR DECORATIONS.

Merchants often show a great deal of enterprise in their window displays and neglect to pay as much attention as they should to the interior decorations. It is very well to make a fine showing in the window. It attracts trade. It induces people to come into the store. But once a stranger enters the store it is well that the interior should be so attractive as to carry out the neatness and taste shown in the windows, for the stranger's benefit.

It is one thing to attract trade, another to hold the trade of a customer who has been induced to come into the store, thus it is somewhat of a waste of energy to make a fine window display to coax trade into the store and then not to be able to secure the visitor's good will by showing the same degree of excellence in the management of the interior as is shown in the window.

The rules for interior decorations are similar to those for window dressing with the exception that the displays are made almost exclusively by the attractive arrangement of the goods to be shown. Changes should be made frequently, as no matter how attractive a display may be a change tends to enliven the store.

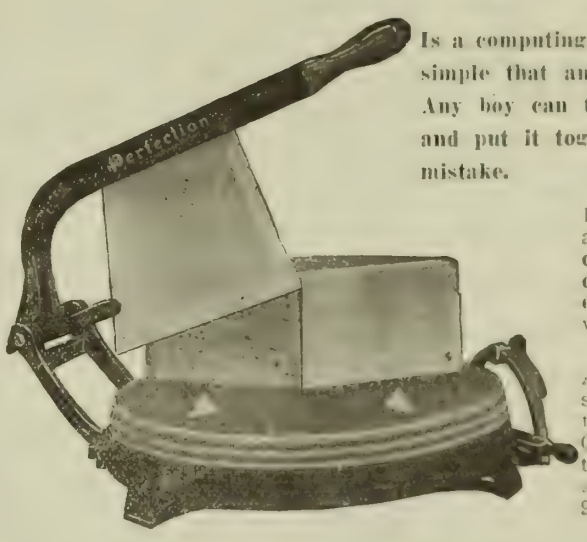
FARMING IN DRY SOIL.

A remarkable achievement in "dry farming" in an arid land is that of C. C. Hulbert, who, according to the "California Fruit World," has raised five acres of garden produce without irrigation. His crops consists of cantaloupes, tomatoes, Hubbard squashes, watermelons, sweet corn and pumpkins. The yield of each variety is large. He is now picking the second crop of cantaloupes. His tract, the soil of which is a sandy loam, has never been under cultivation except for winter grain. City mains having never been extended to it, he finally decided to try what is practically the "Campbell method" of dry cultivation. He first subsoiled deeply and then with harrow and crusher pulverized the top soil. Not a drop of water has been used, but all crops are frequently cultivated. Notwithstanding the torrid days of July and early August, the plants never wilted. His success astonished local ranchers, who have held that in this section land without water could be used for nothing but a limited variety of winter crops. Mr. Hulbert's net returns compare favorably with those from an equal acreage where water is used.

THE MILK IN THE COCOANUT.

The search for the "milk in the cocoanut" has been going on among the world's brightest minds for countless ages, but in a commercial sense the man who actually has it on his hands would be thankful if some one would show him how to get rid of it with some profit. Said a cocoanut trader the other day:



"It seems a shame that one of the most wholesome and most accessible products of the cocoanut, the milk, goes to waste entirely because thus far none of us has been able to find a way to make use of it to our profit. Every day we break up thousands of cocoanuts for the meat, millions in a year, and every one of them has a pint or more of sweet, nutritious milk in it. We manufacture the meat into an edible form, the shells are ground up for a variety of purposes and even the husk is used in one way or another, but the gallons and gallons of milk go entirely to waste. We have tried bottling it, but there appears no demand for it. We have tried to boil it down into a syrup without satisfactory conclusion, yet we know that there is nutrition in the liquid and that it is a delicacy. If some one will only find some way to utilize it 'there's millions in it.' Today we are letting it run waste by the barrel."

Some chaps get discouraged too easily. If you find the other fellow cutting into your trade, dig in! What kind of a sprinter would he be who stopped running the minute another man came up even?

To surmount obstacles, to wrest success from failure, to keep at it, to make good by hard work and unswerving determination—this is the work of the strong man. He closes his eyes against dispair.

When you are in a quandary as to whether you should keep extra money on a mistaken charge—why just figure it out that it is a low trick—that a man's character should count for more than the cash.

The manufacturer who has a good thing for the retail grocer to sell will have little trouble in making a friend of that merchant. If his goods lack merit he would better spend his money trying to fool the consumer.

Quiz your clerks about the goods you are advertising. See that they know what the publicity end of the store is doing. A clerk will make bad breaks with customers if not posted on the advertising of the day.

Evil words and criticisms always find their way back to those who spoke them. And besides, it's the rule that those who do this sinister and underhanded talking are not as respectable as those about whom the things are said.

If a man be surrounded by large-hearted and big-souled men of character, it is a safe thing to say that he is a "good" one. The opposite environments may also show him to be what might be called a personality fakir or a fraud.

To give some idea of how weeds multiply, it may be stated that a single plant of pepper grass will produce 18,000 seeds; dandelion, 12,000; shepherd's purse, 37,000; wheat thief, 7,000; common thistles, 65,000; chamomile, 16,000; ragweed, 5,000; purslaine, 375,000; plantain, 47,000, and burdock, 43,000.

Nothing pleases a "little" man more than an opportunity to act big. They don't seem to realize that in the end that they're bound to be trimmed down to just where they belong. Just so sure as you see a man act "big," you can always put him down for "little." Big men never have any spread-eagleism about them.

The State's orange crop aggregated 28,000 carloads, packed in 10,620,000 boxes, which contained 3,276,000,000 oranges. The gross receipts for this prodigous output were $30,800,000 of which the railroads received $11,000,000 and the shippers and growers jointly $19,800,00. The gross receipts from one car are thus $1,100.

To find the "secret" to successes is as much the object of beginners as the North pole is to the navigators and explorers. Still, there is no such thing as a "secret" to success. It's plain as day. It's hard work—correct work and reliable work. It it's in you, see that it comes out—if it's not in you, see that it get's there.

Every once in a while one meets somebody on his street who discourses on his "beliefs"—his honesty and principle and so on—and then they are heard the next day telling "business" [illegible] "business' ways. "Business is business," they say. "Dishonesty in that case is dishonest business.

During the seventeenth century the first druggist came to America and closely followed English precedents, modifying them, however, by the practice of the Indians with whom they came in contact. Quack apothecaries began to spring up in the new land and 1636 the colony of Virginia passed a law which among other things regulated the prices of fees of the druggist. At this time it was fashionable for the druggist to practice surgery in addition to pharmacy, and the Virginia colony contained a large number of people who were proficient in both professions.

Extraordinary stories are told of the increasing scarcity and value of sables, which, a London paper says, people are beginning to pass down as heirlooms to their descendants. A sable cost which two years ago would have cost $20,000 would now be valued at $30,000. The two most costly sable coats in the world are worn by the Empress of Russia and her cousin, Queen Maud of Norway. The coat of the Empress is made of the finest sables which could be obtained in Europe, and is worth about $250,000. The coat which Queen Maud wore when she went with King Haakon to the famous Guildhall banquet is worth $150,000.

EVERYBODY KILL RATS.

To The Members of the Merchants' Association and the Public:

The health authorities have declared that the existence of rats in the city at the present time is a very serious menace to the health of the community.

Unusual efforts are being made by the city and national authorities to procure their entire extinction and to encourage their destruction a bounty of five cents has been offered for each body delivered at the various offices of the Health Board.

The co-operation of every citizen is demanded at this time, as the health of the community is threatened.

Every rat in the city must be looked upon as a positive danger and every individual must constitute himself an agent for their destruction.

The Merchants' Association appeals to every person in control of any property which rats may or do infest, to immediately take steps for their destruction.

Let us have universal action upon this matter at once.

Once we had a Chinatown and a Barbary Coast where a danger of this kind was concentrated. At the present time it is scattered broadcast throughout the city and any rat anywhere may be the bearer of a dangerous disease to be transmitted by means of fleas to a human being.

The Merchants' Association appeals to every occupant of houses, stores and factories to make war at once on rats to their utter extermination.

The accompanying recommendation of the U. S. Public Health and Marine Hospital Service is earnestly called to your attention:

"The owners and managers of granaries, warehouses, mills, factories, stables, abattoirs, bakeries, hotels, restaurants, and places of business generally, should at once co-operate with the authorities in ridding their premises of these pests which are so dangerous to the health and commerce of the city.

"The following methods are recommended:

"1. The employment of professional rat catchers for large establishments.

"2. Trapping and poisoning by employers. The most reliable poisons for this purpose are: Phosphorus paste, arsenic and Danysz' Rat Virus. These should be placed in rat holes and rat runs, and the hole carefully closed. Care should be taken that phosphorus and arssnic are not placed where they are accessible to children and domestic animals.

"3. Exclusion of rats from buil'dings by closing the holes and runs in the basements and first floors. Rats enter, as a rule, by burrowing from below, and through the openings in the walls or floor for the passage of plumbing. These openings should fit the pipes accurately and should be surrounded with cement or brick. Tin or sheet metal of some kind should be used to cover holes in woo'en floors.

"4. Kitchen refuse and garbage should be placed in metal cans with tight fitting covers. This should be removed and destroyed daily. Exposed food is a great attraction to rats, and householders will find that no food no rat is axiomatic.

"5. Finally, it is recommended that all basements and ground floors be cemented to render buildings ratproof (vermin proof).

GROCERY CLERK GETS THE LIMIT

Sutton Blames Rosser For His Downfall—Given Six Months.

Sacramento Grocers Prosecute Thieving Employee.

Sacramento. — John W. Sutton, a driver for the American Cash Store, confessed in the City Justice's Court this morning that he had stolen various sums of his employer's money and blamed for his downfall William Rosser, another employe of the firm, who was arrested several weeks ago upon suspicion of being a defaulter but who was later released as the proprietors of the firm did not desire to prosecute him.

City Justice March gave Sutton the limit—six months in the County Jail. The charge was one of petty embezzlement, as it was shown that the young man had not taken more than a few dollars at a time. Sutton pleaded with the Court for another chance and promised to make good every dollar of the misappropriated funds if only given an opportunity. His cries were unheeded and he was sent to jail.

According to the story related by Sutton, several weeks ago Rosser came to him and stated that he (Rosser) was short in his accounts. He asked Sutton to aid him, promising the later that he would repay him as soon as he received some money from his relatives. Sutton agreed to help Rosser out and it was while doing this that his defalcations were discovered and he was arrested.

Rosser has heard that the firm was about to prosecute him and has disappeared, not telling any of his friends his destination.

How many times do we not hear this remark, "Well, if any man is not good enough to take my word, he's no friend of mine," and yet these same individuals who do the loudest shouting are least trustworthy. What can they expect—they earn a reputation for falsehood—they tell them repeatedly—what do they expect. These are generally the persons who do the loudest shouting. Have you not your idea of a man who tells one lie—much less many? They are entitled to no quarter.

Attracting Trade.

RETAILERS ADVERTISING.

Prices do not cut much of a "figure" when the quoted goods are bulk stuff. People are seldom impressed with the bargain character of a coffee or tea that bears no brand of general reputation, no matter how low the price has been cut. Even when well known brands are used as "leaders," prices being sharply cut, the people are not always drawn, because there is always the possibility of the goods being fire-damaged or shop-worn lots. Therefore price is not the be-all and end-all of retail advertising that some people believe.

Prices Should Be Given.

Prices should be given, of course, in order that the public shall be able to form some sort of idea of the amount they would be called upon to spend if they took advantage of an offer in the ad. and visited the advertiser's place of business. But it is plain enough to anybody who will investigate the subject that price cannot sustain the burden that is placed upon it in some classes of advertising. Other factors are considered by the buyer.

Free Adulteration.

A great deal of scandalous trash anent adulteration appears in the public prints. It is a great shame that this should be, for there are much more important sins against the people which seldom come to light—much worse sins than the worst of those falsely imputed to the food packers—but of course it helps to hide the trail of real grafters when the food authorities make an absurb fuss over over-greened peas, colored catsup, and similar trifles.

Purity—That's one of the "other factors" than price.

Another is, honesty in weighing and measuring goods.

Cut Price—Cut Weight.

Nine out of ten consumers suspect crooked work in the weight or measure when price is cut temptingly low, and you know and we know that sometimes there are grounds for this sort of distrust. This being so, why can't advertisement writers in the grocery business take cognizance of the weight and measure question and use the honest weight of their goods as a reason for the public patronage of the grocer?

Then there are such matters as the service of the business, the competency of the salesman, the puctuality of the delivery service and even the cleanliness of the store—all being matters of minor importance perhaps, but when a person is waiting impatiently for, say a pound of butter that doesn't come, a little thing like tardiness in delivery assumes an aspect of grim importance. Now, why can't these points be discussed in the grocer's advertisement in a manner that shall interest the public and relieve the strain that has been put upon price?

Quality Tells.

But, after all is said and done, it is the quality of the goods that is of the first importance to the ad. writer, if not to the ad. reader. The price of the article may come first to the latter, but to the former it must come second to quality, because quality is not only important in itself but furnishes the ad. writer with opportunity to impress or charm the public.

What is there in a mere list of goods and values to impress? What is there in it to differentiate the work of the master and the work of the apprentice? Is there need of the master when only price is used to bring the public to the point of buying? Is there need of the essays on advertising when all charm, magic, are dropped from grocery advertising, and a mere slip of price list is relied upon to turn customers from other doors to one's own door?

Even some of the more advanced grocery advertisers need coaching upon these points. A friend has handed us a copy of a handsome circular bearing the name of a progressive tea and coffee concern of this city. The "inducement" mentioned in this circular is a "beautiful imported holiday card," but the price list part of the circular is evidently the important part, and here it is reproduced:

"P. M. BLEND, 18c lb. This is a very popular coffee. In spite of the low price it is a good drinker and wins friends every day. Department stores sell the same grade at 25c on bargain days."

Give Information.

Now, these excerpts are not so bad but that they might be much worse. Indeed, they are better than a good many of the descriptive paragraphs in grocery price lists and catalogues. Their great defect is that they don't go far enough. They don't differentiate the grades of tea and coffee sufficiently. They don't give enough information to the reader to enable him to form an expectation of what the goods would really be. They don't dwell upon the vital points. Who cares where coffee or tea is grown? Who cares whether coffee or tea is produced under this or that flag? What people want to know is how coffee or tea drinks. In the clippings printed above there has been some perception of this point, but the writer doesn't go sufficiently into details. So far as the tea is concerned there seems to be no reason why the cheap teas should not be preferred to the higher-priced kinds So far as the coffee is concerned there is certainly too little made of the merits of the best grade.

MAPLE SUGAR.

Despite the fact that the maple sugar crop of last winter was one of the largest in recent years, the market price of maple products is today from 15 to 20 per cent higher than at this time last year. Yet the demand remains strong and the scarcity of the goods is marked. The fact that the crop came onto a dry market does not fully explain the situation, and jobbers who have been in the market lately are at a loss to account for it.

Those who have studied the causes have discovered a new line of consumption which may go a long way to explain the shortage. It appears that several of the new patent cereals employ maple sugar as an ingredient and during the past two years have drawn large stocks from the Northern forests. This year the tobacco trust is reported to have used maple sugar rather than cane sugar in sweetening its plug tobacco and to have found it a great improvement, wherefore not less than 1,000,000 pounds of sugar have been used for that purpose. So heavy is the demand on the producers that it is claimed there are not in Canada and our Northern States a total supply of ten carloads in first hands and new crop cannot be expected before February or March.

ROBBERY AND FIRE.

Cottonwood Merchants Suffer From Depredations of Bold Thieves.

Redding, October 3.—Seaman Brothers' grocery store in Cottonwood, occupying a two-story brick building, was burned shortly after midnight. The building, belonging to Carl Munter, was worth $3000 and the stock of merchandise was worth $3000 more. Seaman Brothers believe that the building was set on fire by unknown persons, whose purpose was robbery. At their request Sheriff Montgomery made an investigation to-day. Telephone and telegraph wires are out because of fires in Cottonwood and Tehama and it is not known here whether any arrests have been made to-day.

Coming the night following the attempted robbery of the Butterway Brothers' store, which failed because George Butterway succeeded in capturing the robber, leads the Cottonwood people to believe that their town has been marked by a gang of thieves.

It was found that Seaman Brothers' safe had been blown open. The fire was probably started to cover up tracts of the robbery. A rifle was found in the ruins. This must have belonged to the robbers, for no gun was kept in the store.

LOOKING FOR LOCATION.

To Establosh a Cereal Food Manufactory on This Coast.

Chico. — If proper influences are brought to bear this city has an opportunity to secure the location of a cereal food manufactory in this vicinity, says the Record. Secretary J. G. Neubarth of the Chico chamber of commerce is now corresponding with the Eastern proprietors and an answer is expected soon.

Mr. Pierce, the Pacific coast agent for the Egg-O-See Company of Chicago, has been in Chico and stated that he is touring California to select a suitable site for the location of a factory to manufacture the article. He said that the manufacturers of the food use California and Oregon wheat largely in producing the article, and feel that by locating a factory in this State they will be enable to save largely on the price of wheat through transportation charges.

THE RETAIL GROCERS ADVOCATE

EARL D. EDDY, EDITOR. SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., OCTOBER 25 1907. VOL. 12. NO. 42.

Maintaining Prices.

Manufacturer's Right to Protect His Goods Upheld by Many Authorities.

Grocers all over the State of California have been hurt by the fact that competitors were selling Lea & Perrins Sauce at the rate of 25c. for small bottles and Eagle Milk at the rate of 15c per tin.

When a dealer sells at these prices, he nets a loss on each sale, since the margin is not sufficient to pay the cost of handling the goods.

The Directors of the State Grocer's Association decided to ask the manufacturer's of these goods to adopt the policy that has been accomplished by numerous manufacturers, of fixing the retail selling price and requiring the trade to maintain this price as one of the conditions of being allowed to handle these goods.

The Associated Retail Grocers of San Francisco at their October meeting also directed the Field Secretary to call on the Johnson-Locke Mercantile Co., and explain to them the attitude of the trade in this respect and request of them to protect the retail selling price of these goods and urge upon their principals the desirability and necessity of granting the grocers the protection they desire.

The matter was taken up with the Johnson-Locke Mercantile Co. This company stated that they desired time in which to secure advise as to the legality of such a policy.

Many Lawyers Coincide.

Before the Rainier Bottling Co. fixed the selling price of their beer at 2 bottles for 25 cents, they consulted their attorney, Mr. Hiram Johnson, who is associated with the District At-

Theatre Party Which Will Help the Association Meet the Expenses of National Delegates.

Every grocer in San Francisco who can do so should plan to go to the Alcazar Theatre, Tuesday evening, OCT. 29TH.

Everybody goes to the theatre once in a while. It would be a good thing to pick out this time, when by so doing you will not only have the pleasure of the entertainment, but also of meeting a lot of your friends in the business, and also add to the funds that are to be used in helping the Association defray the expenses of the men who will go as delegates to the National Convention at Boston in May.

The play for the evening is to be "The Heart of Maryland". This is Belasco's masterpiece. It is a splendid show and will be staged with all the effectivness for which the Alcazar people are famous. The Company is one of the best stock companies the city has ever seen and everyone who attends will get the full worth of his money.

The following named firms, individuals, etc., have taken boxes:

Will Help Their Friends.

Grocers Urge All Dealers to Handle Only Protected Beers.

EARLY CLOSING IS DISCUSSED

The Two Grocer Candidates, King and Stulz, Given a Warm Reception.

Enthusiastic support was promised the beer bottlers who protect trade, at the October meeting of the Associated Retail Grocers, held Thursday evening, Oct. 17th, at Veterans' Hall, 431 Duboce Ave.

Several members reported that they had already put in Olympia beer because the price was being protected.

Every man present stated that he would consider it a sacred duty to advance the sale of beers to the disadvantage of other beers, as long as they were the only beers, the bottlers of which, would not allow to be sold at 10c.

RAINIER,
TACOMA,
OLYMPIA

Vice-President Zett called the meeting to order in the absence of President John W. King. The usual routine of work was taken up and then the members took up the question of the beer situation.

Field Secretary Powers was called upon to state the steps that had been taken towards bringing about protection for the trade.

Mr. Powers explained that every beer bottler in San Francisco had been seen and urged to give the trade protection. The bottlers of local beers in every instance stated that they would be glad to see the grocers secure protection on their profits, but they were evidently afraid that they would lose so much 10-cent trade that it would not pay them. Mr. Powers explained that it now rested with the grocers to give such firm support to the

RAINIER,
TACOMA,
OLYMPIA

beers that the bottlers who allowed their beers to be sold at 10c would feel that they were losing so much trade that it would pay them better to protect their prices also.

Price of Pint Bottles.

The only question raised was to the price for pint bottles.

N. Salomon felt that the action of the bottlers in putting a price of 10c for three bottles, or 40c per dozen on pint botles was unwise, since it would mean that if the grocer redeemed bottles he had not given out himself, he would lose 5 cents a dozen on every dozen sold.

Geo. B. Doyle explained that the grocers had advised the bottlers to take that action. Their reason for doing so, was that the grocers thought that when they invested 35c in a dozen pint bottles, they are entitled to a profit on the money so tied up and that a margin of 5c on the investment of 35c would not be much more than enough to meet the loss by breakage. Mr. Doyle stated that his customers did not expect him to take back bottlers that he had not sent out to them.

H. Hintman of 25th and Church Sts., spoke enthusiastically of the outlook, if the grocers would only stand together. He insisted that it would be only a short time before every bottler would be protecting the price of his beer if the grocers would only stand together and refuse to handle beer that the bottlers allowed to be sold at 10c.

Buys Protected Beers.

Secretary Connolly stated that every grocer should encourage the firms who were protecting the retail selling price of their beers. The driver for the Olympia Company told him that one big firm had refused to carry his beer further when it was told them that no one would be allowed to sell the beer at a less price than two for 25c. This firm afterwards took several dozen, but not so much as usual. Mr. Doyle and practically every other grocer in the Sunset District had given the Olympia Co. large orders, and he, himself, had put in twice as large an order as usual. The firm of Connolly Bros. did not sell any beers that could be sold at 10c.

Mr. Doyle of Doyle & McGowan, said that every grocer that was not handling any of the protected beers should put in at least a few cases of each of the beers to show appreciation of the action of the bottlers. He was throwing out all beers that could be sold at 10c and felt that his business would be advantaged by house cleaning.

Mr. Topp of Topp Bros., stated that his firm intended to sell only those beers that had to be sold at two for 25c.

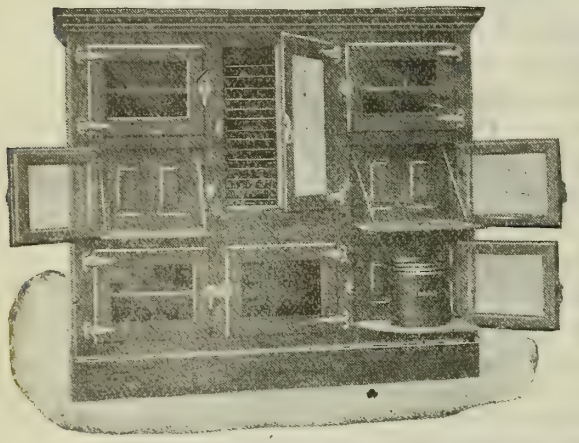
Harry B. Arnold stated that he thought the man who sold a beer for 10c was doing a very unbusiness-like thing, since he was helping an interest that was trying to hurt his profits.

Customers Are Satisfied.

Mr. Will Hohn of W. & H. Hohn, stated that for some time past he had been handling only Rainier, Tacoma and Olympia beers. His customers now all called for these beers and he had no trouble in selling them and getting a fair price.

Secretary Connolly then introduced the following resolution:

RESOLVED: That it is the concensus of opinion of the members of the Associated Retail Grocers of San Francisco, that the members should sell the beer on which they are assured a profit by the bottler, and that it is not good business policy to handle beer that the bottler allows to be sold at 10 cents.



Mr. E. I. Fleiger advised that a copy of this resolution be sent to every bottler. Mr. Fleiger's amendment was unanimously adopted.

Mr. J. Koss of the Potrero, stated that even those men who had to handle 10-cent beer because of local competition, would be able to switch their trade to the protected beers if they tried, and he advised that each member should do this.

The Theatre Party.

Trask, told the grocers about the theatre party of the "Boston Club," which is to be held on Tuesday evening, Oct. 29th, at the Alcazar Treatre. He explained that the purpose was to raise the money necessary to send delegates to the National Convention, which was to be held in Boston in May, 1908. This meant that the work of the Boston Club was in the interest of the entire Association.

The Early Closing Problem

Mr. Will Hohn urged that the matter of early closing should be given attention. He explained that the clerks were now strongly organized and advised that some steps should be taken by the grocers whereby an understanding could be secured as to whether the clerks should stand out for a 7 o'clock or a 6 o'clock closing.

Mr. Stulz stated that the matter of the hours would not be brought up to the grocers. The clerks would decide among themselves and then proceed to enforce their announcements.

Mr. Doyle thought it would be wiser to await some definite word from the clerks before the matter was considered.

Mr. Zett stated that the clerks were well organized and he thought the time was very close when the matter would become a live issue.

Some members expressed the opinion that the clerks were not yet effectively organized.

Mr. Zett explained that this was not the case. The local clerks had received a charter from the National and were paying their dues to the National Association.

Mr. Arnold thought that when the clerks were thoroughly organized, it would be a very easy thing for the clerks and the organization of the grocers to get together.

Mr. Hohn felt that the grocers should take action now, since the clerks were already organized quite strongly.

Mr. Irvine stated that he favored a ten hour day for clerks.

Will Act With New Year.

President King explained that the clerks had proposed to begin an active campaign to secure early closing about the first of the year. Their method would be to bring pressure to bear upon one large store at a time with the aid of the Labor Council. They would keep this up until they would accomplish their end.

Assistant Secretary Harrison explained that the grocery clerks had succeeded in their movement for early closing in other cities larger than San Francisco.

Mr. C. E. Young stated that he would like to see Sunday closing as well as early closing. He had been closing on Sunday and felt that he had not lost enough business to make it worth considering.

Mr. Hohn suggested that if the grocers should appoint a committee to confer with a like committee from the clerks it would probably result in restraining the clerks from making any radical demands. He thought the clerks would be open to reason and that a conference of the two committees would serve to insure that any demand of the clerks would be such as would receive the approval of the grocers.

Mr. Doyle called attention to the fact that up to the present time no definite communication had been received from the clerks. He advised delay. This suggestion met with the general approval and that course was decided upon.

Two Grocer Candidates.

A motion to adjourn was delayed by Mr. Doyle, who called attention to the fact that among the candidates to be voted upon at the coming election were two grocers. President John W. King, who was the Republican candidate for Supervisor, and past president Jos. A. Stulz, who was candidate for Public Administrator. He suggested that these gentlemen be called upon to address the meeting.

President King assured the grocers that if he were elected Supervisor the grocers would have a staunch supporter of anything they desired, and he assured them that they would be proud of his course should he be elected.

Mr. Stulz stated that he had promised to give an honest administration of his office prior to the election of 1905. The records of his office had shown that he had made good in every particular. He thanked the grocers for the support that had been accorded him in the past, and assured them that if elected again that he would continue his office as it had been in the past, so that it would be an honor to the men who gave him their confidence, as well as himself.

The two candidates were received with warm applause.

Mr. J. M. Sullivan gave a warm boost for the theatre party of the Boston Club. He called the attention of the grocers to the fact that they all went to the theatre once in a while. He advised them if they went to the Alcazar on the night of the Boston Club theatre party that they would not only have a good time and see a great many of their neighbors, but that they would be helping themselves as well as the Boston Club, since the funds to be raised would save the Association the necessity of taking from their treasury the expenses for delegates to the National Convention.

The meeting then adjourned.

It is said that $3,000,000 is wasted annually because the law says that cigar boxes may not be used for packing cigars again. The average cigar box costs about ten cents, and it certainly seems that some method should be devised to permit the boxes to be used again. Aside from the great waste, it is said that the supply of material from which the boxes are made is fast diminishing, and the price has increased approximately 50 per cent during the past six years.

torney's office in the prosecution of the graft cases. Mr. Johnson assured Mr. Rapp that the Cartwright law did not prevent an individual manufacturer from fixing a price on his product and refusing to sell a dealer who did not agree to maintain that price.

Field Secretary Powers took the matter up with Attorney General Webb of California.

He was informed that the Cartwright law left the responsibility for enforcement with the District Attorneys of the various counties. They thought that the matter, therefore, should be taken up with the local district attorney.

Application was made to District Attorney Wm. H. Langdon for information as to what had been done in his department.

The matter of the interpretion of the Cartwright law has been left by Mr. Langdon with Wm. Hoff Cook. Judge Cook stated that the District Attorney's office would not act except on the matter of a complaint. He had given considerable thought to the matter however, and stated that he would be glad to give an opinion as to the legality of fixing a retail selling price after he had been able to look into the matter further.

In an article in regard to the Cartwright law written for the "Advocate" A. Schilling & Co. state:

"The California Cartwright law is strictly anti-trust. It prohibits two or more manufacturers from combining and in any way determining, or agreeing upon, or regulating selling prices in restraint of trade. For a number of retailers to agree or combine and agree upon certain selling prices, is in restraint of trade and is prohibited.

A sale of goods by an individual manufacturer to a merchant with the understanding that he offers the goods in accordance with his policy at a specified retail price, is not restraining trade—is not interfered with by the Cartwright law. This is our understanding of the statute and it is the advice of our attorney, and we are governing ourselves accordingly—selling, as we have sold, in accordance with and subject to the conditions stated in our notification by registered letter, to the trade, which notification has legal force and is binding on all dealers in Schilling's Best wholesale or retail.

It is to be hoped that the Johnson-Locke Mercantile Co. will lend its influence towards helping the grocers secure a profit on the goods.

DIAMOND MATCH PROJECTS.

Turpentine, Paper and Veneering Plants to Be Built.

Chico.—The president and directors of the Diamond Match Co., at present in this city on their annual tour, have announced the company's plan for the ensuing year, which contemplate the construction of new industries for Butte and Tehama counties and the settling of the corporation's policy. President Barber announces that the company will build a veneering plant on the site of the old Sierra Lumber Co.'s planing mill and box factory in this city, and that actual construction work will commence as soon as the plans and specifications are prepared. This will employ a considerable number of men and will cost in the thousands.

The sawmill at Lyonsville, Tehama County, will be rebuilt with a capacity equal to that of the old one recently burned and of the band-saw type. F. M. Clough, Pacific Coast manager for the company, and who has fostered and supervised the upbuilding of the immense plants at Barber and Stirling City, will be promoted to a larger field. In addition to having charge of the vast properties of the company in Tehama and Butte counties, he will have a voice on the executive board of the company, and will spend part of his time in New York City in conference with the directors.

It is possible that some railroad construction will be authorized in Butte and Tehama counties during the next two months. Bartholomew, the English director and large stockholder of the company, will arrive in New York soon to hold a conference with President Barber and other directors of the company relative to railroad construction. It is probable that the proposed railroad from Red Bluff to Lyonsville, and from Magalia to Butte Meadows will be considered with other matters at that time.

The officials have given much consideration to the turpentine plant at Stirling City, and it is probable that in the course of time the actual construction of a large plant will be authorized. President Barber also stated that the prospects for a wood-pulp factory at Stirling City and a paper mill at Chico to utilize the product were good, as much of the wood at Stirling City goes to waste. No action has been taken on these matters, however. The 25-mile flume from Chico to West Branch, up Chico Creek, will be torn down as no mill will be operated at West Branch or Soda Springs This flume cost the Sierra Lumber Co. about $1,000,000 to construct years ago.

The policy of the company for the ensuing year will be conservative, owing to the present stringency in the money market, and some of the proposed plants, not now authorized, such as the paper mill, turpentine plant and pulp mill, and railroad construction, will not be actually constructed before a couple of years. The company will not endeavor to increase its output of lumber to any great degree, believing it better policy to save the supply as much as possible for the future, when lumber will be higher. This will also tend to give the young trees an opportunity to obtain a greater growth. The mill at Lyonsville is to be reconstructed, owing to the fact that its feeding apparatus is now on the ground, and the factory is established at Red Bluff. If the mill was not rebuilt these would be practically useless.

GROCERY MARKETS.

Review of Conditions as Reported by Experts in Various Centers.

POINTS TO WATCH.

FLOUR.—
Another advance of 20 cents per barrel will take place within a few days—such is the talk on the "street."

MEALS.—
Sharp advances in all local brands will occur shortly.

MUSHES.—
Prices are said to be on the verge of such an advance as will make it necessary for the grocer to get 2 for 25c. for the present 10 cent sellers.

CANNED CORN.—
Authentic figures show a shortage, of 2,000.000 cases in this year's pack this makes advances absolutely certain, in accord with present strong market.

TOMATOES.—
Owing to the present threatened weather which is holding back the ripening of the Tomatoes on the vines, the market is extremely firm. It looks as though the market would jump up several notches.

CANNED FRUITS.—
The jobbers now control the situation in this line, but their supplies are rapidly going into Consumption and advances will naturally continue to be the rule.

PEANS.—
California's Crop will be but 35 per cent of the average.

SUGAR.

The current week has shown no changes in this line. The market is without feature at the present time.

New York, Oct. 17.—Willett & Gray report:

The week.—Raws: Declined .05c. Refined: Unchanged. Net cash quotations this date are: Molasses 3.00c.; Centrifugals, 3.90.c: Granulated, 4.65c.

Raws.—Local markets and conditions are ignored for the moment and all attention is directed to the European sugar markets as influenced by the maturing beet crops.

The notable feature of the week is the commencement of the domestic crop of Louisiana, a few small lots of plantation sugar having been received at New Orleans and sold at full prices.

The crop prospects are favorable under good weather conditions.

Cuba has received much needed rains in some sections of the Island but still lacks moisture in other parts so that diminished crop from last year seems to be assured to a moderate extent.

Refined.—All prices and conditions at the Eastern markets remain unchanged, but important revisions of the selling methods have been made in the West. Up to the present the selling value of Beet Granulated refined has been considered as from 10c per 100 lbs. to 30c. per 100 lbs. below the selling value of Cane Granulated, although such a large difference as 20c. to 30c. has been known not to exist in intrinsic merits. The present crop of Beet Granulated will, therefore, be sold at Kansas City and eastward at a difference of 10c. per 100 lbs. below the basis of the American Sugar Refining Co's selling basis at New York. For Denver and westward, where prices are governed by San Francisco quotations, the difference is now 20c. per 100 lbs. for Beet Granulated below Cane Granulated, and subject to variations.

Present quotations at San Francisco, which advanced 10c per 100 lbs. during the week, are 5.20c. per lb. net for Cane, and 5c. per lb. net for Beet.

At Denver, Colorado, the quotations are 5.35c. per lb. for Cane and 5.15c. per lb. for Beet net.

At Kansas City, 5.14c. per lb. for Cane and 5.04c. per lb. for Beet net.

New Orleans quotations are 4.80c., less 1 per cent, for cash in 7 days, for Cane Granulated.

A very fair demand exists all through the country on the hand-to-mouth basis.

The immediate future look steady.

RICE.

M. Phillips & Co., say under date of Oct. 22.:

"Prices on all grades are maintained owing to the fact that unfavorable weather has retarded operations and has done serious damage to a large portion of the crop. We look for good grades to be scarce and prices to continue high. Lower grades will no doubt decline slightly within the next thirty days but this will have no effect on the Coast until 60 days from date. Spot goods are in great demand with practically nothing to offer. Other grades shown no change."

New York, Oct. 15th.—Dan Talmage's Son's Co., say:

"Demand continues active from all sources. Receipts are coming in slowly, and are mostly sold "to arrive" leaving but little to add to the spot stock which is very limited. Under these conditions prices are well sustained, and on more sightly parcels a trifle advanced. New Crop Japans are being offered and taken quickly at an advance over closing figures of the last crop.

"Advices from the South note good demand on the Atlantic Coast: receipts are moderate and offerings freely taken. At New Orleans, the market is strong and with active demand.

In the Interior Southwest Louisiana and Texas demand is active and full prices are exacted on all offerings. The situation particularly in Texas, is becoming very serious on account of continued rains, and the early hope of planters as to quantity and quality is greatly modified.

"Cables and correspondence from abroad note generally strong market. Transactions mainly confined to immediate wants."

New Orleans, L A., Oct. 12.—Siewerd Milling Co., Ltd., say:

"The Week's Rice Market closes strong, with values fully maintained on Extra Fancies and all White Grades. Medium and Low Grades somewhat depressed with the ideas of Buyers and Sellers quite at variance as to price. The long spell of rain and unfavorable conditions, seems to be broken, Clear Cold Weather prevailing through out the entire Belt."

DRIED FRUIT.

The market in this line is quiet, the

Folger's Golden Gate

Baking Powder, Extracts.

The mission of the retail grocer is to please his customers and to make money. Folger's Golden Gate goods will help. So completely do they satisfy that dealers and consumers refer to them as demand being on a hand to mouth basis. The present financial situation is such that heavy buying by first hands has been discontinued.

PRUNES.

The market in this line is easy. The smaller packers are weakening in their demands and the market is therefore not as firm as it has been. However, this is but a temporary condition and prices will recover themselves within a few days.

RAISINS.

There is not much doing in this line, at present so far as fluctuations in prices are concerned.

ALMONDS.

The market in this line is said to be weakening but prices show no indications of declines.

WALNUTS.

The walnut crop is turning out to be shorter than at first expected. The market is firm.

CANNED FRUITS.

The canned fruit situation is now in control of the wholesale grocers, first hands having disposed of practically all of the goods they possess. The goods which the wholesale grocers control are rapidly going into consumption and more than one jobber is hunting for goods to supply the trade. Practically every line, grade and quality has advanced 30 cents within the past few days and there is every reason to believe that further advances will shortly be made.

CANNED CORN.

Packers claim that there is a carryover of between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 cases from last year's pack. Average yearly consumption of '04, '05, '06, was 10,606,162 cases against the present visible supply including the carryover and estimated pack of '07, of 8,500,000 cases leaving a shortage of 2,1 106,162 cases.

In sympathy with the above figures, the market is very strong. The figures are even worse than those quoted above, because of the known fact that there has been a very heavy shrinkage in this year's output in Main and New York State. Those grocers who have put off purchasing their requirements in this line should get busy.

CANNED TOMATOES.

Owing to the poor ripening weather now being experienced in this State, the vegetable above named is ripening very slowly, and if very much early rain falls or early frosts strike the crop in its present shape, a very much reduced peack is certain. The situation to-day is extremely firm and there is every reason to believe that the pack will be much less than at first anticipated, when prices were named.

Napa.—On account of the unfavorable ripening weather, tomatoes are being received so slowly that the cannery in East Napa is able to keep in operation only about two-thirds of the time. The plant is kept going about four days a week, some 70 to 75 hands being employed. From present indications the packing of tomatoes will last until about the middle of November.

FLOUR.

We have it from authentic sources that this staple will advance another 20 cents per barrel within the next few days. Our information is confirmed to some extent by the gossip of the "street."

MEALS AND MUSHES.

In sympathy with the advances in all lines of raw farinaceous goods, oats and meals, etc, are to be advanced by the local millers within a short time. It is said that prices will be advanced to such a figure as will make it necessary for the retail grocer to get 25 cents for two packages instead of on the basis of 10 cents per package, as at present.

BEANS.

The market in this line is strong and active, particularly in large and small whites and pinks. Figures are now out and the yield of this state will be 35 per cent of the average: that of Michigan 35 per cent; of New York, 75 per cent. These short crops mean that prices must advance as the demand grows keener.

FISH ETC.

New York, Oct. 17th.—Strohmeyer & Arpe Co., say:

Holland Herring.—Market is unchanged. Supplies are coming in freely, but demand has improved, so that prices are about the same. They are likely to go higher when the cold weather sets in.

Norway Herrings.—First shipments have come in and show beautiful quality. Prices are so extremely low now that they are likely to advance shortly.

Stock Fish.—Shippers in Norway not having received orders as freely as they expected have now reduced the prices, but not sufficiently to induce buyers to come into the market freely. They will have to go down further before they will stimulate the demand.

Imported Oil Sardines.—Absolutely no change. There is no catch and no stocks, and excellent demand which cannot be satisfied. The trade has turned to Norwegian Smoked Sardines as a substitute for the French and Portuguese. Those Norwegian Smoked Sardines are given excellent satisfaction and are gaining the favor of the public. We are advised by cable from Norway that not more than ½ of our contract for our brands of Smoked Sardines will be executed this season. Other importers must be in the same position, and it is only natural that prices for Smoked Sardines should go higher.

Norway Mackerel.—Are now coming in. Catch will be about 7000 barrels less than last season. The prices for Norway Mackerel are extremely high, but this is a natural consequence of the keen competition amongst the American buyers in the Norwegian market. The prices paid to the fishermen for the fresh mackerel have never been equalled. Norway Mackerel are to-day a luxury and still they sell and sell freely, at present asking prices which are several dollars per barrel higher than when the market opened up when the first shipments arrived here. There is no chance of lower prices for Norway Mackerel this season and there will be hardly enough to satisfy the demand.

Codfish has been advanced ¼c per pound. Still better figures are expected in the near future.

HAY.

Somers & Co., report under date of Oct. 22.;

The general tone of the market has been strong. As both our Hay and Grain markets show higher prices it is but reasonable to believe that all consumers will buy but sparingly until the markets are established at the new range; therefore only those who are actually in need of goods are buying at the moment. But later we are inclined to anticipate a more healthier tone to the situation which in turn should pave the way for still higher prices which are sure to come if the car scarcity continues, which as we understand it. is very liable to continue for several months yet.

"At the moment we can quote no change in last week's prices which we give to-day as follows:

Choice Wheat Hay	$19.00 to 22.00
Good Wheat Hay	17.00 to 18.50
Other Grades Same	12.00 to 160.00
Wheat and Oat	12.00 to 17.00
Tame Oat	12.00 to 16.50
Wild Oat	10.00 to 13.50
Stock Hay	8.00 to 9.50
Alfalfa	9.00 to 13.50
Straw, per bale	.45 to .85

Market Notes.

It is said that some of the Maine corn packers will deliver 80 per cent on their contracts for fancy, others 70 per cent, but more will have only 50 to 60 per cent to deliver. The pack of standard is reported to be very short, some packers having none whatever.

The fall canning season for cove oysters in Baltimore is at hand and shipments will commence shortly.

Can clingstone peaches be preserved in the State in which they are picked from the tree in season, for three or four months into the winter season by means of the ice cold storage system? That is the experiment which John Giblin, a well known orchardist. is trying at the cold storage plant in Marysville, Cal. Here he has 300 pounds of his choicest clings, which have now been four weeks in the test.

A letter from a Western packer to his New York brokers contains the following: "The Western corn packers met in Chicago and according to the reports submitted it was found that the Western pack is 2,000,000 cases less than last year. In view of this, and the great shortage in the East, I believe we will see dollar corn within sixty days."

Cables received from packers of high grade figs in Smyrna say that they cannot get enough stock of the desired grade to fill orders.

The Maryland corn canning season is reported to be over except with the possible exception of a few day's work by canneries here and there.

The Western corn pack is short as compared with last year and much lighter than in 1905 and 1904, but accurate figures of this saeson's output are not vet available.

An effort is being made to hold a conference of representative Puget Sound and Fraser River canners in Bellingham for the purpose of jointly agreeing to suspend fishing operations for sockeye salmon until 1909. This would become effective by packers putting up certified checks which would be forfeited in case of breach of agreement. The British Columbia canners will insist that not only sockeye fishing be abandoned, but also all varieties of salmon, claiming that some breaches of agreement would be the result of the surrentitious use of sockeye nets. All canneries will be required to remain closed throughout the year.

Four carloads of seeded raisins in one-pound cartons, aggregating eigthy tons, have been shipped from Fresno via San Francisco to New Zealand and Australia. Further large lots are to follow. The shipment of California seeded raisins to Australia is a thing which occurs every year to some extent, although the demand for saisins in that locality this season exceeds by far anything ever experienced before. Usually a few hundred boxes go by a steamer in place of the many tons scheduled to go this time.

VALUE IN FROGS.

That there is some value in almost everything is shown in the case of the Louisiana frog. Here he was a few years ago, a consummate nuisance, whose chief purpose in life appeared to be to make life hideous to residents of the vicinity of the swamps and bayous. Now the delicacy of frogs' legs has built up an industry from which the revenue is something over $1,000,000 per annum. The frogs are shipped alive in barrels, packed in moss. Over one mililon barrels of this living freight are shipped yearly. Of course they are no longer the ordinary frogs, but aer carefully raised and fattened, being fed on bread, meal and cracklings.

A. Schilling & Co's general offices, on the ground floor of their new building, are now ready for occupancy. The installation of the fittings has taken a long time, as it being done on a large scale. The bronze doorway leads into a circular space in the center of the room, surrounded by counters. To the left is the sample department for teas, coffees and spices. For the coffee and spice samples are several large cabinets of drawers, with the two racks for tea, one of which will hold 500 large cans and the other 2,000 small cans of tea samples. On the other side of the room are a number of well-lighted offices, shut off from the rest by plate-glass partitions, and in the rear is the stairway leading to private offices on the second floor. All the office fittings are of oak, and hand polished. This building, as well as the adjacent factory, has every possible safeguard against fire, the windows being equipped with rolling iron shutters.

Napa.—An experiment of the utmost importance to this section of the State was begun here a few days ago, when the first seed oysters were planted on the tract formerly used as a shotting preserve by the Outing Club. The oysters came from Connecticut, and shipments will be made monthly during the planting season. The result of this first experiment in oyster-growing in this section is awaited with interest.

Clerk's Corner.

Take Your Medicine When You Know It Is Coming to You.

There is one expression which we hear occasionally which is exasperating in the extreme. It is: "I overlooked that." A driver comes in from his trip fetching back with him the order of a good customer who had wanted those particular goods with unusual urgency. He looks at one with self-defensive eyes, and says: "Oh, yes; Mrs. Hendrick's order? I overlooked that." There is one excellent reason why you should get rid of that particular expression. It is because its very wording carries along with it a palliation of your offense And you will never be a good man for yourself or anybody else until you have acquired the habit of looking the thing squarely when you find your own self to be at fault. Adopt the attitude suggested by the reprimand of the late Professor Bascom. Two students were late for chapel. Bascom asked one of them why he had been late. "I failed to hear the bell, sir," he answered. "You are not excused," said Bascom. He asked the second student what excuse he had. "I haven't any, sir," contritely answered the young man. "You are excused," said the professor. And there is the root of the matter. It is the same old story. Once you have fairly and fully acknowledged your fault you are so well on the way to curing it that you need no further correction from the outside. It is the old story of helping a man to help himself. Merely to help him breeds dependence and weakness. To help him to do for himself makes a man of him, or at least puts him in the way of becoming a man again. Thus, to come right out with the self-accusation: "Yes, sir, I forgot that, and it is my fault, my carelessness that has caused the trouble, speaks the healthful self-punishment which promises well for future improvement. You are so unlikely to commit the same fault again that little more need be said to you.

One prominent recollection of some years ago seems to fit here nicely. It was a case of a delivery boy. He reported some shortage. Feeling sure that our double checking system on orders was so good that shortages were not likely to occur, they told him it could not be laid to the store; it must have occurred, through some mix-up in the delivery after he got out. He said not a word. But it was noticed that thereafter he rapidly went over each crate of goods as he loaded his wagon. He took hardly any time in this re-check, but his orders were thereafter delivered with such accuracy that it was truly astonishing. Today he is holding a better position than any of his early companions. Why? Simply because he was "big." Only a big man is willing to take his medicine when there is many a hole to crawl through. He might just as easily have insisted that it was not his fault—like most of his contemporaries should have done—but he didn't. He would not dodge. This young man was worth all the money he has earned since.

Many a similar case can be cited along the same lines. It goes to prove conclusively that straight forwardness is perhaps a clerk's best bid for success. The "Modern Grocer," a paper published in Chicago, has recently published a strong article on practically this same subject. It believes that an honest, straightforward clerk is a worthy clerk, so do all decent men.

Spokane.—B. L. Gordon & Co., wholesale grocers, will build a warehouse, 170 feet, two stories high with full basement, at Division street on the line of the Spokane International railway, the cost being $40,000. The structure will be of brick, made fireproof and will be equipped with elevator, refrigerators and all the conveniences of a modern wholesale house. It is expected to have it ready for occupancy early next year. This is the third big warehouse to be located on the road. John W. Graham & Co. and Benham & Griffith have each completed structurers.

SIDE WALK BULLETINS.

There are a great many grocerymen who have no windows that are suitable for using bulletins of any size on the outside or window cards on the inside to any advantage.

For these a sidewalk bullentin is to be recommended. By this is meant two boards from eighteen to twenty-four inches wide by three or four feet high, hinged at the top and spread at the bottom as to stand up like an inverted V.

Bulletins can be put on both sides of such a board fresh every day.

Some grocers who use Bullentin boards are very negligent of this point. People are always attracted by something new. New bright signs are noticed and remembered. Old ones grow stale and people grow tired of seeing them. Changing signs frequently is one of the little things that mark the difference between the successful and unsuccessful grocer. It tends along with other changes to liven up the place.

We find that a great many dealers do not care to go to the trouble and expense of getting regular paints and brushes.

You cannot expect to get the best results with little or no effort, and we can assure you that a properly painted bulletin changed frequently will more than pay you for the time and money it costs.

But if you are one of the dealers who do not want to take the time to paint a bulletin, the next best method is to get a lumber marker's pencil.

They are six-sided pencils about one-half inch thick by six inches long and can be had in blue and black, also red, we believe.

These can be used for writing a bulletin, but are not very good for printing. They cost 5 cents to 10 cents each and will last for months.

Just a word of explanation about the sample cards that we will reproduce here from time to time.

We are having them made by an amateur sign maker because we believe it will encourage you to do more of this yourself.

The letters are rather crude in formation, but are very plain and easily read, which after all, are the main points as to general appearance of bulletins.

It is important that the bulletins be changed every day. They should always look fresh. When they are soiled by rain they should be changed at once.

OREGON NEW CAR LAW.

Oregon has reciprocal demurrage law which provides if a railroad does not furnish a shipper a car on which to load his freight within a certain specified time after formal request for a car by the shipper it is to be subject to a fine. On this account the Southern Pacific officials are sending north into that State many empty cars in order to comply with requests made by shippers and save itself from a big expenditure of money in the way of fines. While this a good thing for the Oregonians, it is a very bad thing for the California shippers at this time owing to the car shortage in this State. Lumbermen and direct fruit men are demanding hundreds of cars and cannot get them. There is said to be enough lumber in this State waiting Eastern shipment sufficient to fill 2000 cars. On Nov. 1st lumber rates to the East are to be advanced fully $30 a car and the shippers are more than anxious to get their lumber en route before that date. It is now a certainty they will not be able to do so, and on that account will have to pay an additional $60,000 in freight charges when the railroad is able to furnish the 2000 cars so badly wanted to this moment.

THE SHORT WEIGHT EVIL.

The revelations which have come to light in the West by reason of the campaign against short weights, short count and short measure in all sorts of package goods are astonishing the trade and a moral sentiment is growing, which promises to cause an upheaval if a change of methods is not forthcoming. The latest discovery was that made by Food Commissioner Johnson, of Nebraska, who recently went to the South Omaha packing houses and there weighed up a large number of pieces of meats. These included bacon, ham, shoulders, etc. He found that it was the recognized and regular practice to wrap them with cloth and paper until fully 6 per cent of the weight is of paper. This, the Commissioner says, is absolutely contrary to both letter and spirit of the Nebraska law and he has ordered that all packages of meats must hereafter contain the actual net weight of meat stamped on them.

WHAT ONE MERCHANT DID.

Work of Sig. Steiner of Escondido Against Parcels Post Danger.

MERCHANTS MUST ACT.

The work of the merchan named below should be emulated by every other merchant who reads this article. The menace of the Parcels Post measure is so well described in the clipping printed below, that it would be well for our readers to turn same over to their own newspaper for publication.

Mr. Sig Steiner of Escondido Cal., has been running a series of articles in his home paper and we print the latest one in full;

FACING A GREATER DEFICIT.

"We are going to ascertain where our deficit lies," says Postmaster General Meyer, "and see how it can be remedied as far as possible." This is good news for eighty million people all of whom are interested in sensible postal improvements.

"The foregoing lines appeared in the Times recently and evidently, in part at least, refer to the proposed 'Parcel Post' delivery system which is being agitated for this country, and primarily in the interest of mail order houses and to the detriment of retail merchants all over the United States. This great question will no doubt come before the next session of Congress prior to being acted upon by the Postmaster General, and while many statements from a lobby of agitators, paid by catalogue houses, will be in evidence, I believe the arguments against this scheme will prevail.

Increasing Deficiency.

"With the Parcels Post system the present deficiency of some ten million dollars yearly in the postal revenues would be still further augmented, and perhaps reach the enormous deficit of one hundred million dollars. The rural free delivery expenditure for the current year will be about thirty-five million dollars. The loss, whatever it will be, must be borne by the people generally, and mostly in the interest of the mail order or catalogue houses, and the cost must be paid by the public by indirect taxation to overcome the deficiency. The rural mail delivery system is all right, but the parcels post will be all wrong. That vast sums of money are continually being sent away from the cities and most rural towns, to large department and eastern mail order houses, can be confirmed by observing the packages coming through the express offices, and by freight, and the great number of drafts and money orders made payable to catalogue houses.

Blind to Own Interests.

"In most instances, the senders, blind to their own interests, never even consult the stores in their respective places of residence, but engrossed with the alluring representations and descriptive pictures printed in the voluminous catalogues with which the country is flooded, these "easy marks" make their selections, send away their hard-earned money, and after a long wait receive goods which they frequently cannot use, different than expected, and often endeavor to exchange at the local store. These misfits, shoddy and misrepresented articles, they cannot send back east without much extra expense, as they have paid for same, in advance, and all cost of return must be paid by the buyer. If these same people would go to the stores in their home city, it is almost a certainty that they could duplicate any article in the catalogue at the same price, see what they are buying, have the home merchant at hand, to whom they could have recourse in case of any purchase being unsatisfactory, and besides that, perhaps save their freight expense.

Who Pays the Taxes.

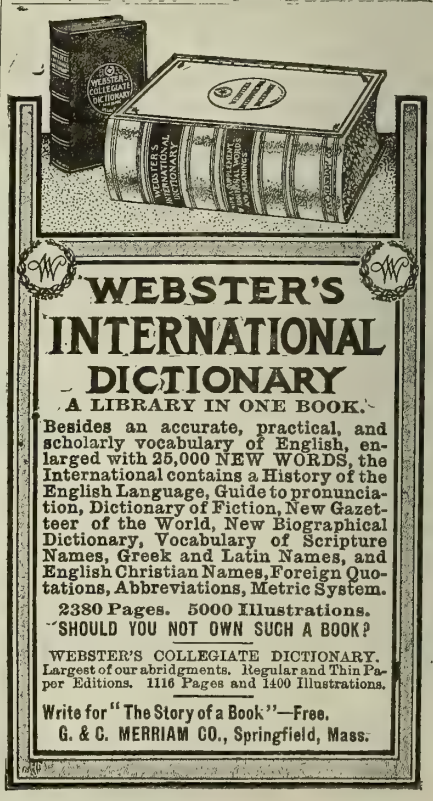
"Let us ask, How many people who patronize a catalogue house such as Sears, Roebuck & Co., Montgomery, Ward & Co., Siegel, Cooper & Co., or any others, have ever met their representatives in the community? How much taxes do any of these concerns pay in your town for the maintenance of your schools, municipality, streets, library, churches, newspapers, to the charitable affairs, the improvement clubs, chamber of commerce, and other expenses too numerous to mention in larger cities, as well as the smaller places?

Government Regulation.

"The government should regulate the charges made by the express companies and thus have a reasonable rate established for transportation.

"Did you ever stop to consider that the stores of a community, like the churches, are the index of the class of people in that section? And you cannot get along without the stores any more than the store can continue without the patronage of the people, therefore, not one cent should be sent away for a single article that you can purchase at home, and every good citien, having the interest of his town at heart, will keep his money at home by first giving the local store an opportunity of supplying his wants in any line represented in his town. If you have anything to sell, the local merchant generally buys it—fruits, vegetables, produce, etc.

Who Buys Your Produce?



"Can you send your eggs, or any product of the farm, to the mail order house in exchange for goods? No, indeed; the cash only goes there. And in times when money is tight (and many farmers have experienced it) the first one to assist you is the storekeeper with credit for supplies, and nine times out of ten, in rural districts, the very people who ask that accommodation are the ones who, when they have the cash, will send it to the mail order house and be "taken in," frequently making the home merchant sweat for the unpaid bill (and the money sent away) which rightly belongs to him.

End of Country Merchant Sure.

"The passage of a law that will inure to the benefit of catalogue houses and a few, is detrimental to the masses, and would concentrate the mercantile business in the hands of a limited number, thereby causing a great loss to the producer, consumer and thousands of retail dealers who today contribute to the support of hundreds of thousands by employment of labor and expenditure of vast sums in various channels of commerce and subscription. With the catalogue houses in control, the small retail and country merchant would be out of business and the parcels post would be the weapon in their hands with power to accomplish the finish. Such a monopoly can better be imagined than described, and the rural resident assisting in making these conditions is an accessory to the deposing of the suburban store and the piling up of the postal deficit, and he gains nothing excepting the sight of a line of express wagons laden with merchandise jogging along the road carrying the mails also, and instead of a rapid delivery, as now enjoyed, yesterday's mail would arrive tomorrow.

Sig. Steiner.

Hollister.—Mr. Jos. Harvey has bought out the grocery and business of the Gomes brothers in the McCroskey block.

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RETAIL GROCERS OF THE UNITED STATES

Eleventh Annual Convention, BOSTON, MASS., May 11, 12, 13, 14, 1908.

PRESIDENT KRAMER'S LETTER.

I sincerely hope that every merchant who has the interest of his beloved city and his own business at heart, will read and reflect on the following clippings from a Washington special of September 16:

"The mail order houses of St. Louis and Chicago will be greatly benefitted should the postmaster general's recommendation become a law. Mr. Meyer frankly says that he expects much opposition to both of his recommendations, but thinks western support on which he counts will be strong enough to put them through congress."

Has it come to this, that St. Louis and Chicago catalog houses are so grasping that they are endeavoring to throttle every little corner grocer who is trying to make a living for his wife and children? It is the little merchant that builds up the town, and pays his pro rata towards building churches, court houses, good roads, school houses and so forth. Not one dollar do these gigantic mail order houses contribute towards this, and it is now time for each and every merchant to put his shoulder to the wheel and throttle this gigantic scheme. If our national association had done nothing more than defeat this one measure they will have accomplished wonders, and at the same time would not restrain trade from going through its proper channels, namely, through the retailer.

For those who may not be better informed, I will state that the delegates at the Dallas convention represented 15,600 retailers, and if each and every one of these delegates will see that their per capita tax of 25 cents is sent to the national, it will be appreciated very much. We are endeavoring without fear or favor to finance the national it will beappreciated very much. We are endeavoring without fear or favor to finance the national from the resources of the retailers. I appreciate the good work that has been done by the manufacturers and others toward assisting organizations and I do not think that the retailers have forgotten courtesies shown them by the various firms. It is a debt of gratitude that we owe them, but I believe now that we should work along the line of an independent policy and be under obligations to no one. Our results will then be far better, and should we make a failure we will have no one to blame but ourselves. Organization and co-operation should be the watchwords of each and every successful merchant. What others have done, you can do. If you don't succeed at first, try again. Have faith in your fellow merchant and you will come out right, but above all don't knock—boost.

The winter months will soon be here and the various organizations can do a great deal by giving socials of various kinds to which their fellow merchants and their families should be invited. A great deal can be accomplished by socials of this kind which bring the merchants closer together and interests the ladies, whose advice is often beneficial.

C. J. KRAMER, President.
Little Rock, Ark.

TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

His Excellency, Theodore Roosevelt, President:

Honorable Sir.—I have noticed by the daily papers, and it has also been called to my attention, an interview supposed to have been had between your honor and Postmaster-General Meyer in which it is stated that in your next annual report you will recommend a domestic parcels post.

The retail merchants of the country have studied this matter carefully for several years past and are fully convinced that the enactment by congress of a parcels post law will have the effect of putting out of business a large number of the smaller merchants and enlarging the business of a few in the large trade centers. The retail merchants do not feel that the government should be a party to creating such a condition as this, and we sincerely trust that we have been misinformed as to your intention to make such a recommendation.

We humbly beg your earnest consideration of the position of the retail merchants in this matter, and beg to remain, yours very truly,
The National Association of Retail Grocers. C. J. CRAMER, President.

SEE YOUR CONGRESSMAN.

Much effective work is being done to counteract any influence that may be brought to bear for the passing of parcel post bill.

Unfortunately we have opposed to us the postmaster general, who proposes under any consideration to recommend to congress some plan whereby this bill may be put into operation.

The merchants of Illinois through their secretary are doing effective work by circulars and signed petitions. The merchants of other states are also passing resolutions and sending them to the postmaster general and the president of the United States.

The most effective way, however, to offset any other influence is to appeal direct to your congressman who represents your district. It is he who has to vote and it is he on whom the promoters of the parcels post must depend for support.

We cannot lose any time but should keep a watchful eye on the promoters of the enterprise. For some time past there has been a general agitation for one cent postage and there is no reason why this should not be adopted. It would benefit everyone and not the few as is proposed in the parcels post bill.

It is our earnest request that the trade papers call the attention of the organization to the great importance of giving this matter careful attention and it is to be hoped that at the earliest possible moment this subject shall be brought to the attention of the different members of congress. Now is the time to do the work. For the next four or five weeks the congressmen will be generally at home and can be reached by their constituents. Do it now.

JOHN A. GREEN, Secretary.

The retail grocer can't afford to feel satisfied with the way things are going, for the very moment he begins to feel that way he commences to go back, down the ladder that he has so laboriously been climbing.

The Chinese government has sanctioned a loan. to be contracted by the new Viceroy at Canton, with foreigners, in the sum of $10,000,000 teals (approximately $7,000,000 United States currency), for improvements in Canton city.

It's the "easy" merchant who lets the deadbeat gets the best of him by living off him for several weeks or months and then refusing to pay the bill. No storekeeper has a right to be "easy" or timid about asking for what's due him.

An English firm handling food products head their announcement with the following: "We believe in purity, genuine goods, and a living profit." Dealers who sell cheap trash (on which they seldom get a decent margin) simply kill their market.

How much time do you waste? How much have you wasted, positively wasted this hour, this day, this year? Answer this question but once and you will straightway start to economize. So much so, that time will be a treasure to you, while the time you have lost shall become a source of regret.

During the first seven months of 1907, the Transvaal sent to England $10,710,000 more gold than in the same months of 1906. But this has been more than offset by a decrease of $12,000,000 in England's receipts of gold from the Australian colonies. During the first five months of the year, the official Australian figures showed a decrease in total gold exports of $17,300,000.

Barber tells us that matches are now produced from first to last, even to the packing of the boxes, without being touched by the hand of a single human being. The Diamond Match Company own 20,000 acres of land in New England and 80,000 acres in California, from which 800,000,000 feet of lumber a year are cut and sawed, making 6,666 carloads, or 222 trainloads of thirty cars each. At one factory in Ohio 150,000,000 matches are made every twenty-four hours.

The old Greeks used to say, and rightly, too, that the speech was the mirror of the mind. This is true; but one's eye, what power has not the eye to reflect the mind. It is perhaps more significant than the speech. Weak eyes are seldom with strong men and where they are it is merely the result of the most assiduous application to study and print. It is abuse of the eye. And see, how quickly the expression of the eye changes as the thoughts flash in one's mind with lightning speed.

SOUTH CITY PROJECTS.

When Louis F. Swift, Nelson Morris and P. D. Armour came from Chicago in quest of a place to establish their business interests on the Pacific Coast they selected South San Francisco. Here they acquired 41,000 acres, including four miles of deep water front, and laid the foundation for that humming stretch of activity now known as South City. Here a meat plant does a $5,000,000 volume of business a year and a score or more of enterprises are being developed with all the source at the command of progressive captains of industry. Ferry slips, docks, sewered streets, a modern water and light system, street cars and workingmen's homes represent in South City millions of dollars of investment. But the activity has only begun. The very first move was to develop the water front, then to build a belt line railroad clear around it and connecting all the factories and other plants with the main line of the Southern Pacific Railroad. The railroad in South City was patterned after the Chicago Junction Railroad, which has been one of the great factors in the industrial development of the Windy Ctiy, the saving of time and cost that accrues to the manufacturer or jobber handling large quantities of freight being almost incalcuable. Another thing that helps to attract attention to South City is the great number of manuafcturing plants being established there, investments of this character approximating over $10,000,000. There plants will all be completed in the near future and will give South City a population of over 50,000.

Widow of J. M. Hanley Employs Assistant of District Attorney to Act for Her.

The will of John M. Hanley, the grocer who went out for a long distance swim in the ocean some weeks ago and was drowned, was filed for probate recently. The estate, which is worth about $4,000, comprising principally the store at Sutter and Scott streets, is left to the widow. A peculiar feature is the fact that the attorney for Mrs Hanley in the filing of the will was James M. Hanley, the well known assistant of the district attorney. "Jim" Hanley was no relative of the dead man, and, in fact, was not acquainted with him. Mrs. Hanley seems to have chosen him to do the legal work because his initials are identical with those of her late husband.

Last Thursday a flag was broken out on a pole mounted on the top of the 45th story, and it is expected that everything will be enclosed within the next few weeks so that the interior work can proceed uninterrupted during the cold days this winter. All summer this building has been one of the sights of New York, and Broadway has been constantly jammed with sightseers who have stopped to look upward at workmen swinging steel beams into place 600 feet above the sidewalk. The Metropolitan Life Building annex on Madison Square has reached the 12th story. This is to be 48 stories high, or a total of 658 feet above the sidewalk.

Attracting Trade.

This week we print an article taken from the "Grocers' Gazette," a weekly paper published in London. This paper prints on its title page the following: "The largest circulation of any grocery paper in the empire," a statement that is fully borne out by its contents. The following article is an excerpt from a letter of an old grocer to his son, the latter being just upon the threshold of a career in the grocery world. This letter is pregnant, as will be seen, with warnings about selling goods at a loss, bating and other trade abuses that are common here in America.

We read:

"How to Attract Customers."

"To attract new customers one of the most important things is your window display; set out your goods tastefully and not too crowded together or indiscriminately mixed up. Nothing is less attractive than a conglomeration of goods in a shop window; the eye gets bewildered with them, for out of a multiplicity of articles no one thing can attract special attention. The best plan is to display a few good lines every day separated from each other, all of them bearing a neat price ticket, and all quite fresh and free from dust, etc.

"Never plaster your window over with glaring posters or trumpery looking handbills; nothing lowers the prestige of a shop more than this; it is moreover such a common practice that there is no novelty in it. A well cleaned, well dressed and well lighted window stands out conspicuously among a whole row of shops whose windows are half-obscured with these vulgar advertisements, the very sight of which people are sick and tired of. One or two neatly framed show cards is all you want in this way, and even these should be novel in design to attract any particular notice; in other words, try and get out of the beaten track on this question of window advertisements.

"Your window display having served its purpose in drawing people into the shop, your next thing is to impress them still further with the appearance of the interior. First and foremost, everything should be spotlessly clean and fresh looking, all brass work should be showing a high polish, the floor should be clean and free from litter, the counters should be dressed as tastefully as possible, plenty of goods being in view (a large stock of goods suggests a large trade).

"A good plan is to always have one special line on sale, and a good place to display this is in the doorway, where it catches everybody's eye (whether passing by, passing in, or passing out). Have your whole stock of this on show, with a large price ticket attached to the goods; there is no necessity to cut the price, but mark it down as low as you can afford. Put something different in every day; the goods you had on show yesterday will be asked for both to-day and to-morrow.

"Never sell goods at a loss (this is the high road to ruin) unless you have some dead or defective stock on your hands, and the sooner you clear this out the better. The first loss on such stock is always the best; better to sell it at half the cost and turn the money you get for it over, than keep it standing idle on your shelves from one year's end to the other.

"Your assistants should always be clean and smart when serving at the counter. No person likes to buy goods they are going to eat from a dirty salesman. They may not say anything, but they think a lot, and perhaps never enter the shop again.

How to Hold Your Customers.

"Never overcharge for goods on the assumption that customers will not notice it. Depend upon it, they know the market value of the goods they are buying as well as you do yourself. They also have a good idea of the value of their own custom, and quickly transfer it elsewhere if they are being taken advantage of. Only recommend those goods you are sure will give satisfaction. Your customers will then have confidence in your future statements and you will make many sales which otherwise you would not. Never disappoint a customer. If you promise to send an order up at a certain time be sure to do so, even if you have to

CALIFORNIA WINES.

The Pacific Wine and Spirit Review for Sept. 1st. says relative to dry wines: The usual seasoned conditions prevail. Trade is fairly good through out the United State, but exports by sea were quite light.

On sweet wines it says: The situation is healthy and the outlook good for higher prices as a result of the present vintage.

"Although there has been some diminution in the amount of Hay received during the week ending to-day yet the condition shows no improvement in any way, for we are still receiving considerably more than we can comfortably handle. This week shows a total of 4520 tons in comparison with 4510 for the week preceding. In spite of the continuance of rather heavy shipments, the farmers are far from being satisfied, for many of them are still holding the bulk of their Hay in the fields awaiting cars. Many of them seem discouraged and are now piling up their Hay in. the fields or at the railroad sidings, and are preparing to cover same with canvas or boards, fearing a continuance of the lack of shipping facilities for some time to come. It is proving an unsatisfactory season for some producers, and as our market is receiving practically all the Hay it can handle, no real relief would be afforded the shipper if cars were furnished in abundance.

hire a cab to perform it; this would serve a lesson to you not to promise what you cannot readily carry out. See that all your customers get what they pay for, not only in quality but also in weight. Do not depend upon your men doing this without any system of checking them. Your customers' interests are your own, so watch them closely at every point. Give good value and just weight at all times, and success is bound to follow."

UNION OIL WARFARE.

Rival of Standard Promises To Make Things Hum.

War is soon to be opened upon the Standard Oil Co. in its Eastern strongholds by the Union Oil Co. of California, the only rival that has ever successfully competed against the giant trust. For ten years the Union company has fought the Standard on the Pacific Coast and has solidly entrenched itself as a competitor in that territory.

To enter the New York market the Union Oil Co. had conceived the idea of transporting its oil from the Pacific Coast to Panama and across the isthmus by pipe line. To bring it by rail across the continent would be impossible, the company says, owing to the Standard's monopoly of tank cars and its influence with the railroads. It has purchased two steamers for the traffic from Colon to New York and they are ready to sail. But for the difficulty the company experienced in getting enough independent men here to handle its oil upon arrival the fight would now be on.

With cautious secrecy contracts have been made until now the Standard's bold young competitor is declared to be ready for the real fight. J. C. Collins, manager of the New York office at Battery Place, says the company is now selling about 500,000 barrels of crude oil a month, but that it could easily draw out another 500,000 barrels if able to get it upon the market. "We expect to bring 10,000 barrels of oil to the New York market each day." said Mr. Collins. "There are now handled about 50,000 barrels a day here. In time we shall undoubtedly increase our supply. It will cost us about 65c per barrel to bring the oil to this harbor by way of the isthmus. We shall be easily able to compete with the Standard Oil and will, if necessary enter into a vigorous cut-rate war. We have plenty of oil for the Eastern market. The only difficulty any independent dealer has ever had in fighting the Standard has been the inability to get railroad transportation. This does not enter into our fight. We do not use a mile of rail anywhere. The Standard people laughed at us when we first tried to get an even break in the San Francisco market. Now we are doing as much business there as they are. We are the only independent who sells refined illuminating oil from tank wagons in San Francisco. Seventeen of our wagons are in the streets daily.

COMMUTERS COMING BACK.

A falling-off of approximately 3000 commuter's tickets from the totals of last October shows that about 14,000 San Franciscans have moved back during the past year to their old city from temporary homes in Marin and Alameda counties. The Northwestern Pacific's reports of sales of commutation tickets for October show just $4000 less than for last October. As the tickets average about $4 each, the railway officials estimate that 1000 former commuters have come back to this side for good, and with them have come their families and household dependants to the number of about 45000 men, women and children. For the present month of October the commutation ticket sales for Marin County points show 2950 commuters left. They are distributed as follows: Tiburon 150, Sausalito 500, Mill Valley 600, and for the district embracing Corte Madera, Larkspur, Ross, San Anselmo, Fairfax and San Rafael 1700. From Berkeley, Oakland and Alameda and their environs, San Francisco has got back since last October close to 2000 commuters, representing apprixomately 9000 people who have been living in Berkeley, Oakland, Fruitvale and Alameda and traveling on the Key Route and the Southern Pacific boats. At present the Key Route is regularly carrying about 5000 commuters and the Southern Pacific boast about 15,000 commuters every day. These figures do not include individual ticket holders, but the wage earners who make the regular daily trips across the bay to their business. Within the last few months, it is said, there has been a falling off of 8 per cent in the number of transbay commuters handled by the Southern Pacific, indicating a movement back to San Francisco with the approach of the rainy season, and the partial restoration of accommodation for families. At the same time, while San Francisco proper has regained this transbay population of about 14,000 persons, it has lost about 3000 residents, who have moved over the county line into Baden, South San Francisco, Burlingame, San Mateo and other suburban towns on the peninsula, a number of refugees having moved from the various city parks and taken up their permanent residents in their little houses over the county line.

The startling statement that black lettering will break glass-plate is now verified this week by a writer in "Rough Notes." This innocent practice has been the cause of the Insurance Company refusing to write such windows. The black material having powerful absorbing properties causes an uneven strain of heat. A sudden contact with a colder atmospher causes the break. Thus all black lettered windows must now be considered hazardous risks.

CALIFORNIA PURE FOOD LAW

Full Interpretation by Its Author, Together with Other Data Necessary to a Correct Understanding of the Statute.

WHAT DEALERS MUST OBSERVE.

Digest of Laws of Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Texas, Utah and Washington.

January 1st, 1908, is not far off. Upon that date there goes into effect in this State a statute in which every grocer from Siskiyou to San Diego is vitally interested.

The McCartney Pure Food and Drug Law was passed by the Legislature of California, and having been duly signed by Governor Gillette on March 11th, 1907, becomes an active law on the date referred to above—January 1st, 1908.

Counts on "Advocate."

In a letter written us under recent date, the State Board of Health says:

"We appreciate fully the interest you take in the matter and feel that we will have a strong ally in you in enforcing the Pure Food Law."

We will be strong allies in this respect; we will do all we can to educate our readers in the requirements of the law. We will be the friend of the grocer primarily. If any of the decisions of the State Board of Health are unjust and unfair, we will do all in our power to correct the injustice.

We are sure that the Board proposes to act fairly with all concerned. In a letter to us in this regard they say:

"The crowd of other business makes it impossible at present for us to go into detail regarding our plans in enforcing the law, but we can assure you that we shall try to enforce it in a reasonable manner, having due regard for the rights of every one.

"We do not consider that our duty is entirely police work. Education of the public, both manufacturing and consuming, will be constantly kept in mind.

"We recognize the fact that many will violate the law unconsciously and until they can be properly instructed we will be reasonably lenient but for the wilful violator our sympathy will be small.

"We have no doubt that the grocers will stand by us in the enforcement of the law, and appreciate very highly your offers of aid."

There you have it. Uphold the Board of Health and they will meet you half way. Otherwise you must take the consequences.

POINTS TO WATCH--PAGE 47.

Much Interest Shown.

That the grocery trade is awakening to the importance of this measure, is evidenced by the number of inquiries received at this offiec during the past few weeks.

One of our subscribers wrote us recently to the following effect:

"I am a subscriber to the 'Advocate,' and I notice the warning you give to the grocers in regard to having guarantees. Now, we have goods on hand that we cannot tell of whom they were purchased. Will you kindly let us know what steps to take? Have you a copy of the Pure Food Law?

We communicated with the State Board of Health with regard to the above inquiry and received the following reply from Dr. N. K. Foster, secretary of the Board:

About Old Goods.

"In reply to your letter and answering your correspondent, I would advise him to get rid of the goods before the first of January. Your can readily see that it would not do to allow them to be sold after that time on the plea of not knowing from whom they were purchased and the impossibility to get guarantees. Ten months were allowed from the passage of the bill before it went into effect so that there would be plenty of time to do this. While as a general proposition I do not believe grocers would be so lost to truth and honesty as to claim they could not tell from whom they purchased goods, still there are many who would take such an undue advantage.

"I assure you that the State Board will have no disposition to use any technicality in the enforcement of the law. It will endeavor to act justly and impartially to all, protecting the honest dealer against the dishonest, as well as the consumers against any who might seek to take advantage of them."

Definite Rulings After New Year.

In one of our letters to the Board of Health we invited them to use our coloumns as freely as they cared to with regard to rulings, etc. In the above regard Dr. Foster says:

"I appreciate very highly the interest you take and the privilege you give us.

"As the law does not go into effect until the 1st of January it will be impossible for us to issue rulings which will have the authority of the law before that time. It is only in a general way that we can give information."

Author's Interpretation.

Mr. H. S. G. McCarthy, author of the Pure Food Law of California, is a resident of Los Angeles and has been retained by the District Attorney of that County to act as Deputy and to enforce the law. Mr. McCartney has already gotten busy, as will be seen below.

The "Commercial Bulletin" of recent date says in this regard:

"Mr. McCartney already has closed one food factory in Los Angeles. Frank Oakley, a detective in the employ of the county, acting under directions of Mr. McCartney, closed the plant of the Stevens Manufacturing Co., at 405-407 San Pedro St., recently. This company makes and jobs pickles, preserves and extracts. Orders were issued to destroy all offensive goods, and on promise from the company that this would be done no arrests were made. About $7,000 worth of goods will be destroyed."

Danger In Old Goods.

Mr. McCartney in an interview said:

"An important point not hitherto brought out is that old goods which are discolored, which have acted on the tin or which in any manner have been affected detrimentally by age are as much amendable to the law as are improperly made or labeled goods.

"I have in my office a large box of aged bottled olives, pickles, marmalade, berry jam, etc., which are properly labeled and probably were properly made. But unless the stocks on hand are destroyed, I will begin proceedings.

"These goods were taken from the stock of a jobber in specialties.

"Hundreds of grocers in California doubtless have on hand odd lots of goods which have deteriorated with age and which if my interpretation is carried out, will be amenable to the law. However, the retailer is immune from prosecution until January 1. Only the manufacturer is now being prosecuted."

Two Months to Clean Up.

Referring to the work ahead of him, Mr. McCartney said:

"I have been delegated by the District Attorney to look after the prosecution of the State Food Law, which bears my name and which became effective in so far as the manufacture of goods is concerned July 1 this year and will be effective covering all goods made or offered for sale after January 1, next year. This gives the retailer a little more than two months in which to clean up his stock.

"He had better get busy.

"I am instructed to prosecute every violator of the law no matter what plausible excuses are offered. With the aid of the sheriff's office we expect to purge Los Angeles of impure foods.

"I am not ready to say when regular inspectors will be put out to inspect factories. It is enough to say that we have notified every manufacturer as far as possible that the law already is in effect and must be complied with.

"I am not going to say when or where we will strike next, but we may catch someone napping. We are not going to be unreasonable, but we are going to enforce the law."

Mr. McCartney states that even though the law has been given much publicity still there are many connected with the trade who apparently do not understand its purpose and provisions. For the information of these Mr. McCartney has compiled in his own language a simple explanation of the provisions of the law and what may be expected. This explanation, in part, follows:

Food Law Explained.

That the State Pure Food Law may be better understood by those engaged in the manufacture of foods since July 1, 1907, this office submits the following rules, regulations and definitions which will govern in the enforcement of the law in this county.

It will conduce to clearness to call attention to the general purpose of this act:

The primary purposes of the Pure Food Law is to prevent deception and to protect against fraud, consumers of food or drugs.

As an incidental or secondary purpose, it seeks to prevent, or at least discourage, the use of deleterious substances for either purpose; but its first aim is to insure, so far as possible, that the purchaser of an article of food or a drug shall obtain nothing different from what he wishes and intends to purchase. And, according to the recognized rules of statutory construction, the language of its provisions must be interpreted with reference to and in harmony with the primary general purpose, so that, in determining the proper nomenclature for articles of food as defined in the act, the intention of the law will be best observed by giving to such articles names readily understood.

What the Law Forbids.

The use of any dye, harmless or otherwise, to color or stain a food in a manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed, is specifically prohibited by this act.

The use of mineral dye or any coal tar dye in coloring macaroni, vermicelli, spaghetti, and other kinds of paste, is prohibited.

The use of paraffine in food products is forbidden.

Mineral substances of all kinds are specially forbidden in confectionery, whether they be poisonious or not. Only harmless colors or flavors shall be added to confectionery.

Artificial colors (that are allowed) should be stated or declared whenever present in flavoring extracts or confectionery.

Imitations Must Be Clearly Indicated.

Aritcles of food in the preparation of which such substitutes are employed should not be labeled as if they

A Modern Plant.

Kingan & Co., Ltd., have completed a model building in every respect. It is the finest on the Coast, and is the equal of any in this country. It is built entirely of concrete and iron and has every facility known to science for keeping it clean. There are all modern conveniences for handling Kingan's Own Cure Hams, Sugar-Cured Bacon, Lard and Canned Meats. The meat is slipped into the cellar direct from the cars, where it is washed and hung on Trees. These Trees are then rolled into the smoke houses, and from thence to the different departments for distribution to the trade.

All of Kingan's Own Cure Meats, Lard and Canned Meats have been inspected under the law and passed. This inspection does not determine the flavor of the meat; that is for the consumer to decide, and no one is more competent than the consumer, who is and should be the judge of what is good and wholesome food.

Owing to the recent disaster Kingan's Own Cure Meats could not be secured in sufficient quantities to supply the trade. But now, with this fine new building and modern equipment they are in a position to promptly fill all orders received for their meats on the day that the order has been received, and every merchant should push the sale of Kingan's Own Cure Hams, Sugar-Cured Bacon, Canned Meats and Lard.

were prepared from standard flavors or from the fruits themselves. For instance, a preparation intended to imitate vanilla extract should be designated by its true name, as "Imitation Vanilla Extract," or "Imitation Vanilla Flavor," and ice cream flavored with imitation strawberry flavor should not be designated as "Strawberry Ice Cream," but as "Imitation Strawberry Flavored Ice Cream," etc.

A food product must not, under the law, be mixed with any other substance for the purpose of concealing damage or inferiority.

A vegetable which is not naturally sweet cannot be sold as one which is naturally sweet by mixing with sugar or sucrose without violating the law, unless the addition of sugar is plainly indicated on the label; however, in cases where no deception is intended or practiced, the mention of the presence of a sugar substance is not required.

Preservatives and Dyes Are Regulated.

All chemical dyes and preservative substances, such as boracic acid and borax, salicylic acid and its salts, benzoic acid and its salts, sulphurous acid and its salts, and formaldehyde, are prohibited under the law in food and food products, on the ground that they are poisonous and deleterious to health, provided, that sodium benzoate in limited quantities, or benzoic acid equivalent thereto, not exceeding one-tenth of one per cent, may be used in preservatives for the present.

If any substance allowed by this Act is mixed with coffee, tea or spice, it must be so stated so as not to deceive the purchaser. As, for instance, in case of a cereal preparation sold for or used as a substitute for coffee, it must not be termed "cereal coffee," as it is held that, since the product mentioned is not a coffee it cannot be termed "coffee," or "cereal coffee," but either product must be designated "Imitation coffee," etc.

What Constitutes Adulteration.

Food shall be deemed adulterated in its manufacture, within the meaning of this act, in any of the following cases:

First—If any substance has been mixed or packed or mixed and packed with the food so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality, purity, strength or food value.

Second—If any substance has been substiuted wholly or in part for the article of food.

Third—If any essential or any valuable constitute or ingredient of the article of food has been wholly or in part abstracted.

Fourth—If it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated or stained in any manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

Fifth—If it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient.

Sixth—If it consists in whole or in part, of a filthy, decomposed or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or any portion of an animal or vegetable unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if it is the product of a diseased animal, or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter; provided, that an article of liquor shall not be deemed adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded if it be blended or mixed with like substances, so as not to injuriously reduce, lower or affect it quality, purity or strength.

Seventh—In case of confectionery. If it contain terra alba, barytes, talc, chromo yellow, or other mineral substances, or poisonous color or flavor or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health, or any vinous, malt, or spirituous liquor or compound or narcotic drug.

Reducing Food Values Forbidden.

No substance may be mixed or packed with a food product which wil reduce or lower its quality or strength. Not excluded under this provision are substances properly used in the preparation of food products for clarification or refining, and eliminated in the further process of manufacture.

Only harmless colors may be used in food products.

The term "blend" applies to a mixture of like or identical substances, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring only.

A color or flavor cannot be used or employed to imitate any natural product of recognized name or quality.

When a substance of a recognized quality commonly used in the preparation of a food is replaced by another substance not injurious or deleterious to health, the name of the substituted substance must be stated on the label.

Label Must Tell the Contents.

When any substance which does not reduce, lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength, is added to a food product other than that necessary to its manufacture or refining, the label shall bear a statement to that effect.

When an article is made up of refuse material, fragments or trimmings, the use of the name of the substance from which they are derived, unless accompanied by a statement to that effect, shall be deemed in violation of this act. Packages of such materials may be labeled "pieces," "trimmings," or some similar appellation.

The terms "mixtures" and "compounds" are interchangeable, and indicate the results of putting together two or more food products.

Compounds Must Have Individual Names.

These mixtures or compounds shall not be imitations of other articles, whether simple, mixed or compound, or offered for sale under the name of other articles. They shall bear the distinctive name and the name of the place where the mixture or compound has been manufactured or produced.

A mixture of compound shall be deemed misbranded if the label be incomplete as to the names of the required ingredients. A simple product does not require any further statement than the name, or distinctive name thereof.

In considering this act and the rules and regulations promulgated by the United States Department of Agriculture, it is apparent that the law aims to prevent all forms of misrepresentation and deception in the manufacture and preparation of foods.

Study of the Law Recommended.

It is suggested that all manufacturers and dealers familiarize themselves with, and study the law carefully, that they may be better enabled to conduct their business in harmony therewith.

This office has endeavored to place in the hands of the manufacturers of foods, copies of the law with the above object in view.

In this way it is hoped that all injustice will be avoided in the manufacture of food and in the execution of the law, and every person be given an opportunity to put himself right in the manufacture of food products.

Due notice is given that this office shall endeavor vigorously to enforce the State Pure Food Law of March 11, 1907,

Respectfully submitted,

J. D Fredericks, District Attorney of Los Angeles Co.
By H. S. G. McCartney, Deputy.

THE LAW ITSELF.

In order that each grocer may see for himself just what the law says we print the same in full hereinbelow:

McCARTNEY PURE FOOD LAW.

CHAPTER 181.

An act for preventing the manufacture, sale or transportation of adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded foods and liquors and regulating the traffic therein, providing penalties, establishing a State laboratory for foods, liquors and drugs and making an appropriation therefor.

[Approved March 11, 1907.]

The people of the State of California, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The manufacture, production, preparation, compounding, packing, selling, offering for sale or keeping for sale within the State of California, or the introduction into this State from any other State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or from any foreign country, of any article of food or liquor which is adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded within the meaning of this Act is hereby prohibited. Any person, firm, company, or corporation who shall import or receive from any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia or from any foreign country, or who having so received shall deliver for pay or otherwise, or offer to deliver to any other person, any article of food or liquor adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, or any person who shall manufacture or produce, prepare or compound, or pack or sell, or offer for sale, or keep for sale, in the State of California any such adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded food, or liquor shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; provided, that no article of food shall be deemed adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded within the provisions of this act, when prepared for export beyond the jurisdiction of the United States and prepared or packed according to specifications or directions of the foreign purchaser, when no substance is used in the preparation or packing thereof in conflict with the laws of the foreign country to which said article is intended to be shipped; but if such foods shall be in fact sold, or kept or offered for sale for domestic uses and consumption, then this proviso shall not exempt said article from the operation of any provisions of this Act.

SEC. 2. The term "food" as used in this act shall include all articles used for food, drink, liquor, confectionery or condiment by man or other animals, whether simple, mixed, or compound.

SEC. 3. The standard of purity of food and liquor shall be that proclaimed by the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture.

SEC. 4 Food shall be deemed adulterated within the meaning of this Act, in any of the following cases:

First. If any substance has been mixed or packed, or mixed and packed with the food so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality, purity, strength, or food value.

Second. If any substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article of food.

Third. If any essential or any valuable constituent or ingredient of the article of food has been wholly or in part abstracted

Fourth. If it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated or stained in any manner whereby damage or inferiority is concealed.

Fifth. If it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient.

or vegetable unfit for food, whether manufactured or not, or if it is the product of a diseased animal, or one that has died otherwise than by slaughter; provided, that an article of liquor shall not be deemed adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded if it be blended or mixed with like substances so as not to injuriously reduce or injuriously lower or injuriously affect its quality, purity or strength.

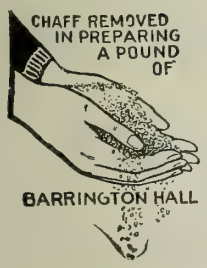
"KEEPS DRY"

San Pedro Salt Co. Long Beach, Cal.

One of our series of ads now running in the big magazines.



America's most noted authoress writes, from her home on the Hudson, that Barrington Hall is the only coffee she has been able to drink in many years:

"It is many years since I have been able to drink coffee while engaged in literary work, but I find to my great delight that I can drink as much Barrington Hall Coffee as I desire, and have done so--three large cup-fulls a day--without any ill effects at all."—Name given on request.

Barrington Hall
The Steel-Cut Coffee

Barrington Hall is pure, high grade coffee, prepared by our patented process—a common-sense method of treating the berry whereby the substances which contribute nothing to its flavor and healthfulness are removed, and the coffee flavor is preserved to a remarkable degree.

By our process all dust and the bitter cellulose skin, evidently placed by nature around the heart of the berry to protect it, are removed and thrown away; and when you buy a pound of Barrington Hall you get a pound of the best part of the coffee berry only. You can enjoy its delicious flavor without fear of ill effects. This is the experience of thousands who had given up coffee drinking, many of whom have written to tell us so.

"Steel-cut," means that the coffee is cut (not ground) into fine, even particles. This cutting does not crush the little oil cells as does grinding and the rich, aromatic oil (Food Product), which makes coffee flavor, is preserved. This explains why a pound of Barrington Hall will make 15 to 20 cups more of perfect full strength coffee than would the same coffee if ground in a coffee mill.

PRICE: 35c to 40c per pound, according to locality. If your grocer tries to sell you something "Just as good" he has his own interest, not yours, in mind. Write us and we can tell you how and where to get Barrington Hall. If you accept an imitation, please do not judge our coffee by it.

In case the wholesaler, jobber, manufacturer or other party making such guaranty to said dealer resides without this State, and it appears from the certificate of the director of the State Laboratory that such article or articles were adulterated, mislabeled or misbranded, within the meaning of this Act, or the National Pure Food Act, approved June 30th, 1906, the District Attorney must forthwith notify the Attorney-General of the United States of such violation.

PURE TEAS VS.
Artificial Colored Teas.

Pure Green Teas Have Arrived in America for the First Time in History.

SHOULD COMPLETELY OUST ARTIFICIALLY COLORED TEAS.

(Written expressly for the "Advocate" by Charles B. Platt, Vice-President of J. A. Folger & Co., and member of the United States Board of Tea Experts.)

Is it indifference to the welfare of the American people, or an excessive love of gain, that Teas from Japan and China have been artfully covered with a mineral artificial coloring? The practice has covered a period of so many years, that it has become a custom which was assumed to be practically a necessity.

What influence is there about Tea, which should cause importers and retail dealers to continue along the old lines year after year, however progressive they may be in other branches of commerce? Is the soothing power of Tea so great that it should cause commercial activity to slumber over its evils, and accept its abuses without comment?

Who Is In Fault?

Perhaps the Tea importer who had full knowledge of the artificial coloring, lacked moral courage to face the retail dealer with any proposition different from that ruling fifty years ago. Perhaps the retail grocer did not know, or did not feel it any part of his duties to inform the consumers that Teas were fearfully and abominally colored. Perhaps the Tea drinkers of this country were in blissful ignorance, or dreamy apathy.

Colored With Black Lead.

The fact remains and so plainly so, that he "who runs may read," that Green Teas are artificially colored green, with mineral coloring material, and that basket-fired, or so-called uncolored Teas, are colored dark with black lead.

This mineral coloring was put on Teas to give uniformity in color, to cover up the yellow leaves, or in other words, to deceive, to make a poor leaf, have the same appearance as good leaf; a very cunning trick of the trade.

I used the word "was," implying that colored Teas were a thing of the past. That is wrong, artificially colored Teas are very much in evidence from the 1907 crop in every Tea market in the country. Should they be?

Should be Rigidly Excluded.

Ah; that is another matter. It is my personal opinion, based on years of Tea experience, that artificially coated or colored Teas should be rigidly excluded; but if permitted to land, then have every chest, every package which Pure Tea at Last.

The year 1907 will go into Tea history as the period when Tea interests awakened to the realization that powdered soapstone or black lead does not tend to improve the beverage For the first time within the recollection of the oldest Tea Merchant, something has actually happened, for at least one large importing Tea house in San Francisco has broken the manacles of tradition, and imported large supplies of PURE TEA.

Think of pure uncolored Pan Fired and Basket Fired from Japan, think of Pure uncolored Gunpowder and Young Hyson from China. Did you ever hear of such a thing? Yet it is an existing fact.

Appearance of Pure Tea.

In appearance the good grades of Pure Pan Fired are attractive in make, and rather dark olive green in color. They look just what they are, Pure Clean Tea.

The common grades show some yellow leaf, which clearly classify them where they belong: viz., common Tea.

Basket Fired in the upper grades are not much changed in appearance; the absence of black-lead coloring is an improvement; these Teas look pure and attractive; the low grades, true to Nature, show that they are low grades.

In the judgment of Tea experts, the high and good grades of Moyune and Ping Suey Gunpowders and Young Hysons are vastly improved by being clean and pure, while the low grades have more or less yellow leaf, which has heretofore been covered by coloring.

What Clipping Shows.

I have spoken only of the relative appearance of the dry leaf. Now let us take two cups and put the water on a pure pan fired and an artificially colored "pan fired." Looking into the depth of the cups, we will find one as clean and clear as amber, the other will be clouded with soapstone flour, insoluble, indigestible.

In drinking quality there is no comparison, the Pure Teas are immeasurably superior; they taste like Tea, not like a mixture of mineral coloring and Tea. Nature made the Tea plant for some wise purpose, and human skill has not raised the standard of that purpose by artful adulteration.

In truth, Tea should not be considered a mere commercial article, to be bought and sold at the lowest obtainable price, irrespective of purity and quality; on the contrary, the leaves of the Tea plant should be looked upon as a munificent gift from Nature, calculated to give pleasure to the palate, to mildly stimulate the system, to promote friendship and social happiness.

Will You Help?

Will you lend your aid by supplying the people who depend upon you with Tea that is PURE, as Nature intended it should be; Tea that is sufficiently high grade to produce an agreeable beverage?

Tea Inspection Act—Food and Drugs Act.

Supplementary to his article Mr. Platt handed us the following memorandum taken from the "Spice Mill" for July, showing the attitude of the Attorney-General of the United States with respect to the conflict between the Food and Drugs Act of 1906 and the Special Tea Inspection Act of 1897:

"An important opinion by United States Attorney-General Charles J. Bonaparte to the Secretary of the Treasury, on the relations between the Tea Inspection Act and the Federal Food and Drugs Act, was only recently published, though the opinion is dated February 23, 1907. A digest of the opinion is as follows:

"'There is no such repugnance between the Special Tea Inspection Act of March 2, 1897 (29 Stat., 604), and the general Food and Drugs Act of June 30, 1906 (34 Stat., 768), as to prevent them, generally speaking, from standing together.

"'The Food and Drugs Act does not appear to have been intended as a substitute for the earlier statute in the matter of the importation of tea, but both statutes are cumulative in so far as the importation of tea is concerned, and both should be given effect.

"'An importation of tea is, therefore, subject to the provisions of both Acts—that is, it must comply with the standards established by the Secretary of the Treasury under the Tea Inspection Act, and must also stand the tests in reference to adulteration and misbranding imposed by the Food and Drugs Act.

"'Imported tea, although meeting the requirements of the Tea Inspection Act of 1897, is still subject to the provisions of the Food and Drugs Act of 1906 regarding adulteration, labeling, misbranding and guaranty.

"'In case of repugnancy between any specific provisions of the two statutes, the provisions of the Food and Drugs Act would prevail to the extent of that repugnancy, and any conflicting provision of the Tea Inspection Act would, to that extent, be impliedly repealed.

"'In absence of an express repeal of an earlier statute by a later one covering the same subject, effect should be given to both unless there is a positive repugnance between them, in whole or in part, in which case the earlier statute is repealed by implication to the extent of such repugnancy, or unless the provisions of the latter statute cover the whole subject of the earlier law and are plainly intended as a substitute therefor, in which case there is likewise a repeal of the earliest statute by implication.'"

N. B.—Believing that our readers will be interested in further study of this matter, we reprint below an interview given the Editor of this paper last April and printed in our issue of April 5th.

In an interview with Mr. Chas. B. Platt, Vice-President of J. A. Folger & Co., and member of the U. S. Board of Tea Experts, he states that at the session of the Board, held in the Appraisers' Building, New York, last February, it was the opinion of the Board that teas were regulated by the Special Tea Act approved March 27, 1897, which act was not repealed by the General Food and Drug Act of 1906.

Thus, while tea was the only beverage on which artificial mineral coloring was curtailed by the National Government for the period intervening from 1897 to 1906, thus standing in the light of being the first step in the direction of pure food, yet today, the Pure Food requirements of the Food and Drug Act reverse the situation and place tea in the position of being the only article admitted into this country, which may be colored or coated with artificial mineral coloring matter. This position is hardly logical, but insomuch as the Treasury Department has approved the Tea Board's selections of Standards, this will remain in force for another year.

The new Standards are closely along the lines of previous years and will compel the U. S. Tea Examiners, who are located at the examining ports, viz., San Francisco, New York, Chicago, Tacoma, St. Paul and Honolulu, to admit teas artificially colored green and artificially colored black, providing the amount of coloring is not in excess of the coloring on the Government Standards.

It is generally claimed that the green coloring matter used on Pan Fired Japans, Gunpowders and Young Hysons of China and the black coloring used on Basket Fired Japans is harmless in the small quantity used, and indeed doubtless it is, but Mr. Platt says he cannot recall ever hearing the claim that such coloring is wholesome, although as it is evidently put on for the purpose of making the "dry leaf" appear of a higher grade than it really is, it might be spoken of as appetizing, but so also could other artificially colored food products, which are prohibited, be called appetizing.

Since artificial coloring adds nothing to the drinking qualities of tea, the question naturally arises, "Why is it used?" The only ready reply is "Tea tradition," which is however, far from being an adequate reply.

It has been customary for years to put mineral coloring on tea, theoretically to retain the flavor, but practically for the purpose of deception.

"Do the tea drinking natives of China and Japan drink artificially colored tea?" No! emphatically no; they drink pure tea and drink it incessantly, morn, noon and night; in fact, the uncivilized, as we elect to call them, laugh at the idiosyncrasies of the people of boasted civilization, who persist in feeding themselves with soapstone or black lead, while enjoying their cup of tea.

As a matter of fact, the native Japanese tea dealers are giving the weight of their influence toward the shipment of Pure Japan tea to this country, believing that a radical change of this nature would restore confidence in tea and increase its consumption.

It is also thought that the vast number of tea drinkers in this country now believe that they are getting pure tea, and would certainly demand it from their grocer, if they knew of the customary coloring put onto green teas, but between the native tea grower in the Orient and the American consumer, there seems to be a stone wall, composed of the large Tea Firing and Packing Houses in the Orient, the importers of this country, and the retail distributors, all of whom are working along the lines of least resistance. The firing and packing houses in the Orient put on color because the importers demand it; the importers demand it because the retailers want it; the retailers want it because the consumers are in the habit of using it, thus the chain appears complete.

As a matter of fact, the majority of consumers ask for uncolored tea and have a right to get what they ask for, since they pay the price for it. This phase of the situation is being recognized by some of the importers and pure teas packed in cartons are now on the shelves of the retailers.

Would it not be wise to urge all distributers to discontinue selling colored teas, offering none but pure, thus anticipating the time when the Board of Tea Experts shall make this article conform to pure food requirements? Whether teas, in the near future, are pure, uncolored teas from force of legislation or from the choice of commercial demands, matters not so long as they become pure.

It might be advisable to state, to avoid giving a false impression, that some teas are now pure and above suspicion; as a rule, such black teas as Ceylons, Indians, Congous or English Breakfast from China, and Oolongs from Formosa, are free from artificial coloring and meet not only the requirements of Pure Food Laws, but also the requirements of commercial honor, standing on their own merits, in cup quality, without the addition of coloring to make them have a deceptive style.

LABELS AND SAMPLES.

National Ruling On Use of Labels—How Samples Are to Be Secured.

Under date of October 16, the authorities at Washington issued the Bulletin printed below; same being of great interest to the trade, we print it verbatim:

F. I. D. 78-79. Issued October 16, 1907.

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.
Office of the Secretary Board of Food and Drug Inspection.

FOOD INSPECTION DECISIONS 78-79.

78. The Use of Labels After Oct. 1, 1907. 79. Collection of Samples. (F. I. D. 78.)

THE USE OF LABELS AFTER OCTOBER 1, 1907.

When the rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act were issued by the three Secretaries on October 16, 1906, one of the regulations, 17 (i), provided that any labels printed and on hand that day which did not contain a misstatement as to the character of contents, but which were not in strict compliance with other requirements of the Regulations, might be issued without fear of prosecution until October 1, 1907.

Recently the National Wholesale Grocers' Association, and individual grocers, wholesalers, and jobbers throughout the United States, requested the Board of Food and Drug Inspection to recommend to the three Secretaries the extension of the privilege until October 1, 1908.

After a careful consideration of the matter the Board has unanimously decided to refuse to recommend such an extension. It is the opinion of the members of the Board that sufficient time has elapsed for manufacturers, jobbers, and wholesalers to adjust their business affairs to the terms of the law and of the regulations.

It is apparent, from the letters received by the Board, that the general impression exists that the use of corrected labels will not be permitted after October 1, 1907. This is an erroneous impression and is evidently gathered from the wording of Regulation 17 (i), and more particularly from Food Inspection Decision [illegible], stated that on and after October 1, 1907, the labels must be originally properly printed. This statement was advisory and conveyed the ruling that a further extension of the privilege need not be asked. It is desirable, of course, both from the standpoint of the Government officials who have charge of the enforcement of the law and from the view-point of the manufacturers, that the labels should be correct as originally printed.

Any person has a right to use a label which is not false or deceptive in any particular, even though this result is arrived at through the use of stickers, erasures, or other suitable means. Attention, however, is directed to the fact that misleading and deceptive statements must be obliterated. In other words, it is not sufficient, in the opinion of the Board, that a deceptive statement should be allowed to remain on one portion of the label with a corrective statement upon another portion of the label. This principle correction will be waived until further notice in case of deserted sardine tins which were printed and manufactured prior to January 1, 1907. In these cases the corrections may all be made in one label attached securely to one side of the package. Each invoice should be accompanied by a certificate from the exporter, showing the date of manufacture of the tins.

COLLECTION OF SAMPLES.

(Amendment to Regulation 3 of the Rules and Regulation for the Enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act.)

The Board of Food and Drug Inspection recommends that Regulation 3 of the Rules and Regulations for the Enforcement of the Food and Drugs Act be amended to read as follows, the amendment to become and be effective on and after November 1, 1907.

Regulation 3. Collection of Samples.

(Section 4.)

Samples of unbroken packages shall be collected only by authorized agents of the Department of Agriculture, or by the health, food, or drug officer of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, when commissioned by the Secretary of Agriculture for this purpose.

Samples may be purchased in the open market, and, if in bulk, the marks, brands, or tags upon the package, carton, container, wrapper, or accompanying printed or written matter shall be noted. The collector shall also note the names of the vendor and agent through whom the sale was actually made, together with the date of the purchase. The collectors shall purchase representative samples.

A sample taken from bulk goods shall be divided into three parts, and each shall be labeled with the identifying marks.

If a package be less than four pounds, or in volume less than two quarts, three packages shall be purchased, when practicable, and the marks and tags upon each noted as above. Where [illegible] samples are purchased, one sample shall be delivered to the Bureau of Chemistry or to such chemist or examiner as may be designated by the Secretary of Agriculture; the second and third samples shall be held under seal by the Secretary of Agriculture, who, upon request, shall deliver one of such samples to the party from whom purchased or to the party guaranteeing such merchandise.

When it is impracticable to collect these samples, or to divide the sample or samples, the order of delivery outlined above shall obtain, and in case there is a second sample the Secretary of Agriculture may, at his discretion, deliver such sample to parties interested.

All samples shall be sealed by the collector with a seal provided for the purpose.

STRICT INTERPRETATION.

(From the Indianapolis News.)

A number of small North Delaware street girls had opened a lemonade stand at the edge of the curb. The drink was in a large glass pitcher with sliced lemons floating appetizingly at the top. One small girl, with a red crayon, had lettered the word "artificial" and leaned it against the pitcher.

"What's that for?" inquired a passerby.

"Pure Food Law," said the girls in chorus.

"But why should you label it? Are not the water, the lemons and the sugar pure?"

"Yes."

"Well, what's artificial about it?"

"The ice."

Food Law Violations Are to be Prosecuted

Says Dr. H. W. Wiley, BUREAU CHIEF

Ninety-Five Per Cent of Manufacturers, He Says, Are Anxious to Obey Regulations Carefully and the Other Five Per Cent Must Go Into the United States Court.

Word reaches the Advocate from Washington, D. C., that Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, director of the Government's machinery for the enforcement of the Pure Food Act, is busily engaged preparing cases against manufacturers who have violated its provisions, and will soon turn them over to the Attorney-General for presentation in the courts. These cases are numerous, and are expected to give the Department of Justice plenty of additional work during the next few months.

"I expect the first thing the defendants of these suits will do in a legal way will be to attack the constitutionality of the Pure Food Act," said Dr. Wiley. "However, similar laws have been put into effect, and I have no doubt that this one will be found constitutional. During the year it has been in force it has had a decidedly beneficial effect in driving out adulteration and misbranding. In other words, it has promoted common honesty between the manufacturer of food products and consumers. Ninety-five per cent of the manufacturers of the country have readily yielded to the regulations prescribed by the Department of Agriculture, and with them we have had no trouble whatever.

"We now have forty laboratories and one hundred and fifty inspectors in the field. They do their work well, but they do not cover the country thoroughly. There are spots, particularly in the Middle West, which we have had to neglect. To make the application of the law universal we should have more inspectors and laboratories, and that will require a larger appropriation from Congress. We now have $650,000 a year and we need $1,000,000. During the coming session of Congress shall ask for an increase of $100,000.

"On October 1 the regulation in regard to labels went into final effect, and the law is now in full force. So far the law has not caused a decline in stocks nor an increase in the cost of living, but it has certainly lessened the danger of causing disease among the American people by means of impure foods. It more than justifies the money that has been spent upon it."

Incidentally, the Pure Food Law has forced the Department of Agriculture into the grocery business. Whenever a sample of an article of food has been tested and proved impure, the remainder is destroyed, but the greater part of the articles the department found pure, and so the Government has hit upon the device of selling the remainder at auction. Almost every week quantities of preserves, spices and other table delicacies are sold at Eighth and Christopher Sts., New York. The appraiser of stores disposes of them. In Washington the sales take place under a big tree back of the Agricultural Department building, the property clerk officiating. The Department employes are thus enabled to purchase their table dainties for a song.

Status of Canned Meats.

Corned and Roast Beef of Old Inspection Can Be Sold Without Interference. Most Other Canned Meats Packed by Reputable Houses Are Safe Under State and National Laws.

The following letter was recently received by one of our contemporaries:

"We have Libby's, Armour's 'Veribest' and Rex canned and roast beef inspected under act of 1891.

"Curtice's Blue Label, Van Camp's, Richardson & Robbins' canned boned turkey and chicken, inspected under Act 1891. Libby's, Armour's, Bishop's, Rex potted meats of various kinds, inspected under act of 1901. No reference on any of the labels to the Pure Food Laws or guarantee that they comply therewith. If we have given you sufficient data kindly advise what is the probability of these goods complying with the Pure Food Laws, and we shall be greatly obliged."

"N. B.—Is there any question as to the standing of baked beans and soups?"

In reply our contemporary says:

"Canned corned and roast beef packed by any of the standard packers is safe no matter when sold. No new labels are necessary and the fact that they are marked 'Inspected under the Act of 1891' instead of under the Act of 1906 makes no difference. All brands of canned boned turkey and chicken enumerated above comply with the law no matter what the wording on the label.

"Potted and deviled meats occupy a different position. Many of these are improperly labeled and subject to confiscation by the Federal Government. The potted and deviled meats sent out this year are properly labeled in most instances, but the older packs are unsafe to handle. However, there is practically no danger of trouble with the National Government for several months, as the inspectors have their hands full in the East just at present. Questionable goods, however, should be sold off before January 1, as the State officials then will begin an active campaign. All of the potted chicken on merchants' shelves, as far as can be learned, contains pork and should be disposed of before January 1. This refers to all brands which were put up before January 1 of this year and which do not bear the serial number and inspection on the label guaranteeing it under the Food Law of June 30, 1906.

"Nothing has yet been done regarding baked beans. It still is before the departments at Washington and until a decision is rendered there need be no fear in selling any [illegible] brand.

"State officials in the East claim to have found dangerous preservatives in a well-known barnd of canned soups and it is possible that there will be trouble here after the first of the year, but no notices have been sent out so far covering these goods.

"Where goods of any kind are mislabeled only and the contents of the can fit for food there is no necessity for sacrificing the goods. Here is the Government ruling covering this point:

"'Any person has a right to use a label which is not false or deceptive in any particular, even though this result is arrived at through the use of stickers, erasures, [illegible] means. Attention, however, is directed to the fact that misleading and deceptive statements must be obliterated. In other words, it is not sufficient, in the opinion of the Board, that a deceptive statment should be allowed to remain on one portion of the label with a corrective statement upon another portion of the label. This principle of correction will be waived until further notice in case of decorated sardine tins which were printed and manufactured prior to January 1, 1907. In these cases the corrections may all be made in one label and attached securely to one side of the package.'"

WANT BEER PROFITS.

Grocers Insist That They Will Not Handle Goods That Do Not Pay a Profit.

If the grocers will not handle beers that will not pay a profit, all bottlers will see to it that no one is allowed to sell their beer for 10c.

When a grocer sells a beer that the bottler allows to be sold for 10c, he is helping to destroy his profits, if he asks only 10c and he is helping advertise his competitors who sell for 10c, if he asks two for 25c.

The retail grocer OWES it to the men who protect the retail selling price of their beers to handle ONLY PROTECTED BEERS if they can.

Those who think they must keep the 10c beers in stock should boost the protected beers.

The following beers will not be supplied to dealers who sell them for 10c. Help your friends.

RAINIER.
TACOMA.
OLYMPIA.

We give herewith the opinions of a number of well-known grocers:

John W. King—"I have thrown out all beers that are allowed to be sold at 10c from my three stores. The grocer who sells 10c beer is foolish since there is more profit in a two for 25c beer at $1.00 than in a 10c beer at 75c."

Geo. B. Doyle—"I did not handle any Olympia beer till they protected the price. Then I put in a stock and have thrown out all 10c beers."

Connolly Bros.—"We will sell no beers that our competitors can sell for 10c. I would be glad to put in a local beer if the profit were assured."

Schmidt & Trask—"We sell only Rainier, Tacoma and Olympia beers. We do not propose to handle any beer that can be sold for 10c. It upsets our trade on two for 25c beer on which we get fair profit."

H. Holiman & Co.—"The grocer who sells beer for less than two for 25c at the present cost is doing himself a great injustice. If enough of the trade insist on refusing to handle beers that can be sold for 10c, the bottlers will be glad to give them this protection."

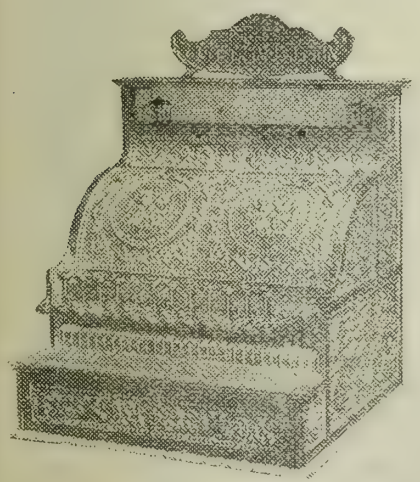
James S. Irvine of Irvine Bros.—"I am putting out all 10c beers."

Gus. F. Lehrke—"I will sell none but protected beers. If I can't get a profit I don't see why I should handle the goods."

James Courtney—"I will sell nothing but two for 25c."

E. I. Flieger—"I sell all beer two for 25c."

Anderson & Meyer—"When we can, we sell the two for 25c beer. Men who do not get a fair profit cannot continue in business."



Arnold Bros.—"We carry nothing but Rainier, Tacoma and Olympia beer. We would not think of putting in a beer that can be sold for 10c."

Chas. Barner—"There is a heavy demand for 10c beers in this district. We push the two for 25c beers when we can, but our sales of the protected beers have fallen off. It is too bad the local dealers will not give the local dealers protection, too."

Stelling Bros.—"We will not sell any beers for less than two for 25c."

Wm. Spreen—"We sell only two for 25c beers and our customers are satisfied."

W. & H. Hohn—"Our beer trade is constantly increasing and we sell only Rainier, Tacoma and Olympia beers.

Carl A. Hubrich—"I will not handle any beer that the bottler does not protect, so that I can get a profit on it."

J. C. Gaffney, 575 Fillmore—"I will do all in my power to advance the sale of Tacoma, Olympia and Rainier beer. I will not handle any beers that are not protected."

Dehay Bros., 3189 16th St.—"I have cut out all beer that has not protected the price."

N. Preugschat, 600 Fillmore—"I have thrown out all local beer, as I cannot afford to sell my goods without a profit."

A. Watkins, 801 Turk St.—"I will handle only beer that has a protected price."

J. M. Meyers, Turk and Franklin Sts.—"I cannot afford to give beer shelf room unless I can make a profit. I have thrown out all local beers."

A. Zeitich, Union and Buchanan Sts.—"I have decided to throw out all local beer as the profit does not justify me in giving it shelf room."

H. Wolking, 415 Haight St.—"I am handling only protected beers."

H. Schwaderer—"I will not sell any 10c beers at all. I think I am entitled to a fair profit and the bottler ought to help me get it."

John F. Schomer—"I am pushing nothing but two for 25c beer."

A. Hubert—"I sell Tacoma, Rainier and Olympia beer for two for 25c. I have been selling Enterprise for 10c, but I will stop it as soon as my present stock runs out."

Klute & Sturken—"We sell Rainier and Olympia beers at two for 25c. We keep 10c beers in stock, but sell it only when the customer insists on it."

Meisel & Starke—"We will not sell any beer for less than two for 25c."

A. Trefz—"I get two for 25c and will not sell for less."

Bauer & Fox—"We sell all beers at two for 25c, except the Sunset and we don't sell any of that if we can avoid it."

Peters Bros.—"We handle no 10c beers. Our trade takes Olympia, Rainier and Tacoma.

E. Ploeger—"I get two for 25c for all beers. I sell Olympia, Tacoma, Rainier and Frederickburg, but I can throw any of them out."

H. Schacht—"I sell only Bellingham Bay beer and two for 25c for it."

T. Schomaker—"I sell Tacoma, Rainier and Tacoma at the two for 25c price."

Richard Bottcher—"We will push the sale of the protected beer. Grocers should refuse to handle the 10c beers whenever they can."

Boyd Bros.—"We sell Tacoma, Rainier, Olympia and Yosemite, but will throw out the Yosemite and only handle the two for 25c."

Brock & Co.—"We only handle Rainier, Olympia and Tacoma and sell them two for 25c."

Arnold & Lennon—"We sell all beers at two for 25c. We will not handle bottled beer that is allowed to be sold for 10c."

William Barner—"We sell all beers two for 25c."

A GREAT SUCCESS.

Boston Club Theatre Party at Alcazar Proves Highly Profitable.

Grocers and Their Friends Gather in Force.

Success beyond their fondest hopes attended the Boston Club's theatre party at the New Alcazar on Tuesday evening. With the exception of about 50 sats in the balcony, the entire capacity of the house was sold out, and the profits accruing to the organization were of course extremely satisfactory to the membership.

The players, enthused by such a house, gave a most excellent performance of that stirring drama, "The Heart of Maryland." Much credit was due to the various members of the company for their splendid portrayals of the various characters.

The lobby of the theatre, between the various acts, made one think that they were attending a grocers' convention. Merchants from all parts of the city were present and were very much gratified at the success of the undertaking, realizing as they did that the local organization would not be called upon for such a heavy drain on its resources when the delegates for the National Convention were selected.

The money made by this entertainment will be used for legitimate purposes and to a large extent may be considered as an advertising fund, since it will enable the delegates from California to maintain the dignity of this great state in the proper manner when they reach the Hub.

All of the boxes were filled with grocers and their friends. The Pacific Coast Syrup Co. occupied one of the large boxes on the left side of the house, and next to them Joseph A. Stulz (the grocer candidate for Public Administrator) occupied two boxes; entertaining during the evening the various candidates who are with him on the Union Labor ticket.

On the right, some of the Good Government League candidates and their friends occupied one box and in another box were Mr. Geo. B. Doyle, President of the State Grocers' Association, as well as Mr. Frank B. Connoly, Secretary of the organization just referred to, also Mr. John W. King (candidate for Supervisor on the Republican ticket) and a director of the State Grocers' Association. Mr. C. E. Pierce, the coast representative of the Egg-O-See Cereal Co., was also with the box party just named, accompanied by his charming bride. Just beyond them the "Gobblers' Roost" had a box to themselves. (The "Gobblers" is a grocers' secret society, now being organized throughout the United States, "Roosts" having been organized in Denver, Chicago, New York and Boston). Those present in the Gobblers' box were: Messrs. Henry Von Issendorf, J. F. Kelly, Ed. Martin, Frank Fuller, Rudolf Gingg, Ed. Baumberger, Fred Von Issendorf, J. R. Kelley, Ed. McElroy and Allen Roper.

Mr. Jesse Trask and party occupied two upper boxes. Upper boxes were also taken by Weill Bros., Mr. Antonio Zeitich, The American Milling Co. and Messrs. Harrison and Eddy.

Quite a number of the city salesmen of the various houses doing business with the grocers secured a block of seats in the center of the house, where they held forth in all their glory throughout the evening.

Next week we will publish a list of those firms and individuals to whom thanks are due for the splendid success of the affair.

If you ask a merchant what volume of business he is doing and he does not tell you, it is not because he does not know. Mighty few merchants are not able to tell that. But when it comes to telling what percentage of profit they are making on that volume of business, many are silent because they are not posted on it. Yet the percentage of profit is a very important item of business.

NEW FOOD REGULATIONS.

Commissioners in Six Northwestern States Enact Rulings That Cause Protest—Trade May Unite in Objection to Their Operation.

The new system of food regulations, framed jointly by the Food Commissioners of six States in the Northwest and instiuted at a recent convention in St. Paul, is causing a great deal of commotion and not a little indignation in the grocery trade. In some respects it is the opinion of the trade that the regulations are more stringent than the laws, and there is considerable talk of a united protest from the trade through the several grocery associations in the States affected, as well as possibly by concerns outside, but which have large trade connections in the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois.

Just who inspired the conference or just what power the Commissioners had to enact regulations which may prove to be more stringent than the laws themselves is not known. There is a suspicion, from the close resemblance of some provisions to those in the North Dakota law, that the Commissioner of that State had much to do with it. The resolutions did not clearly state when they should become operative, and if an effort is made to make them effective at once there will probably be a great deal of protest.

The State Food Commissioners present were: E. F. Ladd, North Dakota; J. Q. Emery, Wisconsin; E. K. Slater, Minnesota; A. H. Wheaton, South Dakota; A. H. Jones, Illinois; H. R. Wright, Iowa; Assistant Commissioners, H. E. Schunecht, Illinois, and John McCabe, Minnesota; chemists, R. Fischer, Wisconsin; J. H. Shepard, South Dakota; Julius Hortvet, Minnesota; T. J. Bryan, Illinois, and United States chemists, A. S. Mitchell, St. Paul, and A. L. Winton, of Chicago, Ill.

The session adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That no artificial color should be permitted in vanilla extract.

Resolved, That a vanilla extract, complying with the standards of United States Circular 19, and containing not less than 40 per cent of alcohol by volume, may be sold if the face label on both carton and bottle contains the following information:

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trade mark (optional).

Third, "Vanilla extract."

Fourth, percentage of alcohol by volume.

Fifth, the true name and business address of the manufacturer.

Resolved, that the terms extracts, flavor, flavoring, spirits, essence and tincture as applied to solutions used for flavoring food products are held to be synonymous, but the use of any term in lieu of the word 'extract" is deprecated as applied to flavoring solutions made from an aromatic plant or part of the plant.

Resolved, That any other flavoring extract recognized in United States Circular No. 19 and complying with the standard laid down in that circular and free from artificial color, may be sold if the face label on both bottle and carton contain the following information:

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trade-mark (optional).

Third, name of extract as recognized in Circular 19.

Fourth, percentage of alcohol by volume.

Fifth, true name and address of manufacturer.

Resolved, That the use of the alum or any other alumium compound in prepared fruits, vegetables and condiments, is injurious to health and unnecessary and should be prohibited.

Resolved, That compound jellies, jams and preserves containing glucose, cane sugar and fruit, may be sold if labeled:

First, net weight or measure.

Second, brand or trademark (optional).

Third, the name "compound" followed by the names and percentages of the ingredients and then with the word "Jelly," "Jam," or "Preserve," as the case may be, thus:

Compound.

30% Glucose 30% Currants.
20% Cane Syrup. 20% Apple.

Jelly.

Fourth, true name and business address of manufacturer.

Resolved, That in compound jellies, jams and preserves, before mentioned no starch, gelatin, gum, added acid, artificial coloring matter, artificial sweetener or preservative will be permitted.

Resolved, That catsups, conforming to the standards laid down in U. S. Circular 19, including freedom from artificial coloring matter and fillers, may be lawfully sold. After December 1, 1908, the sale of catsup containing preservatives, except those mentioned in the standards, will be contested.

Resolved, That edible oils and fats complying with the standards of the U. S. Circular 19 may be sold under the names there given. The name "Salad Oil" is not recognized as a descriptive or distinctive name for a simple oil, and its use as such is not approved. Mixtures of edible oils intended for salad purposes may be sold as "Salad Oil (a compound)," provided the names and proportionate amounts of the ingredients are plainly stated on the main label in the order of their predominance.

Example:

First, weight or measure.

Second, brand or trademark (optional).

Third, name, E. G.

Salad oil (a compound) composed of 50 per cent cottonseed oil, 30 per cent peanut oil, 20 per cent sesame oil.

Fourth, the true name and business address of the manufacturer.

Resolved, That the sale of soda fountain syrup and crushed fruits containing any preservative other than sugar will be contested after December 1, 1908.

Resolved, That the addition of color to any vinegar constitutes an adulteration whether declared on the label or not.

Resolved, That solutions of artificial substances used for flavoring and made to resemble the flavor of pineapple, strawberry, raspberry, banana, blackberry, etc., may be sold as "artificial pineapple flavor," "artificial strawberry flavor," etc., if free from artificial coloring and if the labels contain no statement or design whereby the purchaser may be misled into believing them prepared from the natural fruits and if the true extract cannot be made from the plant or part of the plant.

Resolved, That such terms as "extra quality," "first quality," etc., as applied to food products be deemed a misbranding unless the quality of the goods corresponds to the terms used.

Resolved, That the terms "double," "triple," etc., as applied to flavoring extracts be held to mean, respectively, two or three times the minimum strength required by the standard as given in United States Circular No. 19.

Resolved, further, That the term "concentrated," as applied to flavoring extracts is false and misleading.

Resolved, That solutions of coumarin and vanilla will be passed in the States here represented as properly labeled as to the name of the product, if they contain no artificial color and if labeled with the name or names of the flavoring principle or principles, together with the word "flavor," as "vanillin flavor," or "coumarin and vanillia flavor," etc., as the case may be.

Resolved, That a copy of the minutes of this meeting be submitted to the Food Commissioner of each State not here represented, with the request that he subscribe thereto in case goods so labeled would pass as properly branded in his State.

MARVELOUS PROGRESS SHOWN SINCE FIRE.

Promotion Committee Tells of Rapid Growth of San Francisco.

In its monthly bulletin of progress for October the California Promotion commmttee says:

"One year and a half has passed since San Francisco was devastated by fire. During these eighteen months progress toward complete recovery has been marvelous, and while there is not such feverish activity as marked the first 12 months, work is progressing at a rate unsurpassed in any other city except New York and Chicago. The estimated value of buildings for which permits have been asked since the fire totals the enormous sum of $100,000,000. Of this amount $30,000,000 is represented by the permits during the past six months.

"Careful estimates regarding cash expended for rehabilitation and reconstruction, show that figure to have reached the total since the fire of $136,000,000. That business has been on a sound basis is shown by the bank clearings during the eighteen months, which have amounted to a total of more than two and a half billion dollars.

"During the month considerable money has been brought to San Francisco from the interior of the state for investment. Financial conditions throughout California have been very good, owing to heavy crops and high prices, and as a result the interior has been of material assistance in building operations in the metropolis. The financial crisis in the east has had no material effect on California conditions.

"Great activity is shown in all parts of the state in electrical power development. Reports to the California Promotion Committee from all interior cities show greatly increased activity in all lines of business.

"The following summary shows California conditions for the month from September 29 to October 28, inclusive:

"San Francisco building permits, $1,841,114; San Francisco building permits since the fire, $87,147,363; Los Angeles building permits, $926,070; Oakland building permits, $648.593.75; San Diego building permits, $272,735; Sacramento building permits, $129,614; San Francisco real estate sales, 550; value, $2,000,000; San Francisco bank clearings, $189.551,793.30; San Francisco bank clearings, October, 1906, $189,906,956.05; San Francisco bank clearings, October, 1905, $169,259,519.64; Los Angeles bank clearings, $47,384,042; Oakland bank clearings, $10,759,653.23; San Jose bank clearings, $2,789,242.94; Stockton bank clearings, $2,766,733.23; San Francisco customs receipts, $616,749.71."

A GOOD CLERK.

The essentials of a good grocery clerk largely consist in his ability to do good conscientious work, both as a salesman and otherwise, and in such a manner as to retain old patronage and attract new business. A clerk of this type is not so easily secured and when found, a high rate of wage frequently has to be paid in order to retain his services.

We know of a clerk who combines all of these essentials in his make-up, but with the remarkable condition that his salary is a low one. He always appears well dressed and is prepared to do a maximum amount of labor whenever called upon to do so. We are publishing his photograph in this issue. If you will look on page 21, you will recognize our friend.

THOSE LITTLE LEAKS.

It isn't always the wholesale grocery house with the appearance of greatest activity that makes the most money. On the contrary, there are many of the larger houses of the country which come out at the end of the year with very narrow margins and their managers stand astonished at the showing and wonder how it all happened. As a rule they reach the conclusion that it all came to pass because they failed to keep close watch on the little leaks.

The little leaks in the wholesale grocery business have increased immensely within recent years and in most cases all unsuspected. When it is remembered that the average wholesaler does business on an average of 10 per cent margin, it is easy to eat into the profits. A well known local jobber discovered a leak the other day which astonished him. Ever since he first learned the business it has been customary to figure carting on most lines of goods at 2 cents per case. That's the way he figured it till one day when he had to hire an outside teamster to haul an invoice of canned goods from one of the docks.

The teamster, it happened, had difficulty in finding the exact goods he was after and considerable delay ensued. Then he got into a blockade on West street and more delay followed. But finally he loaded the 150 cases called for and hauled them to the store. Under the old rule the cost of hauling would have been figured at $3, yet the jobber received the following bill a few days afterward:

Smith & Jones, to Jack Robinson, teamster. Dr. 100 cases canned peaches to store $3 00; 50 cases canned peaches to store $1 50; Two hour's delay on trip, etc., $2.00. Total, $6.50.

In other words, the hauling alone had cost him more than double what he has been calculating for years. And in the case of his own teams he suspects he has been done even worse than that.

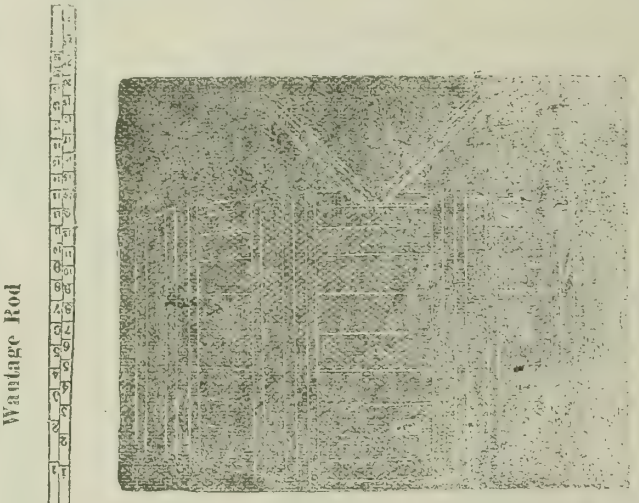
Now comes an American firm who make paper milk bottles. These being cheap, are used only once, and all danger from the use of unclean containers is thus eliminated. To prevent the milk from leaking out of the bottle, the paper is thoroughly impregnated with paraffine. The lid a paraffined cardboard, makes a hermetic closure with the paraffine on the bottle, thus preventing ingress of bacteria from the air. The ordinary glass bottles, with card covers, are rarely sufficiently well closed to prevent bacterial contamination from the air.

Lakeport, Cal.:—E. P. Sailor has purchased the mercantile business of Morrison, Howe & Co., at Upper Lake, with a full stock of general merchandise. David Williams, one of the members of the old firm, returned from Upper Lake this morning, after helping make an invoice of the stock.

Get the Habit
It Will Pay

Exactly 117 sets of gauging rods have been delivered by the "Advocate" to its readers who thereby have absolute protection against being charged with 52 gallons of vinegar, molasses, oil or other liquid commodity when the barrel will not hold 48 gallons or is not full.

Gauging rods will tell any one in a minute if the capacity of the barrel is correct and how many gallons are missing if it is not full. There is no other way to ascertain whether you are getting what you are paying for.



To be sure you are getting your money's worth, get a set or two; they'll earn their cost of $1.45 a set delivered, many times over during the year.

There are two ways you can be "done," one by charging you for more gallons than the barrel will hold (which is an old trick) and then only partially filling the barrel, thereby "working" you for another four or five gallons.

We will deliver the gauge rods to you at your store at these prices, cash in advance, money to be in draft, postoffice or express order:

1	Gauge	and	1	Wantage	Rod	$1.45
2	"	"	2	"	"	$2.80
3	"	"	3	"	"	$4.20

Cuts in this advertisement show both the gauge and wantage rods, while the cut of the barrel shows how the gauging is done. Complete directions for using will be mailed free with each set.

Get a set of gauge and wantage sticks, then you'll know to a certainty when you buy what you get for your money.

My Dear Mr. Eddy:-

I am in receipt of your letter of September 25th and also several copies of your magnificent magazine. As I remarked a few days ago to a friend, it demonstrates the fact that the California boys are wide awake and up-to-date. Your magazine as well as the matter it contains is a credit to any association, and I am glad to see that the manufacturers are co-operating with the retailers, and assisting them to continue in business, for the road to success of the retailer is a rough one, and with such able bodied men as I see connected with your Association we can not look forward to anything but success.

Thanking you for copies of the Advocate, I remain,

Respectfully,

(Signed) C. J. KRAMER,

Lakeport, Cal.—E. P. Sailor has bought the general merchandise store of Morrison & Howe in Upper Lake, and is now in active charge of the business. Ed. Sailor made a reputation for himself in Lakeport as a straight forward square dealing merchant while he was in business here, and he deserves the patronage of the Upper Lake people.

Jamestown, Cal.—The grocery business of C. A. Thompson, Jamestown, has been sold to parties below, doing business under the title of the Sierra Mercantile Company. C. N. Corwin, a member of the firm, reached Jamestown October 2d, and took charge of the business. Mrs. Corwin came up from Stockton two days later.

Chico, Cal.—Clarence Musselman the junction grocer has found himself so cramped for room to transact his growing business that he is now constructing an addition to his store which when completed will give a floor space of 200 by 21 feet and he will also have a basement underneath the entire length.

BEER PROFITS FIXED.

Rights of Retailers Recognized by the Various Bottlers.

A margin of 33 1-3 per cent on beer is now assured the grocery trade.

This has come through the efforts of the Associated Retail Grocers.

The organization convinced the bottlers that they could not afford to pay $1.00 for beer and sell it for 10c. They asked that one of two things be done; either the retail selling price be fixed at two for 25c or that the cost be fixed at not more than 90c.

The bottlers of Olympia, Tacoma and Rainier beers put a two for 25c price on their beer. Many grocers at once threw out the 10c beers.

Many grocers while asking for the two for 25c price for the protected beers sold 10c beers also.

The bottlers of Rainier and Tacoma beer found their sales falling off in many districts. They therefore decided to reduce the cost of their beer to 90c per dozen, so that the grocers could sell it for 10c and still make a profit.

This was not till Thursday of this week.

The bottlers of Olympia beer first sent word to the Associated Retail Grocers. They were assured that the grocers appreciated their endeavors to keep up the price and profits on beer and that they would not be expected to continue a policy that would occasion them a serious loss of business. So on Saturday they also reduced the price of beer to 90c per dozen.

The grocers would have gone without profits forever, if they had not made an organized effort for recognition of their rights.

Selling Prices of Goods That Guarantee a Profit to the Dealer.

NOTE—The selling prices of the goods listed below have been guaranteed by the various manufacturers. When a grocer knows of a cut being made, he should at once notify FRANK B. Attracting Trade.

DOES IT PAY?

A hardware magazine in the East has been asking country hardwaremen if, in their opinion, window dressing pays in small towns. Out of twenty-six, three answered in the negative and the rest thought it did. A majority rules and we think that this time at least the majority was overwhelmingly right and the minority was wrong.

It is easy to say and reiterate that advertising pays, and that window decoration pays, and that cleanliness pays, and that a host of other things pay the merchant who does them; but that is not sufficient. While many of our merchants are not from Missouri, still most of them have acquired the slogan of that State—"show me." If window dressing pays in the small towns for the small merchants, prove it, they say.

Positive proof can be obtained only by experimenting. But we can give some reasons why we believe that the smallest store in the smallest town may make his small windows assist in disposing of his goods profitably and quickly.

The window is not solely for the purpose of admitting light. Nor is it constructed only with reference to looking out. One can look in, as well. Display is recognized as an indispensible part of merchandising everywhere and by everybody. A neat display of goods in a window is as sure of being seen as if it were arranged on the sidewalk. It is not necessary to disturb the display, and this makes it the more valuable. People like neatness and beauty, and they are quick to notice it.

Say the window is composed of small panes of glass; that makes it more difficult to make elaborate displays, but it does not shut the door on decoration and display by any means.

The window display that does not pay is the one which is not well done or is neglected. A dirty window display is worse than none. We believe that the window display of the small store is more of a sign of the trade than the lettering over the door. A man does not go along the middle of the street, stretching his neck to see where the grocery is. He walks on the sidewalk and looks in at the windows. He does not go into the one where cobwebs and dust hang in festoons over a few aged cans—unless he has no choice.

How to display in a small town is a study which is too long to be treated in full here. But a few primary principles may be laid down for the guidance of the man who wants to try and doesn't know how. First, it is a good thing to remember that a good display is nearly always a simple one. Do not jam the window full of goods; there are other displays to come, so it is a good idea to confine each display to a certain class of goods. Second, keep the windows clean. This is vital. The goods and the windows should be spotless, if you desire to have a spotless reputation for the store. Third, change the display. We think once a week is enough for any small town store. Some change every two weeks and some wait for a month.

People soon learn that you change your windows every so often, and they will be on the lookout for the change. Simplicity, cleanliness and change are the three many requisities.

Window displays are the cheapest and the most profitable advertising you can get. They increase sales daily. While the country town merchant has not the time to devote to elaborate displays and can hardly expect to get such artistic trimmings as the professional in the great show windows of the city stores, still he has an advantage that his people are not so hurried, nor so surfeited with displays ,and that they take more personal interest in his efforts than those who populate the great cities.

Don't worry; eat three square meals a day; say your prayers; be courteous to your creditors; exercise; go slow and go easy. Maybe there are other things that your special case requires to make you happy, but, my friend, these I reckon will give you a good lift.—Abraham Lincoln.

CRACKER PACKAGES MUST STATE WEIGHT.

New Nebraska Pure Food Law Causes Scarcity of Goods Which Comply—Dakota Baker Says He Gives Net Weights.

The new Nebraska Pure Food Law, said to be the most stringent of any of the State laws in its requirements, is causing the merchants, manufacturers and jobbers much worry outside of forbidding the giving of premiums. The section requiring net weights of package goods to be stated on the labels is causing much uneasiness, the handling of crackers in packages being particularly affected.

Press advices say that the National Biscuit Company, as the largest manufacturer of package crackers, is seriously objecting to the ruling of Deputy Food Commissioner Johnson regarding net weights, and it is said that the cracker company contemplates contesting the legality of the ruling.

Retailers throughout the State have been warned of the danger and told of the difficulty of obtaining safe goods in the following communication from Secretary Avery of the Association:

"I understand that it has been almost impossible for the merchants of Nebraska to secure package crackers that will comply with the laws of our State. Deputy Commissioner Johnson has made a ruling that a guarantee from a wholesaler or manufacturer covering the stamping of the net weight on the package does not release the retailer from liability under the law, but that the weight must be stamped on the package. He says that a guarantee covering the purity of the goods contained in the package will release the retailer from liability only so far as the quality of the goods is concerned, but don't release them from a penalty if the net weight is not stamped on the package.

"I would advise every merchant in the State to handle only crackers that have the weight stamped on the package, as that is the only safe way to avoid arrest and fine for violation of the Pure Food Law in regard to these goods." Yours respectfully,

W. H. AVERY, Secretary.

Tilden, Neb., October 8.

Since publicity has been given the ruling [illegible] manufacturers who have been catering to North Dakota trade where there are the same requirements as in Nebraska, have been making inroads on the business of the cracker men who are trying to sell crackers in Nebraska contrary to the ruling of the commissioner.

In a letter to a Nebraska retailer a [illegible] which has been published in the trade press of that State, a manufacturer in South Dakota offers to supply the goods properly labeled.

The trade in the State are now wondering if the old companies will comply with the law or if the retailer will turn his business to other houses who are willing to comply with the law.

Following up this crusade against short-weight goods, Commissioner Johnson made an investigation of the methods of packing houses in his jurisdiction, and found that it has been the custom of the packers to put up bacon, hams, shoulders, etc., in packages, which were composed of a large amount of cloth and paper, and that the goods were billed out at gross weight, with no allowance for the wrappers.

This, Commissioner Johnson holds, is a clear violation of the law, and he has issued the edict that in the future all meat packages must be stamped with the net weight of the contents.

Clerk's Corner.

ENCOURAGE THE CLERKS.

How Merchants Can Stimulate Trade and Help His Men.

"The clerks will be as a rule what their employers make them," said a well-known grocer to "The Inland Grocer." "We keep an account here with every saleman to show the sales made by him, and another account showing what department of the trade he has given more assistance to. It works out well, encouraging competition among the clerks and among the departments.

"On Mondays, when not much is doing, we have special sales, the object of which is to familiarize our customers with special lines of goods. One week we had a special sale of woodenware, including clothes-lines, wash-boards, tubs, brooms and brushes. Every assistant was expected to call the attention of the customers to the woodenware department.

"The order clerk on his route and delivery man on his rounds was encouraged to talk woodenware, and the sales, the first day we tried it, were astonishing. A very large percentage of customers who would not have thought of their need of something in that line, on its being suggested to them would think of some item of which they were in need and give us an order. We kept a record of sales made and gave each assistant credit for his work.

"In a subsequent week we had a sale of farinaceous goods, beans, rice, hominy, grits, cornmeal and so on. They sold in increased volume.

"The next week we tried California canned fruits. For this we opened a few cans and gave customers visiting the store a chance to see and taste them. We took orders for them by the dozen instead of by the can, as had been the rule.

"We showed, on another Monday, canned vegetables—little string beans the size of a toothpick and just the thing for garnishing; petits pois and Maine corn—giving people an idea, as many of them never before had, of the variety and delicacy of dozens of items obtainable in cans.

"It was the best advertising we ever did and put the clerks on their mettle. They found that they could develop sales in any line if they once made the effort, and, knowing that we were crediting them with every sale they made the effort.

"We never let a week pass, nowadays, unless it is the holiday week, without a Monday sale, and we are training up the best lot of clerks we ever had.

"The thing to do is to let the clerks know what the goods are and to encourage them to pass the information along to customers. Both need to be informed, and there is no suggestion as good as the personal word."

PROSECUTIONS NOT TO BE MADE PUBLIC.

It is announced from Washington that the Board of Food and Drug Inspection has definitely decided not to make known the names and details of any cases which are certified to the Department of Justice for prosecution under the law. The ground for this decision is found in the section of the act which provides for private hearings preliminary to the certifications of the cases to the Department of Justice for prosecution, and in that section which specifies that publication of the cases shall occur when a conviction has been secured. These sections apparently have in mind the withholding of information concerning prosecutions to the fullest extent compatible with the enforcement of the law, in view of the possible innocence of the persons prosecuted and the danger that their business would suffer from the mere publicity given to the fact of prosecution irrespective of the decision of the court.

When decision have been secured in given cases, it is expected that the Board will publish the results in the food inspection decisions. Meanwhile, the Department of Justice will do as it pleases about giving out the fact that cases have been certified to, but will probably not make known anything of importance with reference to the cases until prosecutions have been actually started, and even then will only state the name of the parties against whom proceedings have been instituted.

The occasion for making this decision at the present time is that the Board has reached the point where it is prepared to certify cases, and it is understood has just sent up one or more to the officials in the Department of Justice. With reference to these it would under other conditions have made a public statement.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW ALCAZAR THEATRE.

Thus far this week, "The Heart of Maryland" has scored one of the biggest successes in both a financial and artistic way, since the New Alcazar opened to the public. It is indeed a superb production, and while it is true that the play has been seen in San Francisco, a number of times, nevertheless, the performance now being given should not be passed by. The work of Ernest Glendinning, after he has been shot by the setnry, is worthy of particular mention. Next week (unless the demand for the continuance of the present play becomes too strong) Wm. Collier's comedy success, "The Dictator," will be the bill.

COLONIAL.

This house presents "Captain Swift," beginning with next Sunday matinee with Miss Rujaero and her capable stock company.

PRINCESS.

Once again we have a house devoted exclusively to comic opera. The management of the Princess is entitled to great credit for having given us an opportunity to once more enjoy the pleasure of hearing a good comic opera without having to pay high prices or go across the bay to listen to the Tivoli company now playing at Idora Park. The balance of this week and until further notice, the romantic comic opera, "The Mocking Bird," with an Eastern company and a big singing chorus and lots of pretty girls, makes the bill at the Princess.

NOVELTY.

Beginning with next Sunday matinee West's big Jubilee Minstrels opens for a week's engagement.

CENTRAL.

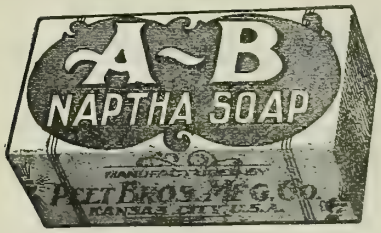
"The Cowboy and the Squaw" has attracted good houses throughout the current week. Similarity in names existing between this play and the one now being played at the Van Ness have resulted in larger houses than ordinarily. Next week, beginning Monday night, the picturesque melodrama, "The Outlaw's Christmas," will be the bill.

CHUTES.

"Fighting the Flames" is attracting a heavy patronage to this popular place of amusement. The new vaudeville show with Darrell Vinton & Co., Josephine Morrissey and others, together with motion pictures, are also doing their share to attract pleasure seekers.

COLISEUM.

The match races between Davidson & Stoutenberg, given under the sanction of the Western Skating Association, begin tonight, November 1st, with a one mile scratch. On Tuesday evening, November 5th, another one mile scratch, paced by motor cycle will be raced Another feature of this particular evening will be the election returns. On Friday evening, November 8th, a two-mile scratch will be raced.



VAN NESS.

Beginning next Sunday night the stirring racing play, "Checkers" is the bill for the ensuing week.

Harrisburg ,Pa.—Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust has sent to Professor Frear, of State College, one of the leading pure food experts of the country, samples of seventy-five brands of breakfast and other patent foods for analysis.

These samples were taken as a result of an agitation to know what was in them., which began some time ago, The samples were secured all over the State, every brand known having been taken, and Professor Frear will ascertain if they are true to name, if chemicals have been used, whether they are bleached and what they contain.

This is one of the most important works undertaken by Mr. Foust, and will clear up questions which are of long standing. The charge was recently made to the Department that corn stalks are used in some of the patent foods.

N. B.—The local situation with regard to finances is quite interesting just at this writing. There is no reason to suppose that our banks are in any way liable to fail and the steps taken by the Governor of the State will tend to restore the balance of things within a short time. We earnestly advise our readers to keep cool and not worry over the conditions, since they are necessarily only temporary. One of our contemporaries among the dailies has the following to say of the situation:

The financial squeeze in New York, due to speculative banking in that city, is about ended. The gamblers have had their lesson and the claims of legitimate banking wil lnow have recognition. The trouble has at all times been purely local to New York, except in so far as interior bankers use that center as a sort of clearing house and a basis for sale of exchange. Any difficulty that may have appeared outside of New York has been due to the fact that New York bankers have been forced to hold a tight hand on their available resources and are for the moment liquidating drafts from interior correspondents with clearing house certificates. These certificates rest on the best collateral security in the shape of gilt edge bonds and bear interest. It is a temporary expedient that gives elasticity to the money market by providing what is virtually a new and supplementary form of currency.

In the meantime and to supply the actual scarcity of coin to meet the demands of commerce some $20,000,000 in gold is on the way from Europe to pay off in part the great credit balance which the old world owes the ney for wheat, cotton, tobacco, oil and the other staples. This country can always force Europe to give up gold in vast quantities when there is need. In the last resort the whole monetary system of any country rests on its productive capacity. A disturbance of the financial equilibrium very quickly rights itself in a country of our immense resources.

San Francisco is les dependent on New York than most other cities. For one thing, our bankers have always been more than commonly conservative and careful in their methods. A certain correspondence with the national financial center is, of course, a necessity for purposes of exchange, but the comparative isolation of San Francisco has compelled local bankers to make it their practice to hold much larger reserves in coin and currency than has been customary in Eastern cities. There are few banks in San Francisco that cannot show a reserve of coin on hand at least 10 per cent greater in proportion to the deposits than is the practice in Eastern cities. In fact, as the returns of the clearing house show, this city has always been and will continue to be the financial center of the Pacific Coast, holding very much the same relation to interior cities that New York does in the East, with this difference that banking is done here on legitimate lines to facilitate commerce and not to promote gambling, as in New York. The San Francisco banks because Califoarnia is prosperous and the farmers and the fruit growers and the oil producers have been making money this year hand over fist. On these and on the products of the mines and forests and fisheries the financial system of California depends. When they are doing well the money comes, because it must. There may be a monetary stringency, but it wil vanish as quickly and as suddenly as it came. There was no cause for it, except that certain New York bankers had been misbehaving. The general productive capacity of the country and its consequent ability to draw funds from abroad will speedily put the ship of commerce once more on an even keel.

SUGAR

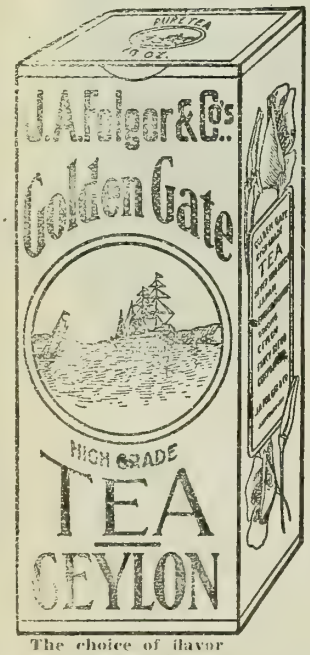
The local market has shown no change since our last report:

New York, Oct. 24.—Willett & Gray report:

The week—Raws: Unchanged. Refined: Unchanged. Net cash quotations this date are: Molasses, $3.00; Centrifugals, $3.90; Granulated, $4.65.

Raws—There has been no change in quotations during the week under review.

The last reports by cable to us from the European beet crop are of continued favorable weather, and from the Cuba crop that there is an improvement in general conditions, except that the western sections of the Island are still in need of more rain to benefit the crop.



From Louisiana the full crop movement is delayed for a week or more to give the cane, which was found to be in a rather green condition, an opportunity to crystallize further.

We should also make a note of the extremely unsettled condition and panicy conditions of the Wall Street stock and money markets, which have scarcely been as severely felt since the famous "Black Friday" of Jay Gould's time, and which, at this writing, show no signs of abatement. Naturally, attention is largely directed to these conditions to the exclusion of regular business in all branches of trade, for the time being.

The immediate outlook is for a steady sugar market, with light offerings both from store and from the small balances still remaining unsold in cane-producing countries, while beet sugars are still out of reach by reason of their higher parity of $3.93 for 96 degrees test.

Refined—There is no change in price or conditions, the only notable feature being that all refiners are behind, to some extent, in deliveries but, at the same time, are calling upon

The choice of flavor is a matter of taste.

Teas

Is it a good business policy to push the sale of bulk teas of doubtful origin in place of teas of known quality and purity?

Folger's Golden Gate teas please consumers, pay grocers a good profit and increase tea sales. Six flavors.

contract buyers for prompt statement of requirements for shipments under their contracts. Of course, actual business is limited mainly to withdrawals under previous contracts, while new business shows no particular improvement.

This latter feature may be because of the fact that domestic refined beet sugar production is now under full headway in all parts of the West, and sales from this source meet the requirements of those sections of the country to a large extent.

It is notable that domestic beet sugars are being sold now at the highest relative basis maintained for a year past and, consequently, results to the beet sugar industries of the country promise to be unusually favorable for the present campaign.

Contracts for cane refined can be renewed with confidence at the present level for some time to come. It does not look as if the maturing cane crops of the country would exert as much influence on prices this season as in former years, but that the crop of Louisiana will be able to be marketed at full up values.

World's Production and Consumption.—The new cane and beet sugar crops of the world give [illegible] good yield, although estimated to outturn possibly 315,946 tons less than those of last season. In the 1906-07 campaign the production was in tons: Cane, 7,361,936; European Beet, 6,717,000, and American Beet, 433,010; total, 14,511,946 tons. While for the new season (1907-08) the estimates are: Cane, 7,196,000; European Beet, 6,580,000, and American Beet, 420,000; total, 14,196,000 tons.

The consumption last campaign was about normal and the production a very full one, yet the stock in principal countries on September 1st was reduced from 1,403,701 tons in 1906 to 1,264,318 tons in 1907.

If the estimated reduction in new crops proves to be approximately correct, it may be expected that stocks next September will show a further decrease, unless the consumption is checked by higher prices.

DRIED FRUIT.

The general tone of the market is about the same as it has been for several weeks. The financial conditions necessarily have disturbed transactions and very little business is passing at this moment.

RAISINS.

The market in this line is rather weak, being the result of car shortages, which may prevent these goods reaching the Eastern markets in time for holiday sales. This would mean that large quantities of the fruit will be held over and the price necessarily weakened. The local supplies of seeded goods are quite scarce, but it is presumed that this condition will be remedied within a few days.

PRUNES.

Quotations in this line differ with the house making the price. The general conclusion appears to be that prices will become stronger as the season passes.

Salem, Ore., Oct. 25.—Clinton J. Kurtz reports:

"The dried prune situation is in excellent condition. Prunes are practically all in packers hands and there is no fear of any drop in the market. There is frequently rumors of weaker market conditions, but there are not enough prunes unsold to substantiate such reports. Oregon prunes are of good quality and there was a good crop harvested."

ALMONDS.

The market on almonds has materially declined and is extremely weak. There is no good reason why this should be so, but nevertheless the condition exists.

WALNUTS.

Walnuts are well cleaned out of first hands, jobbers now controling the supply and naming prices accordingly.

CANNED GOODS.

"California Fruit Grower" says:

"Some sales of California tomatoes have been made recently ranging from 82½@83½c net. The quantity and character of clouds in the sky or their absence, each day, varies the ideas of those who have any goods to sell. Offerings are very few indeed. While some press reports have stated that the pack of tomatoes in California this year would be as large as last, we can not see at this time how it is possible. Eastern mail advices report the tomato market there in the neighborhood of 87½c for standard Maryland 3s. The guesers are putting the pack of Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey for this vegetable this year at 9,000,000 to 10,000,000 cases so far as the more conservative estimates are concerned.

"Business is much limited through the scarcity of goods, and at the same time jobbers in some quarters are fearing a curtailment in the consumption of food staples owing to the high prices that have been prevailing, and this feature is causing a slight uneasiness. Goods, however, are much more scarce than business at this time."

BEANS.

The market in this line continues firm and strong, though it is said that the shortage in the crop has been largely over estimated. It would appear as though it was a good time to buy.

IMPORTED FISH.

New York, Oct 24.—Strohmeyer & Arpe Company report:

Holland Herrings—Market is unchanged, easy, with fair demand.

Scotch Herrings—In good supply, prices unchanged. Large Fulls are getting scarce.

Norway Herrings—Have arrived. Show exceptional fine quality and are very cheap. Likely to go higher.

Irish Mackerel—Scarce and in good demand and high.

Norway Mackerel—Are in scant supply; catch about one-half of last year. Prices are very high, nevertheless, in good demand. Buyers will do well to supply their wants now if they want any Norway Mackerel this season. Quality is exceptionally fine, white and fat.

Dutch Bellysplit Mackerel—A few Bloaters have arrived, showing very fine quality, and goods find ready buyers.

Imported Oil Sardines—No change in the situation except slightly for the worse. There is no catch in France nor in Portugal nor in Norway. Market is almost entirely bare of French Sardines. Gradually the best brands of Smoked Sardines are being sold out for the season.

MACKEREL.

Norway's continue to advance. Large sizes almost unobtainable.

CHEESE.

Limburger, Brick and Domestic Swiss prices have all advanced very materially. Martin's continues firm.

HAY.

Somers & Co. report under date of Oct. 29.

Arrivals of Hay continue very moderate in quantity and on a very even basis. Rail arrivals show about 25 per cent increase over last week with water shipments a decrease of the same proportion. The car situation is far from being satisfactory, however, for very little good grade Hay can be marketed by water and most dealers have stocks of the better grades at interior points, which they are unable to deliver to their rather insistent customers.

To report the general condition of trade here would be simply to repeat our record of conditions during the past two or three weeks. We are experiencing the regular reaction in the Hay trade that is always experienced shortly after the harvest rush. Dealers seem to be making no complaint, however, and a healthy tone to the market is anticipated unless values are forced to an extremely high range through a continuance of the car scarcity.

Choice Wheat Hay is conspicuous from its absence on the market at the moment, with an occasional car selling at a premium. Medium grades of both Wheat and Wild Oats constitute the bulk of present arrivals and are treated with moderate interest only. We can report no change in prices which we give today as follows:

Choice Wheat Hay	$19.00 to $22.00
Good Wheat Hay	17.00 to 18.50
Other Grades same	12.00 to 16.00
Wheat and Oat	12.00 to 17.00
Tame Oat	11.00 to 16.50
Wild Oat	10.00 to 13.50
Stock Hay	8.00 to 9.50
Alfalfa	9.00 to 13.50
Straw, per bale	.54 to .85

SWIFT & CO'S NEW PLANT.

Portland.—Swift & Co. plan to begin the work of excavating for their mammoth packing plant on the Peninsula within the next 60 days. The main building, slaughter-house, dressing and packing departments will be a 7-story brick structure covering ground space equal to four city blocks. Its stupendous size may be realized when it is stated that there will be four acres of space on each of the seven floors or 28 acres under the one roof, a total of 1,120,000 feet.

Ding! Dong! Ring the Funeral Bell!

One delinquent said: "I'll pay you Saturday if I live"—HE'S DEAD!
Another promised: "I'll see you to-morrow"—HE'S BLIND! (Poor devil.)
Another vowed and swore: "I'll pay you this week or go to hell"—HE'S GONE!

Our mission, brother, is to catch 'em before they're DEAD, before they're BLIND, before they're GONE!

On the great clock of TIME, there is but one word—NOW! Yesterday is a dead one; to-morrow is—well, to-morrow is the land of MAYBE! We go after the dear delinquents as though TO-MORROW wasn't on the calendar!

We are sorter restless, feverish and fussy about this thing of DELAY!

Bet you ten dollars we're more anxious to get your money for you than you are yourself,—that's the way we feel about it.

You see, the minute we get your list, we get a kind 'o funny notion in our head that WE owe you this money, even though we're simply standin' between you and the man who SHOULD pay it to you.

Just drop us a card if you wish to get those old accounts closed.

We're "Waitin' at the church."
